REPORT SAYS SCUTARI HAS FALLEN

Servians Succeed Where Montenegrins Made Failure.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The London [illegible] publishes the following despatch from [illegible]:

"It is reported that the Ministry of War has received a telegram stating that Scutari has fallen to a Servian attack."

Scutari, in Albania, has a population of about 30,000 and is situated within a few miles of the Montenegrin frontier. It was the objective of the Montenegrin army, but it successfully resisted all attempts to carry it by assault, until the recent arrival of Servian troops turned the scale against the gallant defenders.

The Turkish commander of Scutari continued the fight in spite of the armistice and its capture by the allied troops will not only relieve the tension in the Montenegrin capital but will also handicap the Turkish delegates in their negotiations with the allies.

QUEEN OLGA OF GREECE, DESPITE CUSTOM, IS TO VISIT MONASTRIES

QUEEN OLGA OF GREECE

Queen Olga, of Greece, intends to take a step which may cause criticism among the leaders of the Greek Church by inspecting the twenty-three sacred monasteries on Mount Athos, where no woman has set foot for 1,300 years.

Mount Athos is eighty miles south of Salonica, now under control of the allies. The monks on the mountain side have often refused to permit women of royal families to enter the monasteries. This was because of the legend that the Virgin Mary, with the infant Christ, came to the mountain, and that no woman has been allowed to do so since.

Notified that the King and Queen of Greece intended to pay them a call, the monks summoned their council and decided that they could not oppose the request.

AVALANCHE CRASHES DOWN MOUNTAINSIDE AT FERNIE

Carpenter Shop is Demolished by a Sudden Snowslide and Five Men Are Instantly Killed; One Dies Later of Injuries, and Six Men Are Seriously Hurt – Broken Wire Warns the Rescuers

MEN WERE GIVEN NO WARNING

FERNIE, B.C., Dec. 31.—Five men were killed, one so seriously injured that he died shortly after being taken from the ruins, and six others were more or less seriously injured early yesterday morning when a snowslide struck and entirely demolished the carpenter shop of the Coal Creek mines of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., near this city. The avalanche came so quickly that every man in the building was caught, no warning sound having preceded its advent.

The electric light wire supplying light to the offices and other buildings, being in the path of the slide, gave the first warning to those outside the shop, by ceasing to do its duty, and a rush of men from all directions was soon upon the scene and rescue work began immediately. Five lifeless bodies were brought out, and one, that of a young man named Worthington, still showing signs of life, a pulmotor was used for some time vigorously, but without result. This made a total of six fatalities.

Six other men are all severely and some very seriously injured, were also recovered from their snowy coverings and are now either in the hospital at Fernie or in their homes.

The death roll is as follows: James Buckley, Fernie; Alex. Worthington, Coal Creek; D. Rosario, Fernie, D. Rosario, Fernie; D. Naslyczuk, Coal Creek; T. Kitenary, Coal Creek.

The injured: Archie Nicholson, Fernie, back injered; Percy Jones, West Fernie, injured back and pelvis, perhaps internal injuries; Fred Platt, West Fernie, foot fractured and dislocated, wound on face; Sam Cardamoni, Fernie, shoulders fractured and back injured; Tony Secrereti, Coal Creek, fractured skull; George Michel, Coal Creek, leg injured; Walter Campbell, Fernie, slightly injured.

Coroner H. A. Wilkes has impanelled a jury and an inquest will be held as soon as the Government can be heard from.

LIFE PRISONER ENDEAVORS TO BREAK FROM HIS CELL

Is Serving Life Sentence for Torturing Two Children

BOSTON, Dec. 31.—Jesse Pomeroy, whose crimes startled the country nearly forty years ago, attempted unsuccessfully to escape from the state prison at Charl[illegible]. Pomeroy is serving a life sentence for torturing two children to death when he was thirteen years old.

Pomeroy, who is 53 years of age, was sentenced to be hanged in 1874 for the brutal murder of a small girl and boy, Katie Curren and H. H. Millen in South Boston. The sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in soltary confinement by Governor Rice. The convict attempted twice before to escape. Aided by his mother, he has petitioned nearly every governor of the state for thirty years to grant him a pardon.

DAUGHTER OF FAMOUS INFIDEL IS MARRIED

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Maud, the daughter of the late famous infidel, Robert Ingersoll, was married here yesterday to Mr. Probasco, of Cincinnati. The ceremony was that of the Ethical Culture Society, approved by the laws of the State and consisted of an address on marriage responsibilities, the placing of the ring on the bride's finger and the repetition by the couple of these words, "With this ring I thee wed in love and truth for life till death us do part."

SON CLINGS TO HIS STORY INCRIMINATING HIS FATHER

Fourteen Year Old Son of Love, is Cool Under Cross-Examination---Prisoner Appears Down-hearted---Neighbors Tell of Strange Actions—Love is Committed.

FLESHERTON, Dec. 31.—Remarkable coolness was exhibited by 14-year-old Arnold Love yesterday afternoon, when he successfully underwent a searching cross examination on his story, which resulted in the commitment for trial of his father, on the charge of murdering his mother at Ceylon on Dec. 9. The boy repeated the testimony he gave at the inquest in a collected and convincing manner, and added a statement that his father had warned him that both their stories regarding the disappearance of the mother and the finding of her body in the cellar of their home must agree, and he had told untruths to reporters on that account.

W. H. Wright of Owen Sound, who is defending Henry Love, the accused, endeavored to secure an admission from the boy that the detail of his evidence was due to the suggestion of the detectives, but the lad maintained that he had told Inspector Reburn most of the story himself. He was quite sure now that he did not see his mother on the Tuesday morning before he went to school as he had at first stated. He had said that because his father had wanted him to.

The hearing last for nearly five hours. The prisoner bore a most down-hearted appearance throughout the hearing. Occassionally he leaned forward to catch the testimony of witnesses who spoke in a low tone; but for the most time he sat dejectedly with his cheek in his hand, gazing vacantly ahead of him.

Mrs. Kennedy, a neighbor, who was the first to be informed of Mrs. Love's disappearance, almost two days after the crime, told a story of Love's strange actions when he visited her home that night and she afterwards went to his house. This was a few hours before the body was found. She called his attention to the fact that the bed in a spare room had apparently been occupied, and he explained that a Salvation Army man had visited them a few days before.

Another butcher knife found in the house was placed in evidence and identified by Arnold Love as one he had seen on a window ledge near the door of the cellar on the day before his mother was missing.

Mrs. Rutledge another neighbor, testified that when she was going to bed one night a few days prior to the finding of the body she heard a terrible scream, but she was not sure what night it was. Love and his son were taken back in separate cars to Owen Sound last night, the man to jail and the boy to the children's shelter.

MEDIATION WANTED BY THE TURKS

They Think They Will Fare Better if Powers are Involved

Canadian Press Despatch

London, Dec. 31.—The worst obstacle to a successful outcome of the peace negotiations is the distrust felt by other allies for the manner Bulgari is working for her own advantage. Greece, Montenegro, Servia, all feel their interests are being sacrificed. They claim, if united, their treasuries being replenished, they will be stronger than ever. Turkey is taking advantage of their jealousies to prolong negotiations and excite the apprehension of the great powers.

Constantinople, Dec. 2.—Instructions telegraphed to the Turkish envoys in London for consideration at yesterday's session of the peace conference, and found to be undescribable, proposed the submission of all questions except the future possession of Adrianople Province to the decision of the powers. This proposal is regarded as the quickest and most practical method of settling the matter.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—After a fortnight of sparring and feinting Turkey has finally shown her hand in the peace conference. Mediation by the great powers is the Ottoman scheme for emerging from the war with the best face for the nation and for the plenipotentiaries which the situation will permit.

The Turkish delegates proposed this resolution in diplomatic guarded terms at yesterday's session. The meeting was brief and more strained than any which preceded it and the Turkish tactics were characteristice.

The delegation had received fresh instructions from the Porte, Rechad Pasha, but part of the telegram was undecipherable and must be repeated to Constantinople for translation. Then Rechad Pasha came to the point which, in the opinion of their opponents, the Ottomans had been leading up to since the beginning. He declared that he was able to state that most of the questions under discussion should be referred to the powers. The boundary between Bulgaria and Turkey was an exception, that was a matter for direct settlement between the two Governments.

The Turkish delegates then attempted to discuss the questions at issue informally, but the allies insisted that they should put their propositions in writing, which, at a conference, the Turks said they were not prepared to do.

The Turkish design in presenting counter-proposals which left an enormous gulf between them and the allies' proposals was to create a situation in which mediation would appear justifiable—even necessary.

The allies will meet at an early hour Wednesday to decide upon their policy.

Thirty Three Suicides and Five Murders

Canadian Press Despatch

There were over sixteen thousand persons arrested, or an increase of five thousand over last year.

MANY ARGUMENTS AGAINST LOCAL OPTION

As a general rule, there are two sides to every question. The pending local option question is no exception to the rule. There are two sides to it—a right side and a wrong side. Both sides cannot be right. One side is bound to be right and the other wrong. All right-minded men and women should want to get on the right side of every question, including the question of Local Option for Peterborough. Make up your mind for yourself which is the right side, and vote according to the dictates of your own conscience on January 6th, 1913

The question to be decided on the 6th of January, 1913, is not whether those who indulge in alcholic stimulants will continue that indulgence or cease from it. No thinking person will contend for a moment that anyone with an appetite for intoxicating stimulants will lose that appetite because the municipality votes for Local Option. The real question to be decided is whether those who drink something of an alcholic character shall obtain that something in a legalized Hotel in their own home City or from a law-breaking blind pigger or pocket peddler, or in some other municipality.

Make a city theoretically Local Option and its citizens practical local optionists are two different propositions.

Deprive the Hotels of Peterborough of the legal right to dispense alcholic stimulants, and you will cause to be substituted in their place five times as many blind pigs that will sell without any right

One citizen of Peterborough goes to a Hotel and buys and drinks. Another citizen goes to his own sideboard, or to his neighbor's house and takes and drinks. Where is the distinction to make one act wrong and one man a criminal, and the other act [illegible] a gentleman

---

Local Option does not promote temperance. Temperance cannot be promoted by depriving men of an opportunity to obtain beer, a mild beverage, containing less than four per cent. of alcohol and driving them to whisky.

If the advocates of Local Option are trying to do any honest thing, they are trying to stop the use of alcholic stimulants as a beverage. Some of them should begin with themselves. Any man who trys to keep someone else from doing a thing he is doing is a hypocrite.

Peterborough is admittedly just entering upon a period of unprecedented prosperity. The adoption of Local Option would arrest its onward progress.

Rigid regulation and strict control, is the only sane and sensible solution of the liquor question.

Local Option never raises the standard of morals in a community where it prevails. An immediate effect is to envelop the community in an atmosphere of hypocrisy.

It appears that some one thinks he thinks, that the abolishment of the bar-rooms in connection with the Hotels of Peterborough would give us better hotel accommodation. The suggestion is too ridiculous to dignify with a denial

The advocates of Local Option seem to think that the drinking places are responsible for the drink habit. The reverse is true. The drink habit is responsible for the drinking places. If those who drink in Peterborough will quit drinking, every hotelkeeper in the municipality might be given free licenses, and they would not continue the bar-rooms long, and many, if not all of them, would go out of the hotel business

---

The hotel-keepers of Peterborough desire licenses to supply a demand for which they are not responsible, and which Local Option does not abolish.

The man who tells you what you shall drink is just as ready to tell you what you should think

---

Many of the advocates of Local Option are sincere in their contention that it will abolish drunkenness, but some of them know that it not only is powerless as a remedy for drunkenness, but has a tendency to increase it, and still they are for it. Can you guess why? You are given just one guess.

One of the sinister results of Local Option is the danger children are subjected to in Local Option districts.

In districts where licenses prevail the vendor of liquor dare not sell to minors. If he does, he is very apt to have his license taken away from him. But in Local Option districts, the pocket peddlers and blind pig operators have no licenses to lose, and sell to a boy in knee trousers as quickly as to a man with whiskers.

There will be a public meeting at the Opera House Friday evening, Jan. 3, 1913 in opposition to Local Option for Peterborough. Come and hear the other side. Admission free. No collection. 1d59

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST
BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Company.

"Of course I can explain my work," she said in natural tones. "What I can't explain is how I happened to be so stupid as to make a mistake in writing my own name. I must have been a little nervous. Please excuse me."

"Did you really let that gawky piece of calico get ahead of you?"

She went to the board, swept off the signature with one stroke, then, without a tremor, rewrote it clearly. "My name is Comstock," she said distinctly. She turned to her seat and, following the formula used by the others, made her first high school recitation.

The face of Professor Henley was a study. As Elnora took her seat he looked at her steadily. "It puzzles me," he said deliberately, "how you can write as beautiful a demonstration and explain it as clearly as ever has been done in any of my classes and still be so disturbed as to make a mistake in your own name. Are you very sure you did that yourself, Miss Comstock?"

"It is impossible that any one else should have done it," answered Elnora steadily.

"I am very glad you think so," said the professor. "Being freshmen, all of you are strangers to me. I should hate to begin the year with you feeling there was one among you small enough to do a trick like that. The next proposition, please."

When the hour was gone the class filed back to the study room, and Elnora followed in desperation because she did not know where else to go. She could not study as she had no books, and when the class again left the room to go to another professor for the next recitation she went also. At least they could put her out if she did not belong there. Noon came at last, and she kept with the others until they dispersed on the sidewalk. She was so abnormally self conscious she fancied all the hundreds of that laughing throng saw and jested at her. When she passed the brown eyed boy walking with the girl of her encounter she knew, for she heard him say, "Did you really let that gawky piece of calico get ahead of you?" The answer was indistinct.

After noon she returned to the high school, followed some other pupils to the coatroom, hung her hat and found her way to the study where she had been in the morning. Twice that afternoon with aching head she faced strange professors in different branches. Once she escaped notice, the second time the worst happened. She was asked a question she could not answer.

"Have you not decided on your course and secured your books?" inquired the professor.

"I have decided on my course," replied Elnora; "I do not know who to ask for my books."

"Ask!" the professor was bewildered.

"I understood the books were furnished," faltered Elnora.

"Only to those bringing an order from the township trustee," replied the professor.

"No! Oh, no!" cried Elnora. "I will get them tomorrow," and gripped her desk for support, for she knew that was not true. Four books, ranging perhaps at a dollar and a half apiece! Would her mother get them? Of course she would not, could not.

Did not Elnora know the story by heart? There was enough land, but no one to do clearing and farm. Tax on all those acres, recently the new gravel road tax added, the expense of living and only the work of two women to meet all of it. She was insane to think she could come to the city to school. Her mother had been right. The girl decided that if only she lived to get home she would stay there and lead any sort of life to avoid more of this torture. Bad as what she wished to escape had been, it was nothing like this. She never could live down the movement that went through the class when she inadvertently revealed the fact that she had expected her books to be furnished. Her mother would not get them. That settled the question.

But the end of misery is never in a hurry to come, for before the day was over the superintendent entered the room and explained that pupils from the country were charged a tuition of $20 a year. That really was the end. Previously Elnora had canvassed a dozen wild plans for securing the money for books ranging all the way from offering to wash the superintendent's dishes to breaking into the bank. This additional expense made the thing so wildly impossible there was nothing to do but hold up her head until she was out of sight.

CHAPTER II.

Wherein Is Told Something of Elnora's Family History.

DOWN the long corridor alone among hundreds, down the long street alone among thousands, out into the country she came at last. She sat on a log and began to sob in spite of her efforts at self control. At first it was physical breakdown, later thought came crowding. She must go home to feed chickens, calves and pigs, wear calico and coarse shoes and pass a library with averted head all her life. She sobbed again.

"For pity's sake, honey, what's the matter?" asked the voice of the nearest neighbor, Wesley Sinton, as he seated himself by Elnora. "There, there," he continued, smearing tears all over her face in an effort to dry them. "Was it so bad as that, now? Maggie has been just about wild over you all day. She's got nervouser every minute. She said we were foolish to let you go. She said your clothes were not right and that they would laugh at you. Were your things right, Elnora?"

The girl broke into hysterical laughter. "Right!" she cried. "Right! Uncle Wesley, you should have seen me among them! I was a picture! They'll never forget me. No, they won't get the chance, for they'll see the same things tomorrow!"

"Now, that is what I call spunk, Elnora. Downright grit," said Wesley Sinton. "Don't you let them laugh you out. You've helped Margaret and me for years at harvest and busy times. What you've earned must amount to quite a sum. You can get yourself a good many clothes with it."

"Don't mention clothes, Uncle Wesley," sobbed Elnora. "I don't care now how I look. If I don't go back all of them will know it's because I am so poor I can't buy my books."

"Oh, I don't know as you are so poor," said Sinton meditatively. "There are 300 acres of good land, with fine timber as ever grew on it."

"It takes all we can earn to pay the tax, and mother wouldn't cut a tree for her life."

"Well, then, maybe I'll be compelled to cut one for her," suggested Sinton. "Anyway, stop tearing yourself to pieces and tell me. If it isn't clothes, what is it?"

"It's books and tuition. Over $20 in all."

"Humph! First time I ever knew you to be stumped by $20, Elnora," said Sinton, patting her hand.

"It's the first time you ever knew me to want money," answered Elnora. "This is different from anything that ever happened to me. Oh, how can I get it, Uncle Wesley?"

"Drive to town with me in the morning and I'll draw it from the bank for you. I owe you every cent of it."

"You know you don't owe me a penny, and I wouldn't touch one from you unless I really could earn it. For anything that's past I owe you and Aunt Margaret for all the home life and love I've ever known. I know how you work, and I'll not take your money."

"Just a loan, Elnora; just a loan for a little while until you can earn it. You can be proud with all the rest of the world, but there's no secrets between us. Is there, Elnora?"

"No," said Elnora, "there are none. You and Aunt Margaret have given me all the love there has been in my life. That is the one reason above all others why you shall not give me charity. I won't touch your money, but I'll win some way. First I'm going home and try mother. It's just possible I could find secondhand books, and perhaps all the tuition need not be paid at once. Maybe they would accept it quarterly. But, oh, Uncle Wesley, you and Aunt Margaret keep on loving me. I'm so lonely, and no one else cares."

Wesley Sinton's jaws met with a click. He swallowed hard on bitter words and changed the thing he would have said three times before it became articulate.

The Blanket Tree.

Blankets grow on trees in Ecuador, and, while the idea of an all wood fresh from the forest bed covering might give insomnia and a backache to the child of civilization who likes to snuggle comfortably under several layers of down and wool, the natives find it all right, as in fact it is.

When an Ecuador Indian wants a blanket he hunts up a demajagua tree and cuts from it a five or six foot section of the peculiarly soft, thick bark. This is dampened and beaten until the flexibility of the sheet is much increased. The rough gray exterior is next peeled off, and the sheet dried in the sun. The result is a blanket, soft, light and fairly warm, of an attractive cream color. It may be rolled into a compact bundle without hurt and with ordinary usage will last for several years.—Harper's.

A DREAM AND A CRIME.

The Story of a Slumber Vision That Comes From Cicero.

Cicero furnishes us with a tale of two Arcadians, who, traveling together, arrived at Megara, a city of Greece, between Athens and Corinth, where one of them lodged in a friend's house and the other at an inn.

After supper the person who lodged at the private house went to bed and, falling asleep, dreamed that his friend at the inn appeared to him and begged his assistance, because the innkeeper was going to kill him.

The man immediately got out of bed, much frightened at the dream; but, recovering himself and falling asleep again, his friend appeared to him a second time and desired that, as he would not assist him in time, he would at least care not to let his death go unpunished—that the innkeeper, having murdered him, had thrown his body in a cart and covered it with rubbish. He therefore begged that he would be at the city gate in the morning before the cart was out.

Struck with this new dream, he went early to the gate, saw the cart and asked the driver what was in it. The driver immediately fled. The dead body was taken out of the cart and the innkeeper apprehended and executed.

No Secret Telegraph System.

Many persons are of the opinion that the wireless system of communication is particularly subject to tapping; but, according to the Scientific American, no telegraph system is absolutely secret. Any one familiar with the Morse code can read ordinary messages entering any telegraph office. At Poldhu, on a telephone connected to a long horizontal wire, the message passing on a government telegraph line a quarter of a mile away can be distinctly read. It has been shown that it is possible to pick up at a distance, on another circuit, conversation which may be passing through a telephone or telegraph wire. On one occasion an investigator was able to interfere from a distance with the working of the ordinary telephones in Liverpool.

HE TOOK THE FEE

Moltke paid repeated visits to his nephew's villa, and it was there that a droll incident occurred under the chestnut trees of the picturesque garden. One day a stranger looking over the garden railings saw an old man, whose well worn straw hat seemed to betoken the gardener. "They say that Moltke is on a visit here. Could you tell me, sir, whether it might be possible to catch sight of him?" The old man replied that if the gentleman would come again in the course of the afternoon he might perhaps see Moltke in the garden. In his joy the stranger tendered a mark to the communicative "gardener," who promptly pocketed it. The stranger's consternation may well be imagined when on his return in the afternoon he beheld the identical old "gardener" walking arm in arm with Major von Burt. Moltke waved a greeting and with a smile called out to him, "I have still got your mark."—"German Memories."

Napoleon and Fate.

"Augereau once reproached Napoleon for not having died as a soldier should. 'What would you have?' answered the emperor. 'The bullets have spared me; fate has respected me; I respect fate. Besides, Asia has need of a man.' * * * He always said Providence was on his side, for those he had to overcome used always to attack him where he was strongest and never took advantage of the lucky chances that were in their favor. During the Egyptian campaign he was once asleep under the wall of an ancient building when a portion of it fell, without a single stone touching him. On getting up he found a stone in his hand. Examining it, he discovered a cameo of Augustus, of great beauty. 'So it goes on. Everything that might injure him only brings happy and often unexpected consequences," adds Princess Louise of Prussia in "Forty-five Years of My Life."

A Bad Egg.

"Why do you call him that?"

"When he's broke he makes the fact decidedly conspicuous."—Boston Transcript.

AN EYE FOR BUSINESS.

The Way Disraeli "Put One Over" on Publisher Colburn.

When the Hon. Mr. Ward wrote his novel "Tremaine" he was fearful of acknowledging himself the author until its fate should have been ascertained. He accordingly, the better to preserve his incognito, sent the manuscript copy by the wife of his attorney to Mr. Colburn. The work, although accepted, was not considered likely to pay extremely well, and consequently a trifling sum was given for it. Contrary, however, to Mr. Colburn's expectations, it ran to three editions.

The ingenious author of "Vivian Grey," then twenty-two years old, having heard of the circumstances, determined to use it to advantage, and accordingly, having arranged his work for publication, he proceeded to find out the honorable gentleman's fair messenger. This he quickly effected and upon a promise of giving her £20 induced her to be the bearer of his novel to the same publisher.

The woman was instantly recognized by Mr. Colburn as the same person who brought him "Tremaine," and, recollecting the great sale of that novel, he leaped at the manuscript presented to him with the utmost eagerness. It was quickly read and a handsome sum given for the copyright. A short time, however, enabled Mr. Colburn to find out his error, but too late to remedy himself. The work was not successful, and a considerable sum was lost by its publication.

Floating Farms of China.

Like the wood merchants of northern Russia, who carry their wood on great rafts to Nijni Novgorod, Kazan and Astrakhan, the farmers of the upper and central regions along the Yangtsekiang construct rafts covering as much as two acres of surface, and on the rafts they establish farms, where produce grows. On these great floating farms are habitations for the men and stables for the animals, pigpens, feed barns and storehouses well stocked with provisions. The voyage to market is often 1,000 miles, and to employ their time on the slow journey the dwellers on the rafts make baskets and many objects of household use. Arrived at their destination, they sell their produce, take apart and sell the rafts and return to their homes by the ways used by ordinary travelers.—Harper's.

Pliny's Jewel Stories.

Pliny declared that a diamond was so hard that if placed on an anvil and struck with a sledge hammer it would give back a blow of such force as to shiver both anvil and hammer to pieces. Another of his wonderful tales states that "on the shore of the island of Cyprus there was a stone lion having eyes formed of emeralds, which shone so brightly that all the fishes were ingloriously frightened away. The fishermen accordingly pulled the emeralds out and put in glass eyes instead whereupon the wise fishes became bolder and returned to their accustomed nets."

IMMORALITY UNDER LOCAL OPTION

Despite Prohibition Promises, Conditions Reveal Flagrant Evils.

One of the promises held out by the prohibitionists was that if local option was adopted, immorality would cease. The prohibitionists claimed that vice and immorality resulted from the sale of liquor, and that if licenses were abolished, there would be a model state of morality.

It is of importance to learn from the official returns whether the results promised by the advocates of prohibition have materialized.

The reports of the Provincial Bureau for the Neglected and Dependent Children of Ontario show that the contrary has been the result.

For example, local option was adopted in Owen Sound early in [illegible] 18 children were rescued by the Owen Sound Children's Aid Society from immoral or destitute conditions. Of these 18 children, four were illegitimate, three of them babies.

In 1910 the Owen Sound Police Magistrate committed 27 children to the Society. Three of them were illegitimate infants. A number of the cases of the older children were those rescued from immoral surroundings. "One of the discouraging features of our work," reported the agent of the Owen Sound Children's Aid Society, "is the prevalence of immorality among young people. The history of this year's work proves this all too sadly and fully."

Last year no less than 37 children had to be taken care of by the Owen Sound Children's Aid Society. Some were taken from extremely immoral environments. Of two other of the rescued children the Agent's report says: "Two children, a girl of about eleven and a boy of six, were taken from a home where the parents were charged with drunkenness. On a promise of sobriety for the future the children were returned to their home where they still are."

During the years to which these facts refer, there has not been a solitary license in Owen Sound. Consequently these conditions could not result from liquor, at least so far as its open and legalized sale is concerned.

When the bars were closed out, the usual sequel of prohibition resulted. Under the license system, beer was consumed to a considerable extent; and as this beverage contains only a small and harmless proportion of alcohol—not more than four per cent.—there were no evil results except on the part of those who might drink it to excess. With the incoming of local option, the regular, responsible licensees were compelled to go out of business, and their place was taken by irresponsible and often degraded "blind piggers." Operating in violation of the law, these "blind piggers" could not take chances [illegible] selling beer which is a bulky commodity to transport and which does not appeal to the taste when warm. Whiskey can be easily concealed, and a bottle contains more drinks.

This is the reason that an average of 1,500 bottles of whiskey have been going into Owen Sound every week. The same is proportionately true of Midland, Orillia, Orangeville, and other local option places. Much of this hard intoxicants goes into private homes. Other parts of the shipments are sold surreptitiously by the bottle or glass in "blind pigs." Whiskey has been sold even to children, as the police court records show.

Such conditions as these inevitably produce vice and immorality. Some of the "blind pigs" are in stores and restaurants, but others are carried on in domiciles. The moral seems to be that a far more preferable system would be to allow beer licenses. This would effectually discourage this appallingly widespread and secret consumption of whiskey, and improve the moral tone of our communities.

Latest Quotation in Grain, Diary Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—Statements that Russia had resumed the massing of troops on her southeastern frontier gave the wheat market today a brisk upturn. The close was nervous at figures varying from a shade decline to 1-2c net gain. Latest trading left corn 1-16c to 1-4c up, oats ranged from Saturday night's level to 1-2c advance, and provisions irregularly strung out from 5c down to an increased cost of 17 1-2c.

The Liverpool market closed ⅛d to ¼d lower on wheat, and ⅜d lower on corn.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Dec. 28 were 1100 cattle, 900 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 225 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 900 cattle, 850 sheep and lambs, 1150 hogs and 200 calves.

A feature of the trade was the very strong feeling which developed in the market for cattle, and prices, as compared with a week ago, show an advance of 25c to 50c per cwt. Packers were practically sold out, consequently the demand was good and a higher range of prices prevailed. Sales of full loads of good steers were made at $6.70 to $6.80, choice at $7 and mixed loads of cows, bulls and culls at $6 per cwt. There was also a good demand for packing stock at $2.75 to $3.25 per cwt.

Lambs were in good demand, owing to the limited supplies coming forward and prices advanced 25c per cwt., with a good demand for choice stock, at $7 to $7.25 per cwt. Sheep were firm under a fair demand. The demand for calves was good, of which the offerings were small and choice stock was scarce.

The tone of the market for hogs was stronger and prices, as compared with this day week, show an advance of 25c to 35c per cwt., which is due to the smaller supplies coming forward. At the higher range of prices the demand from packers was good and an active trade was done with sales of selected stock at $9 to $9.25 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

A COLD BLOODED DUEL.

Instant Death Was Assured For One of the Contestants.

An extraordinary duel, which at the time created an immense sensation, was one in which the decision was arrived at not by swords or pistols, but by means of a deadly poison.

The men—who, it is hardly necessary to say, had fallen out over a lady—had left the arrangement of details to their seconds, and until they faced each other they did not know by what method they were to settle their differences.

One of the seconds was a doctor, and he had made up for the occasion four black pellets, all identical in size and shape.

"In one of these," he said, "I have placed a sufficient quantity of prussic acid to cause the almost instantaneous death of any one who swallows it. We will decide by the toss of a coin which of you is to have first choice, and you will alternately draw and swallow a pill until the poison shows its effects."

Two of the pellets were then taken as the toss had decided, but without effect in either case.

"This time," said the doctor, speaking of the two pellets remaining, "you must both swallow the pill at the same instant."

The choice was again made, and in a few seconds one of the men lay dead on the grass.—Pall Mall Gazette.

CANARIES ARE NERVOUS.

And They Dread Mice That Like to Steal Their Bird Seed.

One of the common troubles with canaries and one that few bird owners realise is that of nervousness. The nervous system of a canary is as highly sensitive as that of a delicate woman. Any sudden shock to their senses, whether of sight or sound, is liable to throw them into convulsions, that often result in death. An old bird dealer mentions a frequent but rarely known cause of sickness and even death among the little creatures.

"I had two canaries," he said, "that for some reason I could not discover fell into a frightfully nervous state and started to pine away. I doctored them with all the remedies known to bird lore, but the poor creatures continued to droop in dismal decline. At last I discovered the trouble. It was mice.

"Mice are as fond of bird seeds as canaries themselves. In the darkness of the night the mice would creep through the bars of the cage and devour the seeds, while the poor little canaries sat above shivering themselves into a state of nervous prostration from the very terror of the monsters below. I removed the cage to a position where the mice could not get at it, and my pets rapidly recovered." —New Orleans States.

One Sin of Housekeeping.

The ultimate sin of the housekeeping code is straightening things out in a desk or on a table. When I depart from my quarters in the morning my sitting room table looks self possessed and homelike, bearing three ash trays, four or five books, matches, a pipe, a can of tobacco, papers, magazines, pencils, pens, a letter or two, a bottle of ink and maybe a necktie or so. A place for everything and everything just where it ought to be easy to reach or thereabouts. But, alas, on return what a state that table is in. The books have been put back on the shelves, the ash trays mobilized, pen and pencils arranged in orderly lines, neckties stuck away in a dresser and the letters planted in the most conspicuous place with those containing bills uppermost. —Toledo Blade.

His Income.

"They say you get 250 marks a month. I can't believe it. Tell me how."

"I get 110 marks salary; then I don't pay my rent, 40 marks; that's 150 marks; I owe the milkman 30 marks, that's 180 marks; my butcher 40 marks, 220 marks, and every month I raise 30 marks out of my friends, making an income of 250 marks a month!"—Fliegende Blatter.

Strychnine?

"Say, Maria, have you noticed how this infernal cat jumps in my lap every time I sit down to read?"

"Yes. Well, I suppose the poor thing is tired."

"Well, the next time I go to the drug store I'll get something (biff!) for that tired feline."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

An Ancient Inspiration.

Artist—Here's a cute little inspiration that I thought worthy of preservation in crayon.

Editor (after a hasty glance at the sketch)—Why, I've always supposed that little inspiration was preserved in oil.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Butterflies That Live on Fish.

The butterfly was blue and transparent. As through blue glass its tiny heart could be seen beating inside its body, and the professor read a newspaper article through its lovely blue wings. "This," he said, "is the pteropoda, a Mediterranean butterfly. It eats fish. On its tongue are rows of pointed hooks. They serve as teeth. This beautiful creature would turn up its nose at a garden of roses and lilies, but it would feast ecstatically upon a putrid eel. Now and then a pteropoda is found on the Florida or the California coast. It is only abundant, though, in the Mediterranean."

Clean Living on the Turf.

John Osborne, many years ago the world's premier jockey, is probably the most striking example in the world of clean living associated with sport. Although over 80 years of age, the venerable Englishman retains his love for the turf by training a few good horses, and often gives his charges their early morning gallops, his strength and agility being the marvel of his associates.

Bring your suburbs closer in

THE value of city real estate is directly proportionate to its travel-distance from the business centre.

There's a difference between "travel-distance," and the number of miles "as the crow flies." One lot may be only a half-mile from the city hall, on a muddy, unpaved back street, and be worth less than another lot of equal size two miles farther out, but easily accessible by street car or well-paved streets.

Well-paved streets not only increase the value of property immediately adjacent to them—but also that of land in all the territory for which they carry traffic. And since the value of land in the business centre is dependent upon comparison with that farther out, these same streets enhance business-property values quite as much.

You can't actually move a piece of real estate. But you can, for all practical purposes, bring every lot closer in by paving with Concrete

Realty values are not based upon temporary conditions. Nor can the advantages of good streets be considered in establishing realty values, if the street improvements are temporary. Such temporary improvements are more liabilities than assets, because they are always needing repairs and must ultimately be entirely replaced.

Concrete is the only economical road-material that is [illegible] —in many cases little higher than that of good macadam —is its final cost, for the expense of maintenance is practically nothing.

Windsor Ontario was one of the first Canadian cities to use Concrete for street paving. Prior to 1908, 20,000 square yards of concrete pavement had been laid. This quantity has been increased every year since then. The cost—for a "two-course" pavement, consisting of Concrete foundation and wearing surface of Cement Mortar—has varied from 99 cents to $1.15 per square yard. At the same time the cost of macadam was about $1.10, per square yard.

To use a poorer material than concrete because it's cheaper, is most extravagant economy, because the expense of keeping cheaper pavement in decent condition soon mounts up to far more than the total cost of a concrete road.

We have gathered all the facts about Concrete pavements. They will interest every citizen who appreciates the value of good streets and [illegible] enough to use his influence on behalf of them.

We will send this information to you, without cost or obligation.

STREET RAILWAY OWNERSHIP

Municipal ownership is something that Peterborough will experiment in if the Hydro-Electric by-law is passed, and the city undertakes to build and operate a power distributing system. It has been a success in many cases, with particular types of utilities. It is a success, even against private competition, in the case of the power systems connected with the Hydro-Electric main in various Western Ontario cities. Street Railways are profitable when there is enough traffic originating in the city to make a service frequent enough. Guelph owns and operates most of its public utilities, and makes most of them pay. The street railway service is one. Now here comes Calgary, which three or four years ago decided to build and operate its own street railway system, with a profit for this year of about $100,000. That is successful municipal ownership. If that surplus be carried forward from year to year, put back into the system in the way of more cars and added lines, and the service made as convenient for the people as possible, it will be a magnificent success. How different from the street car situation in Toronto and Hamilton and other of the larger Ontario cities, where the city councils and the companies are constantly fighting over what improvements and extensions are to be made. These cities derive about $700,000 and $250,000 respectively from their share of the street railway receipts, but this money is put into general revenue and lost, and the companies hold back from making needed extensions because so large a proportion of what would be additional profit is withheld. The policy of trying to get an efficient street car service—operated primarily for the benefit of the people—out of a company whose chief concern is dividends, is pretty much a failure, and always will be a failure, because the two interests clash at so many points. Peterborough ought to make some effort to acquiete the Peterborough Radial line—though that may not pay particularly well—as a consumer for its new plant. It could get power of expropriation perhaps such as the electric distribution system expropriation powers it obtained last year. If the service were a city concern, the question of extensions would not be shoved overboard as they have been to date.

THE SENATE AND THE NAVY

The Calgary Albertan is a Liberal newspaper of a peculiarly malignant type. It says that it is the duty of Canada to throw out the naval bill, because the Borden naval policy is a hasty measure, and there should be time for its consideration beyond what can be given it in a single session. It thinks that the sober, second-thought of the people of Canada will serve to show them that they ought not to help Britain, but should concentrate upon building another little local separate navy to serve their own purposes.

For party tactics of this type, we have very little respect. They are not above the contemptible. If the Liberal majority in the Senate wants to throw out the Borden naval policy, to force the Government to appeal to the people in another general election, there is no machinery at the command of the Government to prevent it. But any such action means that with the appeal to the people there would have to go an appeal to power to wipe out the Senate. The Senate would commit suicide by any such obstructive action It matters not whether the majority in it be Conservative or Liberal, the sense for the abolition of the Senate would be almost complete. Either that, or there would have to be a change to an elective system, where the Senate would be equally responsible to the people, along with the Commons Then we would have two sets of legislators dealing with the same matters, and both responbible to the people. One body would be equally as efficient. In fact, the Senate to-day is an ornamental body, a refuge for discredited politicians. It is a convenient way of rewarding those who have achieved some service for either party. But when the party system gets so far introduced into its working as to obstruct the leading legislation of a Government elected to carry out that legislation, such as the Borden Government's good roads program, there is time for the partisan appointment system to be changed. That would undoubtedly become a lively issue, were the Senate ever to try throwing out the gift of three Dreadnoughts to Britain.

THE CANADIAN OUTLOOK

The Canadian Pacific Railway has announced that no more speculators can buy lands belonging to the railway company. It has still 7,000,000 acres left out of the original lot of 25,000,000 it obtained when the road was construtced, and these it will sell only to settlers in Britain and this Continent. Terms of payment have been extended from a ten year period to a twenty year period, giving the settler ample opportunity to make money before his final payment comes due.

This policy by the C.P.R. is quite in line with the progressive management given the affairs of that corporation. The selling of land to speculators merely puts the real settler, the man who makes the prosperity of the country a thing of fact instead of imagination, at a disadvantage. He cannot obtain the land he wants except at exorbitant prices, and at terms making settlement a hardship rather than an inducement. So, by confining all land sales direct to the settler, the C.P.R. may get a little less for the land than it would by selling to real estate capitalists, but it is promoting the real basic prosperity of the country, and laying the foundation for continued good business.

The wild excesses of land speculation in Canada will, if carried very much farther, bring ruin to many people. The financial sky so far as Canada is concerned is without a cloud, and taking advantgae of the fair weather, many business men are crowding on all sail. If there was a sudden depression within six months, like that of the 1907 panic, which came so suddenly that few people had notice, there would be many people unable to make payments they are under obligation to make, and their holdings would be forfeited. If a sudden setback struck Canada now, there would inevitably be much weakly held property thrown on the market with resultant disaster to the standard of prices that is being reached. This is not so marked in the case of such cities as Peterborough, as it is in Toronto and Hamilton. In the smaller cities, business is moving along in very much the usual fashion, the increases in value being steady and substantial. No man need be called a pessimist, or lacking of faith in Canada or things Canadian, because he looks ahead and sees that with every excess there must be a natural reaction. Business in the world is unusually prosperous at present. Even free trade England is feeling chesty over the way business is looking up. In the United States business is good, the [illegible] showings in their earnings, but it is in the United States that the chief danger lies. If there is any real panic started, such as might very easily brought on by the big monied men if they wanted to upset the Democratic apple-cart, it would seriously affect Canadian prosperity. This country would not materially suffer, but in 1907 and 1908 conditions in Canada were very much sobered down because of the depression on the other side. We cannot expect to have boom days always, thoguh for many years to come this country will enjoy real prosperity, because it is a country of magnificant resources, and it will receive large additions to its population for half a century. There is no reason why any man who can get some money — which sometimes is hard in these days of the cost of living— who will invest it safely in anything that had to do with the growth of Canada and its towns and cities, cannot in the long run make considerable money on his investment.

MURDERER CAN'T MARRY

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Should a murderer who has been sentenced to death, be allowed to marry the woman of whose unborn child he is the father

This is the social problem which has arisen in the case of John Williams, who was condemned to death a fortnight ago for the murder of a police inspector at Eastbourne. He appealed to the Home Secretary for permission to marry Florence Seymour, his sweetheart who gave evidence in his behalf at the trial. The Home Office denied his plea, and the woman gave birth to a child on Sunday night.

RIOTERS ARRAIGNED.

Three Brantford Men Are Held For Trial Without Bail.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 31.—For participating in the riot here on Saturday night, Dec. 21, H. C. VanEvery, A. Burch and Charles Walley were yesterday morning committed for trial by Magistrate Livingston. Bail was refused.

Although several hundred took part in the riot, the fact that only three prosecutions have been commenced has led to criticism of the police force, some of whom, it is alleged, are conspiring against the chief and refuse to inform on those who participated in the disturbances.

On Christmas eve 105 members of the militia were summoned to the armories in case of an outbreak on the streets, but the soldiers were not called upon, although a riot was several times threatened. Strong representations have been made recently for enforcement of law and order at any cost.

The police commissioners have publicly called for complaints against the force, but so far none has been made necessitating an investigation.

TOSSED OUT OF DANGER.

Teamster Escapes Death Almost by Miracle In Galt.

GALT, Dec. 31.—James Jardine, teamster, coal and wood merchant, had a miraculous escape from death. He was driving over a level crossing of the C.P.R. station and failed to notice the approach of the 10.20 passenger train from Hamilton. The engine struck the wagon almost where the driver was sitting. Jardine, as well as the horse, was thrown clear by the impact and was unhurt, but the wagon was demolished. His hairbreadth escape can be realized from the fact that when the train came to a standstill one of the front wheels of the wagon was resting on the fender.

BABES NOT TWINS.

Bodies Found In Confession Box Were of Different Ages.

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—That the two babes found dead and wrapped together in a paper parcel in a confession box in St. Patrick's Church, by Fathers Connolly and Maloney, on Wednesday night, Dec. 11, were not twins as it was at first supposed, is the opinion of Dr. Arthur Jukes Johnson, who performed the autopsy on the bodies. Coroner Young held an inquest into the deaths of the babes last night at the morgue, but the evidence of Dr. Johnson came to him as such a surprise, that he immediately postponed the inquest until Jan. 10, in order to allow time for an effort of the police department to clear up the mysterious double murder.

"Murder" is the term used by Dr. Johnson in giving the "report of his postmortem. "This makes three children," said he, "that have been murdered in the city within the last two months in a way which has never before been used in Toronto.

NAME NEVER MENTIONED.

Lawyers Say Inclusion of Dr. Howitt Was Their Own Fault.

GUELPH, Dec. 31.—Dr. H. O. Howitt, medical health officer of this city, has received his first apology. It comes from a Toronto firm of solicitors, who were employed by those behind the charges presented to the City Council to draw up the petition. The letter says that the name of Dr. Howitt was never mentioned in connection with the allegations, but that the words "medical health officer" were included by a misunderstanding. The firm expresses itself as willing to make full amends.

There [illegible] developments in the case yesterday, although it was rumored yesterday morning that several others contemplated taking action against the signers of the charges presented to council. The summonses sworn out by the medical health officer are returnable Thursday morning when each of the defendants will appear before the police magistrate.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Dec. 31— Divisional Court to-day allowed the appeal from the decision of Judge Riddell and its judgment perpetually restrained the A.O.U.W. from putting into effect rates adopted on June 21. Judgment holds that the change in rates is an amendment to the constitution and that notice for such amendment was never served. The Order will take up the question of adjustment of rates at the annual meeting in March in the meantime keeping going by special assessments.

MARKS BROS. CO'Y

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather and the many counter attractions throughout the city, the usual Marks Bros' crowd assembled at the Grand Opera House last night to see this popular company in "The Lamb and the Wolf," a play dealing with life in the south. Grace Marks as the Lamb, was sweet and charming, and drew forth both tears and sympathy from the large audience present. The role of her brother, Joe, who becomes partly demented from a knock on the head with a stone in the hands of the villian, was well impersonated by Mr. M. A. Brewer. Special mention might also be made of Ed, Mills, who The Wolf, a misery deep dyed rascal, who was finally foiled at every issue. The other members of the company were good and a splendid evening's entertainment was furnished.

To-night the great pastorial drama from Bertha M. Clay's novel "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," will be presented, and should bring out another large gathering.

The Bachelor's Girl will be the offering for the New Year's matinee and New Year's night the company will close their engagement with a new Canadian drama "The Girl from Sunny Alberta." Seats on sale daily at box office.

R. J. KIDD AND WM. LANGFORD QUALIFY

Contest is Assured Only in the North Ward—Mr. McIntyre Not Certain for the East Ward

All the Aldermanic Candidates who were returned to office by acclamation had qualified by two o'clock this afternoon. Nothing had been heard from Mr. Malcolm McIntyre in East City. In the North Ward, A. A. McIntyre had dropped out and Mr. James G. Graham had not definitely decided whether to remain in the race or not. This leaves the field in the North Ward narrowed down to Mr. William Langford, jr., and R. J. Kidd, who have both qualified.

The only two doubtful ones therefore are Mr. Malcolm McIntyre and Ald. James G. Graham. Candidates have till nine o'clock this evening to fill out the necessary qualification documents.

BY-LAW TO AID HENRY HOPE AND SON'S COMPANY TO BE VOTED ON JANUARY 6

Organization Formed to Work in the Interest of a Large Majority for the By-Law.

Last night an enthusiastic and largely attended public meeting was held in the City Council chamber, in the interests of the by-law to be submitted to the ratepayers on January 6th, to aid the Henry Hope & Sons Company. The real object of the meeting as set forth by His Worship, Mayor Bradburn, was to form an organization which would see that backers of the by-law were at the various polling places to remind voters of their duty in respect to casting their votes in favor of it.

Mayor Bradburn outlined the conditions under which the by-law was to be submitted, and of the concessions that the city were to grant them. These are the usual exemption from taxation for ten years and a free site. An expenditure of $11,500 would be involved, which the city guaranteed them. It was for that purpose that a by-law was to be placed before the rate-payers. The cost to property-holders if the new industry was secured would be 12 cents per year on every $1,000 of its assessment for a period of twenty years. Mayor Bradburn's idea was that two or three advocates of the by-law should arrange to be at the polling centres on January 6th, and as each voter came up, be urged to mark his ballot in favor of the by-law. His reason for suggesting such procedure, was because he thought many rate-payers would go to the polls with a very vague understanding of what a boon to themselves and the city in general, the new factory would prove.

His suggestions were received with general approval, in fact the whole gathering endorsed it by placing their names on a paper which was passed around. The latter plan was the result of a thoughtful suggestion by Mr. W. H. Denham, following his resolution that those present signify their sympathy with the by-law by having their names appear in the newspapers, thereby indicating to the reading public the fact that they considered it a good thing for the city. The names of those present would be a general expression of opinion and serve as a guide to the rate-payers not present.

"Other industries are watching Peterborough and when they perceive that the city really wants more manufacturing establishments they bear it in mind," said Mr. Denham.

"You will always notice," he said, "that the rate-payer who voices his objection to any by-law, will always turn out to register his vote against it; but the indifferent voter is quite likely to neglect casting his ballot."

In endorsing Mr. Denham's remarks, Mr. W. R. Morris said that there were hundreds of homes to which the daily papers had not access, and he favored the idea of having dodgers being prepared and mailed or left at all the houses.

Alderman W. G. Johnston also thought it a splendid idea.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman came out with a suggestion that the newspapers print extra copies of their paper, containing thorough information in reference to the by-law and the new industry, and have them distributed to every person.

"People," he said, "will read newspapers in preference to a dodger."

Finally, A. G. Gillespie introduced a resolution, that Aldermen Duncan, Gordon, Johnston, Duffus and Anderson be chairman in their respective words, of committees to arrange for having at least two men at all the polls on January 6th, to boost the by-law; and that Mayor Bradburn be chairman of the whole committee and City Clerk, Armstrong, secretary. His motion met with unanimous approval. The plan in fact will be the same as was adopted at the vote on the DeLaval industry.

THE NEW COMPANY

The Henry Hope Company and their operations have been thoroughly described from time to time in these columns. A few of the outstanding features might be emphasized however.

The Company promises to erect a one story building 80X200 feet and install machinery, the whole to be not less than $60,000 in value. They are to engage fifty hands to start with. The statement of the manager of the company was that if they did not think they could employ 100 hands the end of their first year, they would not have considered commencing the manufacturing here at all.

Aldermen Duncan, Peter Campbell, Robert Fair, William Langford, sr., Alderman Johnston H. G. Stabler, Alderman Duffus, W. R. Morris, C. H. Pennefather and others all promised to help the carrying of the by-law as far as possible.

In giving reasons why he felt it worthy of support, Mr. Langford gave his experience in connection with securing steel sash, such as the Henry Hope Company propose to manufacture in building the addition to the Nicholls Hospital, as he experienced extreme difficulty in getting sash from the firms at present engaged in manufactury. They were all unable to supply him, in fact, he said they seemed glad when I was forced to cancel my orders.

The firm recently received a contract to supply a $36,000 order in Montreal.

ANTI LOCAL OPTION NOTES

There were four gentlemen in Peterborough Sunday last, publicly proclaiming the advnatages of Local Option towns; two from West Toronto, one from Newmarket and one from Orillia. Did any one of these gentlemen patronize The Montreal a temperance hotel and advertised as such? Not much. You will not find any of these gentlemen registered as guests of the Montreal, but all of them registered as guests of The National.

West Toronto is separated from Toronto by an imaginary line in the middle of a street. West Toronto is a part of the city of Toronto, constituting the 7th Ward of the Municipality. The city of Toronto has one hundred and fourteen places where intoxicating liquors are sold, some of these places employing as many as ten bartenders. A license in Toronto is worth from thirty to thirty-five thousand dollars. These things would indicate that there is quite a demand for intoxicating liquors in the City of Toronto. The Citizens of Toronto who reside in West Toronto, the 7th Ward of the City, who have an appetite for something to drink can, for five cents ride on a street car in twenty minutes to Yonge street. If the citizen of West Toronto, desiring something to drink, does not wish to spend five cents for car fare he can, in fifteen minutes or less, walk across the imaginary line which separates his Local Option Ward from the rest of the City to five hotels and a Club which is practically a hotel where intoxicating liquors are sold according to law. If he does not wish to waste so much time, walking so far he can select the nearest one of the forty or more blind pigs that infest "Local Option" West Toronto, where intoxicating liquors are sold contrary to law.

One of the Local Option orators from West Toronto at the Opera House meeting Sunday evening, said the only class of their citizens who wasted their money for beer, in the Summer and were destitute in Winter, was the English.

The report given the papers by the Local Optionists of the voters placed on the list was quite in error, as the Antis put on 166, not 147, and the Local Optionists 111, not 114. These figures are from the Judge's list, and are official.

The mass meeting to be held in the Opera House, Friday evening, January 3rd, 1913, at 8 o'clock, in opposition to Local Option in Peterborough, will be addressed by Mr. Samuel Wright, of Owen Sound, and the Hon. C. Homer Durand, of Ohio.

Mr. Wright is a business man in Owen Sound, perfectly familiar with conditions there, and will, in a plain, unvarnished manner relate what those conditions really are. If you want to know what Local Option has and has not, done, for Owen Sound, do not fail to hear Mr. Wright at the Opera House, Friday evening.

Mr. Durand is the Secretary of the Personal Liberty League, of Ohio, the great organization which has been in the forefront of the battle which has been waging for four years and has just resulted in taking prohibition out of the Constitution where it had been for sixty years, and placing in the organic law of the state license and regulation of the liquor traffic.

If you wish to hear the ablest, bravest and most eloquent advocate of liberty and defender of the rights of property in America, come to the Opera House Friday evening, at 8 o'clock and hear the Hon. C. Homer Durand of Ohio. Admission free. No collection. 1d16

NO NEGLIGENCE ON THE PART OF THE COMMISSIONERS

Is Their Claim, in Regard to the Bursting of Water Main, By Which Stock in Fair's Store Was Damaged

Compensation to the extent of $152, is asked by Mr. Robert Fair from the Water Commissioners, over alleged damage to linoleums and carpets in the cellar of his store, caused by the bursting of a water pipe.

Commissioner W. H. Moore, at yesterday's meeting, was of the view that they were not liable for damages as it was purely a case of accident, and that no negligence on the part of the commissioners could be shown.

City Solicitor Hall was instructed to notify Mr. Fair of the commissioners' attitude.

M.P.'S COMING TO POWER MEETING

To be Held at Opera House Thursday Night

Mr. J. H. Burnham has received word from members of surrounding districts, that they will come to Peterborough for the meeting at the Opera House on Thursday night, Jan. 2nd, at which Hon. Adam Beck and other speakers will deal with the power question.

STATEMENT FROM THE T.A.S.

Society Not Taking Active Part in Campaign

A communication from the St. Peter's T.A.S. is to the effect that the Society is taking no active part in the present local option campaign, the Society having adopted at its organization the plan of total abstinence by education.

A BRIGHT, HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR TO ALL

Another spoke has been added to the great wheel of time.

To-day we bid adieu to the year 1912 and look forward eagerly and expectantly to the coming year of 1913.

As the old year drags out slowly and reluctantly we examine it closely. We trust it has been a happy and prosperous year to you—to us it has been a year of remarkable growth.

If the old year has brought you sorrow we trust the new year will bring you happiness. If it has dealt kindly with you we hope the new year will lavish on you still greater kindness.

We look for the coming year to be one of still more remarkable growth for us. The increased prestige attained during 1912 coupled with our improved facilities for PERFECT STORE SERVICE makes us exceedingly optimistic about the New Year.

All depts. throughout the store have shown a marked increas—the buying end has been systematized to ensure getting the "NEW THINGS FIRST" and at prices within reach of all. Our salespeople are proficient to a high degree. Having our own delivery system enables us to deliver all parcels promptly and in good condition.

We have many important changes in view for 1913. Changes that will add considerably to the convenience of the buying public.

Several depts. will be enlarged. New depts. will be added to keep pace with our ever-increasing business. A business made possible by your liberal patronage.

In thanking you for past favors and asking a continuance of the same WE WISH YOU HEALTH, WEALTH AND HAPPINESS in 1913 and the years to come.

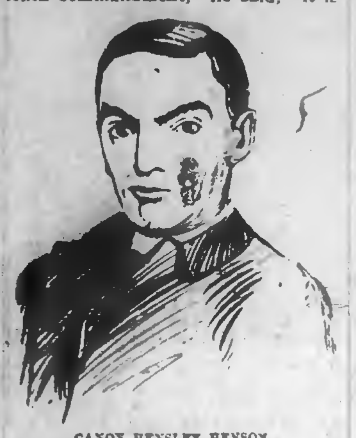
IS A LIBERAL CLERIC

CANON HENSON WOULD ABRIDGE THE DECALOGUE.

Canon of Westminster Believes That the Second, Third and Tenth Commandments Should Be Edited To Suit Modern Thought—He Is Rector of the British "House of Commons' Church."

Canon Hensley Henson of Westminster, who has been lecturing on this side of the water, is a "progressive" member of the English established church clergy. It was he who advocated a year ago the substitution in the Prayer Book communion service of the so-called "Evangelical Summary" of the Decalogue for the existing form of the Ten Commandments. The plan contemplated the abridgement of the second, third and tenth commandments. "Regarding the tenth commandment," he said, "it is entirely at variance with modern thought and modern morals that the wife should be classed as a chattel with the ox and the ass. The notion is too primitive and archaic." This brilliant preacher and theologian not only has a canon's stall in the abbey, but is rector of St. Margaret's Church, which is known as the church of the House of Commons and is the scene of many weddings of British statesmen and politicians who are also "society men."



CANON HENSLEY HENSON.

Canon Henson has just turned forty-nine and is known through the English-speaking world as a brilliant scholar and writer. He took a high stand at Oxford, and became a fellow of All Souls in 1884, where he remained until 1891. It was not for seven years later that he took his bachelorship in divinity although he had held several church offices. His publications have been mostly of a religious nature and have been marked by broad tolerance and liberality of thought.

William Barnes, of Dorset.

Dorset is a county of chalk hills divided by broad valleys, and in particular by the valleys of the Stour and the Frome. William Barnes is the poet of the valleys—the elm, and not the beech, being his favorite tree. Of the grandeur and severity of Mr Thomas Hardy, his fellow-countryman and best critic, he has no trace.

In the first year of last century he was born in Blackmoor-Vale, which is watered by a tributary of the Stour; at his death, only fourteen years from the century's end, he was rector of Came, in the valley of the Frome. The son of a Dorset farmer, and for most of his life a schoolmaster or clergyman within the country, the Dorset dialect was his mother tongue—his "only true speech"—that enshrines ways of life as old as itself, and now as near death.

He wrote of Dorset, and for Dorset; and strangers—perhaps natives, also—might say that the man was Dorset. His poems are full of the names and the aspects of its towns and villages, the rivers and brooks and the hills that lie around it great central height of Bulbarrow which is midway between the homes of his childhood and old age.

Queen Mary Yields.

Even queens with a reputation for a firm will must bow to the dictates of fashion. Queen Mary has at last succumbed to the narrow skirt, though she held out for a long time and refused to admit it to her wardrobe.

Her choice now is not of the "hobble" variety, but of the approved two-width style. Queen Alexandra still sticks to full widths and all her recent dresses have been made under instructions not to depart from the older model.

The royal princesses, too, are conservative as to changing their garb, and declared within a year ago that they would never accept the fashionable skirt. Yet, to-day, headed by Princess Alexander of Teck and Princess Victoria, they are arrayed like the rest of femininity and quite content with their conversion.

Something Happened.

Sir Laurence Alma-Tadema, the veteran painter, was telling stories the other day. He mentioned that Pompeii is one of his favorite resorts for study, and he holds a special permit from the Italian Government to wander about the ruins at will. He says that a tourist who returned recently from Italy was asked, "Did you go to Pompeii?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply, "and it was very strange and interesting. I think something must have happened there. The blessed place was mostly ruins."—London Answers.

A Safe Mine Lamp.

An electric lamp for miners' use has been devised in England, which is said to be absolutely safe and to be no heavier than the ordinary type of safety lamp which has been generally used for this purpose. The lamp is entirely self-contained, and all contacts are made inside of the case, and the latter is so tight that it may be operated under water.

Butter yellow is to be the new spring color.

Why Rain Clouds Are Black.

The color of a cloud depends on the manner in which the sunlight falls upon it and the position of the observer. It will be noticed that high clouds are always white or light in color, and this is because the light by which they are seen is reflected from the undersurface by the numberless drops of moisture which go to form the cloud. Heavy rain clouds, on the other hand, are found much nearer the earth, and so the light falls on them more directly from above, giving a silver lining to the cloud, though the undersurface appears black owing to the complete reflection and absorption of the light by the upper layers. Seen from above by an observer in a balloon, the blackest rain clouds appear of the most dazzlingly brilliant white.

Death by Boiling.

In old England, before the law was passed which prohibited "cruel and unusual forms of punishment," murderers were often condemned to death by boiling. In such cases the victims were chained in large kettles of cold water, which were gradually heated until it caused the flesh to drop from the bones. The last English victim of the "boiling death" was one Rouse, a cook, who, it was alleged, had killed seventeen persons.

A Dainty Comparison.

Among the clever stories retailed at the Beefsteak club in London is a nice one of the florid lawyer who was counsel in an action for libel brought by a provision merchant against a local newspaper. He said in his address to the jury: "My client, gentlemen, is a cheesemonger, and the reputation of a cheesemonger in the city of London is like the bloom on a peach. Touch it, and it is gone forever."

Merely Obliging.

Magistrate—You gave this young woman such a hit on the face that she can't see out of her eyes. What have you to say for yourself? Accused—Well, she often told me she didn't want to see me any more.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

TRAPPING AN ERMINE.

One of the Reasons Why the Prized Fur Is So Costly.

"This stole of imperial ermine is worth $1,000," said the dealer. "Dear? Nix. Just consider how the animals comprised in it were caught!

"In the first place, they were caught in a winter of extreme cold, for it is only in such a winter that the weasel, or ermine, turns from tawny to snow white. In normal winters the ermine only turns to a greenish white, like this $400 greenish white stole here.

"In the second place, the ermines were caught young, for when fully developed their coats are coarse and stiff, as in this $250 stole, and to catch them young the tongue trap must be used. Any other trap would tear the delicate fur.

"The tongue trap is a knife, an ordinary hunting knife, smeared with grease, that the hunter lays in the snow. The little ermine sees the blade, which it mistakes for ice. Ice it loves to lick, and so it licks the knife blade and is caught fast, its tongue, in that zero weather, frozen to the steel.

"Yes, sir, when you see a stole like this don't begrudge a good price for it, for every ermine in it was tongue trapped in subzero weather—a mighty slow and painful hand process."—New York Tribune.

Why the Deaf Are Grateful.

A pleasant contrast to the sad fate of Beethoven is furnished by Dr. Thirlwall, the radical bishop of St. David's, who wrote the history of Greece that held the field before the arrival of Grote. In his old age he became stone deaf, but, so far from fretting, declared that the infirmity was really a blessing, because it relieved him from the futile conversation of bores. One day a friend, forgetting the bishop's deafness, greeted him with the usual remark about the weather. "Eh?" queried the bishop. "It is a fine day," bellowed the friend repeatedly into the prelate's ear. When Thirlwall finally grasped the meaning of the remark he quietly philosophized: "Dear me! How little a man loses by being deaf."—London Chronicle.

THESE OLD PEOPLE OWE THEIR HEALTH

To The Wonderful Powers Of "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. N. JOUBERT OF GRANDE LIGNE, P.Q., says:

"For more than 10 years, I suffered with Constipation and Piles. I tried many remedies, but none did me good. After taking four boxes, of "Fruit-a-tives", I am well. I am now over 80 years of age".

MR. WM. PITT, general store-keeper at SHANLY, ONT., writes:—"I am 67 years of age and long suffered tortures from Headaches, due to Stomach Troubles. I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives". I did so and they completely cured me."

MR. WM. PARSONS OF OTTERVILLE, ONT., says:—"I am 79 years old and a great believer in "Fruit-a-tives".

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Blunders of French Writers.

Alexandre Dumas in his "Chevalier d'Hormental" made the excellent Buyat declare in 1718 that his pupil "paints like Greuze," who was born seven years later. The same character admires the galleries of the Palais Royal, which were not built till sixty-two years later.

Balzac makes "Cousin Pons" buy a charming fan, "a divine chef d'oeuvre painted by Watteau and ordered by Mme. de Pompadour," who was born in the very year that the artist died.

Alphonse Daudet shows us in "Tartarin" 4,000 Arabs "smiling like lunatics till 600,000 white teeth glistened in the sun."

The Goncourts tell us in "Madame Gervaisais" that "what she lacked and was at a loss for was an absence of food to satisfy her appetite."

From Coppee we get "two twins both of them eighteen years old."

Tailored coats buttoning to the throat and finished with a ruff of fur, revers being absolutely eliminated, are much seen on smart New Yorkers.

Turn about is fair play—except when applied to a hand organ.

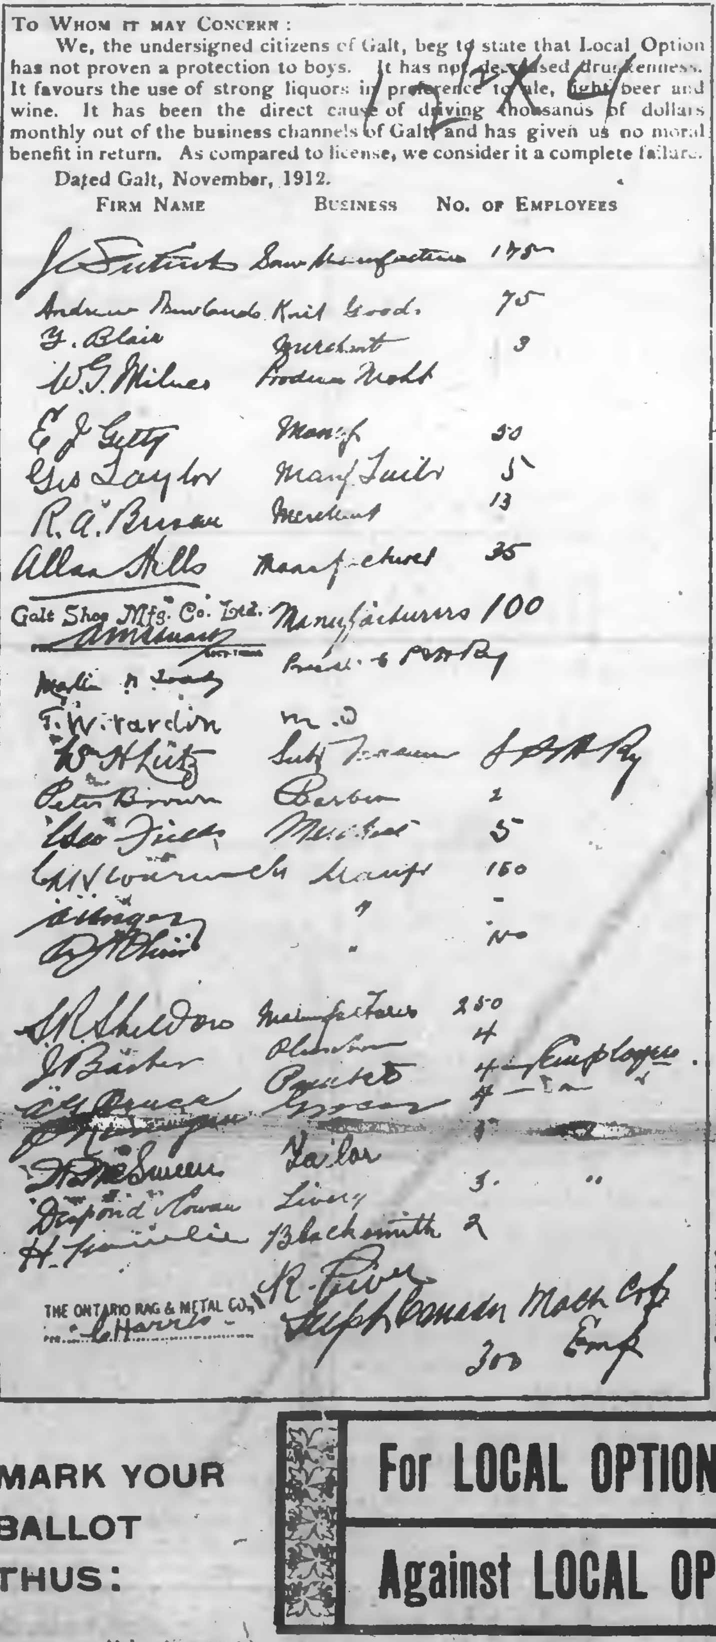
Galt Manufacturers Against Local Option

LOCAL OPTION has proved a failure in Galt as it has in every other place in which it has been tried. The papers are full of reports from Local Option places of illegal selling. Blind pigs. Increased drunkenness. Bad moral conditions. Loss of trade. Increased taxes. Crime. Again and again foremost citizens, even temperance workers, declare for the return of properly enforced license in place of present intolerable conditions.

Below is reproduced a copy of a recently signed statement by leading Galt manufacturers. Letters from people in other places tell an equally strong story.



TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

We, the undersigned citizens of Galt, beg to state that Local Option has not proven a protection to boys. It has not decreased drunkenness. It favours the use of strong liquors in preference to ale, light beer and wine. It has been the direct cause of driving thousands of dollars monthly out of the business channels of Galt, and has given us no moral benefit in return. As compared to license, we consider it a complete failure.

Dated Galt, November, 1912.

Conventions and Excursion Parties Avoid the Town

There is a bottle brigade here, and many drink from bottles offered them that never drank before. False swearing is another bad feature. Any one who wants liquor can easily get it, and a lot of these fellows who preach it get liquor themselves and go to excess. We have only one butcher now, one left. No harness shop—he had to pull out. We never have a celebration of anything of that kind like we used to have. We used to often have celebrations, conventions and picnics, but they all go to other places now.

M. McAULEY
Southampton, Ont.

Property Depreciated—Taxes Increased

Funny thing this Local Option. It was claimed that if the money was not spent in the hotel bars it would be spent in the stores. But this is not true. The money does not come to the town now, it goes to other places. I am sure we do not get it as formerly. This law increases taxes and depreciates the value of property, as several parties who have sold out and left the place had to suffer a loss of about twenty-five per cent. I have lived in this town for over twenty years, and am a total abstainer.

J. W. BRYANS,
Ex-Reeve and Clerk, Havelock, Ont.

Taxes Higher—No Sale for Property

One feature of Local Option in our town, liquor is being used to a great extent by boys; effect on business has been bad. Strange feature of this law is that some of those that vote for it, after it has passed and gone into force, engage in the illicit sale of liquor. Taxes are higher and there is no sale for property.

H. BEATTY,
Omemee.

Local Option Bad Everywhere

My business takes me very largely over the eastern part of the Province, and I find the conditions very much the same in all Local Option towns. The law is bad for business, destroys the accommodation for the travelling public, drives money out of town and is a curse to the young men, as they use liquor more freely than ever.

S. RICHARDSON,
Millbrook.

Vacant Stores and Houses Everywhere

Local Option has been a bad thing for this town. Lots of men get drunk; I believe there is more drinking now than before. Business is not by any means as good as before Local Option came in force. There are lots of vacant houses and some vacant stores. There is no sale for property in Durham.

HUGH McDONALD,
Durham.

Has Tended to Promote Lawlessness

The Law in my opinion is not a success. It is not effective as a remedy for the evils at which it aimed. It has tended to promote lawlessness and disregard of law. It encourages secret drinking on the part of young men, and is detrimental to the business interests of the village.

F. C. COWEY,
Colborne, Ont.

License System more Desirable

Local Option has made our municipality much more lawless than under the License Act. Now we have to contend with illicit sale of vile whiskey. Truly the License system is more desirable than this miserable condition.

THOS. H. CHASE,
Brighton.

Whiskey Train Does Flourishing Business

I never kept liquor in my house until this law came, and I have used more of it in the last year than I have used in all my life before. The greatest temperance people in this town keep liquor in their houses, and as it is now there is more temptation to the young people than ever before. There is more common sense in being able to go and buy a glass of ale than keeping a supply in the house as we have to do now. We have now what is called the Whiskey Train to this place every night, and there is lots of liquor.

WM. AITKEN, General Store & Bakery.
Wyoming.

MARK YOUR BALLOT THUS:

For LOCAL OPTION
Against LOCAL OPTION	X

As Local Option has worked in other places, so it will work in your town if carried. Drinking among boys. Perjury and lying. More drunkenness. Internal dissensions. Higher taxes. More Crime.

VISITORS LEAD

But Manager Morgan's Seven Were Good on the Home Stretch.

Something happened at the rink last night. The same thing has happened before but so far as the writer is aware, only at one place—the Brock street rink.

The sporting writer on the Review was asked to and did, pay his way into the rink, despite the fact that he showed a complimentary ticket signed by the Secretary of the Hockey Club.

J. McHarry was responsible for this happening, but he doesn't know any better. Such an incident is unworthy of further comment.

But the game between the local seniors and McGill University seven was well worth the price of admission and it is safe to say the fans were more than tickled with the grand showing of the blue and white brigade.

The visitors proved worthy foemen. They had all kinds of tricks; they were hard checkers; several were exceptionally good stick handlers, and every man was in the game from start to finish.

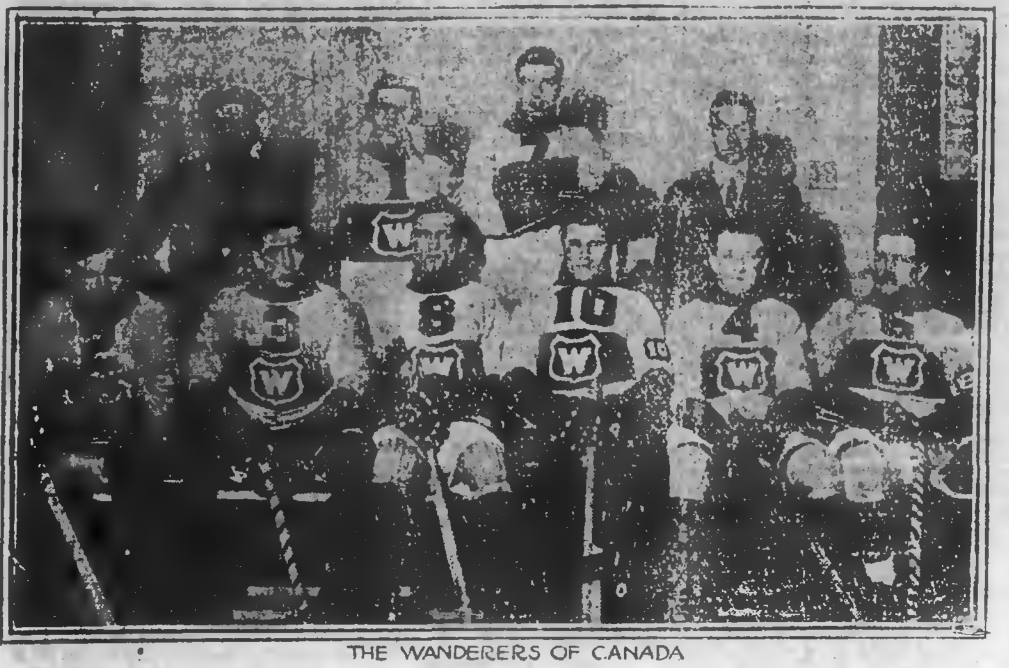
It was a remarkably good game. The ice was soft and some of the fans are still wondering how the locals not only kept at the heels of the Montrealers, but beat them out to the winning post. And every man was on the job. In the slushy going, the locals even went so far as to play a three man and four men combination and what is more they succeeded.

Of excitement, there was plenty. There were a dozen times when the goals were in danger and a score appeared inevitable, but still the rubber failed to land home. Kelly, M[illegible]on and Coughlin failed to count in the north goal, during the first half, on the cruelest kind of ill-luck.

The visitors got their only counter in the first half from a scrimmage in front of the nets. After the rest, Art Armstrong ploughed his way through for the tieing counter and shortly before the game was called Fred Kelly went down the boards, circled the McGill defence and the white flag went up.

To pick out any player on the local line-up would not be fair. Every man was a star last night. The boys made good on the soft ice and there isn't any doubt but that they will be just as good on the hard surface.

CANADA HAS ONE OF THE FINEST HOCKEY TEAMS THIS SEASON THAT THE "FAN" HAS EVER SEEN



THE WANDERERS OF CANADA

The Wanderers of Canada can well afford to boast of one of the finest hockey teams on this side of the Atlantic. Each player is a star, and individual expertness has in many cases been responsible for the victories. As a team their playing, too, has been most remarkable.

Cadotte, who is a "find" picked up by the Wanderers from a team in the Montreal City League, is one of the best players they have. The two Cleghorn brothers were recently mixed up in a fight with one of the Canadian teams during their first game at Toronto, Ontario, which may result in the suspension of both players.

SPORTS AT THE ARMOURIES

For Non-Commissioned Officers and Men To-morrow

A program of sports will be held at the armories to-morrow afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock for the non-commissioned officers and men, when it is hoped the attendance will be large. The program will be made up as follows: Boxing bout, talk fight, relay race, for two men from each company, wrestling, non-commissioned officers' race, bayonet fighting, baiting the bear, obstacle race, bun and treacle race, tug of war.

New York society women are wearing earrings of seed pearl dangling to the shoulder with evening bodices and hoop earings with street hats.

THIRTY-THREE DYNAMITERS GO TO FEDERAL PRISON

President Ryan Gets Seven Years and Eight of His Closest Associates Get Six Years—Other Terms Range Down to a Year While Five Men Have Sentence Suspended—Informer Clark Also Gets Off

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 31.—Sentences varying from seven years' imprisonment in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas, to one year and one day, and six suspended sentences, were yesterday imposed upon the thirty-eight labor union officials convicted in the dynamite conspiracy case.

Less than twenty minutes were required by the court in the work of actually imposing sentences, although for an hour and a half before that Judge Anderson, leaning over his desk, invited each prisoner to step up and talk with him as to his degree of guilt.

Before Judge Anderson passed sentence, he said he desired to read a statement. He then reviewed the history of the dynamite conspiracy as well as the evidence introduced, and said:

"The evidence shows most of these defendants to be guilty of murder, but they are not charged here with that crime; this court cannot punish them for it, nor should it be influenced by such consideration in fixing the measure of punishment for the crimes charged."

A remarkable scene in the struggle of the wives of the prisoners to reach their husbands, attended the sentences.

Some of the men made pleas for mercy; others wept in the arms of their wives. But the court pronounced the sentences one by one regardless of the pleas.

Frank M. Ryan, president of the Ironworkers' International Union, was given a sentence of seven years. This was the heaviest of all. Olaf Tveitmoe of San Francisco, convicted on charges of aiding in plotting the destruction of The Los Angeles Times building, and Eugene A. Clancy, also of San Francisco, were given six years each. Herbert S. Hockin received six years.

All the prisoners who received prison terms are to be taken to Leavenworth, Kansas.

Terms of imprisonment were imposed as follows:

Frank M. Ryan, president of the Ironworkers' Union, 7 years; John T. Butler, Buffalo, vice-president, 6 years; Herbert S. Hockin, former secretary and formerly of Detroit, 6 years; Olaf A. Tveitmoe, San Francisco, secretary of California Building Trades Council, 6 years; Eugene A. Clancy, San Francisco, 6 years; Philip A. Cooley, New Orleans, 6 years; Michael J. Young, Boston, 6 years; Frank C. Webb, New York, 6 years; Frank J. Higgins, Boston, 2 years; Fred. J. Mooney, Duluth, 1 year; J. E. Munsey, Salt Lake, Utah, 6 years; J. H. Barry, St. Louis, 4 years; Paul J. Marrin, St. Louis, 3 years; Henry W. Legleitner, Denver, 3 years; Chas. N. Beum, Minneapolis, 3 years; Michael J. Cunnane, Philadelphia, 3 years; Richard H. Houlihan, Chicago, 2 years; Wm. Shupe, Chicago, 1 year; Ed. Smythe, Peoria, Ills., 3 years; Jas. E. Ray, Peoria, Ills., 1 year; Murray L. Pennell, Springfield, Ills., [illegible] years; Wm. C. Bernhardt, Cincinnati, 1 year; Wilford B. Brown, Kansas City, Mo., three years; Frank J. Painter, Omaha, 2 years; P. J. Smith, Cleveland, 4 years; Geo. Anderson, Cleveland, 3 years; Michael J. Hannon, Scranton, Pa., 3 years; Ed. E. Phillips, New York, 1 year; Charles Wachtmeister, Detroit, 1 year; Ernest G. W. Basey, Indianapolis, 3 years; Fred. Sherman, Indianapolis, 2 years; Wm. J. McCain, Kansas City, 3 years; Wm. E. Reddin, Milwaukee, 3 years.

Sentences on the following were suspended: Patrick F. Farrell, New York; James Cooney, Chicago; Jas. Coughlin, Chicago; Hiram R. Kline, Muncie, Ind.; Frank J. Murphy, Detroit.

On motion of the Government, Edward Clark, Cincinnati, confessed dynamiter, who testified for the Government, was given a suspended sentence. Ortie E. McManigal, another confessed dynamiter, was not sentenced at this time.

When the court convened, Judge Albert B. Anderson promptly overruled all motions for new trials for the thirty-eight labor union officials convicted in the dynamite conspiracy case.

THE CHRISTMAS CAMPAIGN is over, and well over so far as we are concerned. The results have far exceeded our most sanguine expectations. When we read the last chapter of our Christmas trade, as capitulated on our cash sheets by our bookkeepers, we simply said "Isn't this great, where did it all come from?"

We appreciate very highly the increasing confidence manifested by our patrons from year to year, and rejoice, not only for our own sakes, but because ours, being almost entirely a business of necessities, may easily be taken as an indication of the general prosperity of our city.

We want your business for 1913, and we want your friend's business and your friend's friend's business. We consider the advertising our customers give us the best advertising we can have for this store, therefore we make it a point to see to it that every customer of ours gets full [illegible] dollar he spends here

Once again we desire to extend to our many Friends and Patrons

MAKING DRUNKARDS OF CHILDREN

"Blind Piggers" in Non-License Districts Convicted for Selling Whiskey to Minors.

The annual report, just published, of the Ontario Provincial Police, reveals the shocking fact that in the prohibition districts of New Ontario not less than seven "blind piggers" were convicted during the current year for supplying liquor to minors.

If this number were convicted it can be reasonably assumed that other "blind piggers" engage in this demoralizing practice, since the "blind pigger" necessarily conducts his operations with the greatest secrecy, and often succeeds in escaping detection.

This is one of the sinister results of prohibition and local option. In licensed districts the vendor of liquor has to be extremely careful when, and to whom, he serves liquor. He knows that it is to his paramount interest to conduct his place properly and otherwise keep strictly to the law. If he fails to do this, his license may be taken away.

But the "blind pigger" operates outside the law. He is irresponsible and often disreputable. He does not care to whom he sells liquor so long as he makes profits. He will frequently debauch children simply to make money. This condition likewise prevails in the local option districts of Old Ontario, as for instance, Owen Sound, where a number of "blind piggers" and "pocket peddlers" have been convicted for supplying whiskey to children.

The greater part of the liquor secretly sold and consumed in these places is whiskey. During the current year the Provincial Police seized 8,295 bottles of whiskey in New Ontario, chiefly in the non-license districts of Cobalt and Porcupine. Many more bottles escaped detection. It is disgraceful that children should be given this poisonous stuff, containing more than fifty per cent. of alcohol.

The conclusion is becoming more and more general that a condition under which children are corrupted with whiskey should and must be abolished. Many public officials, knowing the evils of the "blind pigger" (who always comes in with local option) favor the granting of separate licenses for the sale of a mild beverage such as beer, and the placing a high tax on the sale of the hard intoxicants whiskey, gin, brandy, etc. The probabilities are that this is the plan that will be adopted. C. P. R. Officials Promoted.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 31.—Grant Hall, assistant general manager of Western C.P.R. lines for the past year, was yesterday made general manager of western lines in charge of maintenance and operation with headquarters at Winnipeg, to become effective Jan. 1, 1913. George Bury, whose title has been vice-president and general manager, drops the latter title, and will devote his attention wholly to the duties of vice-president.

DIPLOMAT IS DEAD.

Germany Will Miss Von Kiderlin-Waechter In Crisis.

STUTTGART, Germany, Dec. 31.—Alfred von Kiderlen-Waechter, Secretary of Foreign Affairs of the German Empire, died suddenly at his home here yesterday, after a brief illness.

Alfred von Kiderlen-Waechter had occupied the office of Imperial Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs since June 28, 1910. He was a very poor orator, and his speeches did not create a very good impression, but he was known as one of the most shrewd men in German diplomacy. He was regarded as an expert on affairs of the near east, owing to his having been stationed for a long time in the Balkans, and his disappearance from the German Cabinet at the present time is considered to be a great misfortune.

Snowstorm In Cascades.

SEATTLE, Dec. 31.—A severe snow storm now prevailing in the Cascade Mountains has disarranged schedules on all northern transcontinental lines and trains are running from five to 24 hours late. Reports received at railroad offices said three feet of snow fell in the mountains during the last 18 hours.

Lives Threatened.

LITTLE FALLS, N.Y., Dec. 31.—Deserters from the ranks of the striking textile workers here testified yesterday before the state board of arbitration that their lives had been threatened after returning to work, by the men and women still out on strike.

WHY VOTE FOR LOCAL OPTION?

It Increases Drunkeness and Encourages the Secret Guzzling of Whiskey—Creates "Blind Pigs"—Demoralizes Youth and Injures Business—Facts vs. Fiction.

Local option, according to its leaders, was going to do wonders. Its promises were large and attractive. By the simple process of wiping out all licenses it would—so its advocates proclaimed—eliminate drunkenness and crime. It was an extensive order, but the local optionists promised they could fill it, and a number of communities were led by their emotional appeals into voting for the new dispensation which was to inaugurate an era of unprecendented loveliness.

Midland was one of these municipalities. To-day the thoughtful citizens of Midland know better. They know what Local Option means. They have seen the convictions for drunkenness and other offenses go to such a figure that compared to it the years before Local Option went into effect were peaceable and law-abiding years.

In the year 1907 when Local Option went into effect in Midland there were only 12 convictions for being drunk and disorderly. Since that time there have been more than 125 convictions of drunks and disorderlies.

From May 1st, 1909, to May 1st, 1910, there were 17 convictions of drunks and disorderlies. The next year there were 20 convictions. In the year ending May 1st, 1912, there were:—Thirty-three convictions of drunks and disorderlies. Seven convictions for being drunk and driving fast and using profane language. Twenty-four convictions for being drunk and incapable. In the last three years up to May 1st, 1912, there have been 32 convictions for assaults.

These are the facts. They cannot be ignored. But they are not all of the facts. The arrests for drunkenness are but a part of the whole; only the drunks who make scenes on the streets are run in.

Licenses have gone out in Midland. But large shipments of whiskey have regularly gone in, as every well-informed person in Midland knows. Unvarying experience shows that wherever license is abolished, a light beverage like beer which contains only three to four per cent. of alcohol is driven out because of its difficulty of concealment and unpalatability when warm, and whiskey, which contains 50 per cent. or more of alcohol, is smuggled in.

The regularly licensed place would not under any circumstances sell liquor to minors; if it did, its license could be taken away. But the irresponsible "pocket peddlers" and "blind pig" operators, caring only for profits and having no license to lose, sell whiskey even to boys, directly causing their ruination.

Midland is only one of many Local Option municipalities which had this experience. It has been a hard-learned and humiliating experience, and has convinced many former believers in Local Option that it is far better to have licensed places, the proprietors of which are reputable men and responsible to the law, than to encourage the secret and indiscriminate sale of whiskey by lawless characters. They are convinced, also, that it is immeasurably better to have liquor dispensed in public places than to have the sale clandestinely driven to the homes as is often now the case.

Secure Another Industry

The Henry Hope & Sons By-law is to give a site and an exemption from taxes (except school taxes and local improvement taxes) for ten years.

The company agree to erect a building 80x 200 feet, and invest at least $60,000 in building and plant and to employ from the start at least fifty persons.

The cost to the ratepayers at the present assessment will be less than 12 cents a year on an assessment of $1,000 for twent years. But the increased population will mean an increased assessment to bear the small necessary rate and reduce this 12 cents.

At the present assessment of the site the city receives from the land $97.00 in taxes, and at a moderate assessment the company will pay $260.00 in taxes over the exemption.

Each new factory means more employment, more population, more business and more prosperity.

CAMPBELLFORD CONDITIONS WERE SLANDERED

INDIGNANT PROTEST BY LEADING CITIZENS

Four Year Old Slanders, Revived in Last Nights Papers, Exposed—Local Option a Great Success in All the Places Mentioned

In last night's issues of the Peterboro evening papers appeared the results of the first efforts of the Anti-Local Optionists to discredit the Local Option By-Law. Their chief effort was in the form of a four column advertisement headed "Campbellford Citizens Protest Against Local Option." Underneath was published a copy of what claimed to be a statement signed by what purported to be eighteen citizens of Campbellford to the effect that they had weighed Local Option in the balance and found it wanting, that liquor selling seemed to be on the increase, that business had left the place and that the law was undesirable. Down the side of this petition appeared statements apparently signed by Joseph T. Beatty, ex-Reeve of Omemee, J. H. Burgess, druggist, of Lakefield, Jno. J. Rogers of Norwood, A. C. Barrett of Havelock, Henry Snider of Brighton, and one or two others. These parties claimed that local option had proved a failure in their respective districts and in most cases indicated that more liquor was being sold than formerly. The significant feature of all these statements was the fact that without an exception not one to them was dated.

MISREPRESENTATIONS EXPOSED.

On seeing this advertisement the officers of the Citizens Local Option Committee immediately sent a representative to Campbellford, who reached there about ten o'clock this morning. He soon found that the statement published in the Peterborough papers was four years old. It was circulated in Campbellford four years ago when Local Option had been in effect for only about a year. Investigation revealed the fact that among the eighteen names appearing on the paper were those of some men who have since lost their business through excessive drinking. Two of the men have never been citizens of the town. Another is dead; another lives in Toronto and several when seen stated that they are now in favor of Local Option although for a while some years ago they thought it was going to prove a failure. Others of those on the statement agreed to furnish interviews during the afternoon.

COUNTER-PETITION.

When it was found this morning that false statements were being published in the Peterborough papers about the success of Local Option in Campbellford, arrangements were immediately made to circulate a counter-petition expressing the unbounded satisfaction of the professional and business men of Campbellford as well as of the manufacturers with the working of Local Option. By one o'clock this petition, which stated emphatically that the town of Campbellford is thriving under Local Option, that hotel accommodation is good, and that the town is a cleaner and better place in which to live than ever before, had been signed by Mayor C. L. Owen, Police Magistrate G. A. Payne, Editor G. A. Kingston, of the Campbellford Herald, F. C. and R. C. Weston of the Weston Shoe Co., Limited, Charles Davidson, Councillor, W. H. Ashton, foreman in the Woollen Mills, and by many others. This statement is dated December 31st, 1912, and by this evening will be largely signed by the most representative citizens of the town.

OTHER PLACES HEARD FROM.

In addition to sending a representative to Campbellford the long distance telephone was used with the result that J. H. Burgess, druggist of Lakefield, and Jno. J. Rogers, of Norwood, both stated that they had never signed such a statement as was published in the Peterborough papers last night by the liquor interests, that they had never authorized the publication of such a statement and that they had repeatedly endeavored to prevent its circulation. The Reeves of Lakefield and Norwood as well as Mr. Rogers, of Norwood, declared Local Option to be a success.

BRIGHTON CONDITIONS.

Reeve Wade, of Brighton, stated that no one of the name of Henry Snider lived in Brighton, that Local Option in Brighton is a great success, that it has been in force for several years, and that there is no mention of repealing it.

Reeve Joyce, of Havelock, stated that there is no one of the name of A. C. Barratt in Havelock, that the people of Havelock are well satisfied with Local Option, that he does not know of any liquor selling in Havelock, and that he has not heard any talk of a repeal contest.

Reeve R. J. Mulligan, of Omemee, stated that it is over three years since Joseph T. Beatty was Reeve of Omemee, and that he heard recently that Mr Beatty is now a believer in Local Option, especially if Local Option can be carried in Lindsay and Peterborough. Reeve Mulligan stated that Local Option is a great success in Omemee. The banker told him yesterday that business is thriving, and a hog buyer told him that that the farmers never shipped so many hogs as at present. There is no drinking among the boys of the district that he knows of, and he believes he would know of it if there was drinking.

A former official of the License Department in Toronto stated that the party in Wyoming whose name was published in last night's papers, was a hotel-keeper who had frequently been convicted for selling liquor illegally, both under license and under Local Option, and that he is practically an outlaw in his own home district.

May not the citizens of Peterborough conclude, when the liquor interests are forced to resort to such tactics to uphold their case, that Local Option must be a splendid thing thing for any town or city. All the citizens of Peterborough should be careful about believing any statements published or distributed during the next few days by the liquor interests, because the evidence here given shows that they are not to be depended upon. 1d16

FATALITY ENDS YOUTHFUL PLAY

Frank, the eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Buntian, 145 Stewart street, was accidentally shot by his fifteen year old brother about two o'clock yesterday afternoon, and three hours later died at the Nicholls Hospital. They had been playing with a revolver and cartridges.

Mr. and Mrs. Buntian and family returned from the West yesterday, and, of course, were not settled in their home. Mr. Buntian had gone up stairs to rest himself, and Mrs. Buntian was busy at the rear of the house when the accident occurred, and consequently were not there to prevent the children from taking, as they did, the revolver and cartridges from the father's bag and playing with them.

The little boy was shot beside his right eye, and the bullet lodged behind the ear.

Drs. Ross and Frederick were called and he was rushed to the Nicholls Hospital, where he died about 4.30 o'clock. Coroner Greer was notified, but it was not thought necessary to hold an inquest.

THREE KNIGHTS BACHELOR ADDED TO DOMINION'S ROLL

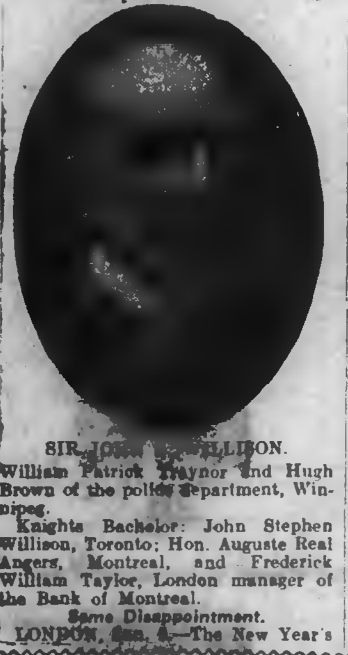
J. S. Willison, Hon. Auguste Angers and Frederick Taylor Now Wear Titles While Premiers of Ontario and Newfoundland Are Elevated to Rank of K.C.M.G.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Among the New Year's honors which were published yesterday are the following:

K. C. M. G.'s: Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario; Sir Edward Patrick Morris, Premier of Newfoundland.

C. M. G.'s: Lt.-Col. William Patrick Anderson, Department of Marine and Fisheries, Ottawa; Zachary Taylor Wood, Northwest Mounted Police; George Thomas Allen, secretary-treasurer of the Australian Commonwealth; Hon. T. Quinlan, late Speaker of the Western Australia Legislative Assembly; Leonard Stowe, clerk of the New Zealand Parliament.

King's police medal: John C. McRae, late chief of police of Winnipeg;



SIR JO[illegible]ILLISON.

William Patrick Traynor and Hugh Brown of the police department, Winnipeg.

Knights Bachelor: John Stephen Willison, Toronto; Hon. Auguste Real Angers, Montreal, and Frederick William Taylor, London manager of the Bank of Montreal.

Same Disappointment.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The New Year's list of honors issued yesterday, according to custom, proved disappointing. Two peerages, seven baronetcies and 18 knighthoods are conferred. Government officials, manufacturers and merchants almost monopolize the rewards. The stage, literature and art were entirely ignored.

The Liberal Government has been criticized so sharply for having previously inflated the peerage, while professing to be extremely democratic, that it caused no surprise that only two additions were made to the list, those being Sir George Sydenham Clark, a distinguished Indian official, and Sir George Kemp, a wealthy ex-M.P., whose selection is considered remarkable because he recently resigned his seat on the ground that he was unable to support home rule.

Vice-Admiral Sir Percy Scott received a baronetcy as a reward for his successful work in improving the gunnery of the navy, for which he devised a new system that has been recently tried with excellent results.

Among the new knights is Francis Darwin, a son of the late Charles Darwin.

The Earl of Desart, former solicitor of the treasury, and Sir John Allsebrook Simon, the Solicitor-General, are made Privy Councillors.

Sir John Stephen Willison is editor of The Toronto News and was formerly editor of The Toronto Globe. In 1902 he executed a political volte-face and left the Liberal party. He is author of a life of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He is 56 years of age.

Sir Auguste Angers has been Conservative leader in the Quebec Legislature, Federal M.P., judge, Lieutenant-Governor, and Cabinet Minister in the Thompson, Bowell and Tupper Governments. He is 74 years of age.

Sir Frederick William Taylor entered the bank's service in 1878. He has been manager at Deseronto, assistant inspector, manager at Chicago and finally at London, Eng. He is 50 years of age.

May we learn to be frugal before we are obliged to be so.

BISHOP DONAHUE AGAINST PROHIBITION

I am opposed to prohibition, among other reasons, because it does not prohibit. I have ever set my face against intemperance, yet I prefer to see a man drink a glass of beer openly than buy and drink a keg sneakingly and hypocritically. I have traveled this state extensively in the last eighteen years, and I have invariably found prohibition a miserable failure, producing only boot-leggers, dive proprietors and keepers of assignation houses on the one hand and weak, miserable sots on the other, who buy whiskey by the keg and lie down by it till they are sodden.

Archbishop Ireland in a recent broadsheet in our local papers is reported to have written or said that whiskey was the cause of most of the murders in this country. I don't believe he ever said it or wrote it, but the statement is flagrantly opposed to the facts. To pick out a few of the recent crimes: Was it whiskey that led Beatty to murder his wife on the lonely road near Richmond? Did drink drive the man in Boston to poison in most cowardly fashion the young girl whom he had promised to make his wife? Is intemperance responsible for the cold-blooded crime of Becker in New York, or the monstrous outrages on young children by the man in Georgia, within the past few days, or the murder of the eloping girl in Chicago? No; our experience tells us that these crimes had as their causes lust or greed for gold.

But Archbishop Ireland, strong advocate of temperance as he is, did, together with the oldest and most experienced officers in the army, strenuously oppose the abolition of the canteen. This attempt at prohibition at army posts and soldiers' homes has resulted in vastly increased drunkenness and disease among the men. I have investigated matters on this head at Old Point Comfort. With the canteen the old soldiers took their glass of beer or [illegible] stated occasions. Without it they are lured into the dens of vice outside the home, are stupefied with drugged beer or whiskey, robbed and infected with loathsome disease. In those vile haunts the degenerated and degraded, without distinction of color, mingle in debauches which words fail to describe. The abolition of the canteen has produced a veritable hell upon earth around army posts, and if our representatives in Congress had the courage to look facts in the face the present regime would not last twenty-four hours. Now, what the doing away with the canteen has brought upon the army the success of the prohibition amendment would do for our beloved state.

I know that thousands of good men and women are in favor of its enactment. I respect their views; for many of them I have a deep admiration, but I trust that the good sense and sound judgment of a majority of the voters will, on Tuesday next, prevail. Let us be Christian men of moderation in drink as in all other things, but do not let us permit others to put a muzzle on us as they do on dogs!

R. C. Bishop of Wheeling, W.V.

HON. ADAM BECK,

The Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission, and other speakers will speak at the Opera House to-night.

PUBLIC MEETING ON THE POWER QUESTION TO-NIGHT

Hon. Adam Beck should face a large audience at the Grand Opera House to-night, when he speaks on the power question. Peterborough has been in the rear of the procession too long. A more prominent position is desirable and the Hydro-Electric Commission can be of great assistance.

To electric light users the question of cheaper power is a most important one, and in order that the ratepayers can vote intelligently on January 6th. Hon Mr. Beck will give the necessary information to-night.

The meeting is called for eight o'clock.

Canadian Press Despatch

Ottawa, Jan. 2 — Lizzie Potvin, aged 17 of Dacre, Renfrew County, was instantly killed there yesterday by a shot from a rifle in the hands of James Lagree, the eight year old son, Jas. Lagree of Renfrew. The boy was visiting his uncle, Alfred Lagree, a storekeeper at Dacre. Young Lagree found the rifle behind the shop door where uncle had left it, and it went off, the bullet passing through the Potvin girl's back as she left the shop, after making some purchases.

Toronto declared itself in favor of a reform in the present system of assessment by giving the question: "Are you in favor of assessment business, improvements and incomes on a lower basis than land?" a majority of 19,020.

H. C. Hockin was elected mayor by a vote of three to one and the Board of Control for the year is made up of Messrs. Foster, O'Neil, Church and McCarthy. Victory For Beck.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 2.—Hon. Adam Beck won a notable victory yesterday when the people elected seven aldermen out of twelve pledged to submit a bylaw for the electrification of the London & Port Stanley Railway, a city owned line, to Lake Erie.

Of the twelve elected yesterday three are new men and one an ex-alderman. Of the old council two are defeated. One of these, Ald. Coles, was the father of the federal square proposal, which was endorsed yesterday. This provides for $200,000 for a site for a city hall. Of the industrial loan bylaws one is carried. This provides a loan of $20,000 to the Denison Iron Co. The aldermen elected are: Richter, Rose, Bennett, Moore, Glass, Ashplant, Saunders, White, Stein, Spittal, Robinson, Johnston, Donnelly.

The school trustees elected are Gammage, Gonn, Strong, Greenlees and Shaw.

The water commissioners are Stevenson and Wyatt.

DAM UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

N. Y. States Attorney-General [illegible] on Long Sault Scheme

ALBANY, N.Y., Jan. 2.—The law passed by the Legislature of 1907 and signed by Governor Hughes, granting certain rights to the Long Sault Developement Co. in the vicinity of Long Sault Rapids, in the St. Lawrence River, near Cornwall, Ont., for power development purposes, is unconstitutional, according to an opinion sent to the Senate last night by Attorney-General Carmody in response to a resolution adopted by the Senate on March 29, 1912, requesting him to submit his views on the constitutionality of the act.

The Attorney-General holds that the powers and privileges granted the company are in direct violation of various provisions of the state constitution and that the Legislature exceeded its authority in making such grants. He says the law in question is private and local and grants an exclusive privilege; that the land acquired is within the forest preserve, and for these reasons the act is unconstitutional.

ELECTION IN THE SPRING

Government May Decide to Go to the People

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, Jan. 2.—The Tribune's London Cable says Asquith's question to Bonar Law in the course of the Home Rule debate last night, whether if the Home Rule Bill was submitted to the people and approved by them would the Unionist party support Ulster in resisting it, lends color to previous forecasts of a general election in the spring. It is believed the government may consider the present Tory differences over Tariff Reform an opportunity to appeal to the people.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—An attempt was made yesterday afternoon to instil some semblance of new year vigor into the home rule debate in the House of Commons. The members from Ulster proposed the exclusion of the northern province of Ireland from the operations of the measure.

Sir Edward Carson, in moving an amendment to that effect, pleaded for serious consideration of the question, which might, he said, be vital to the success of the bill and to the whole constitution of the United Kingdom. It was, he said, a question whether the House of Commons had made up its mind to drive Ulster out of the constitution under which is desired to remain. Never, he concluded, without the use of force could the Ulster people be compelled to submit to the degradation of a Parliament in Dublin which was abhorrent and loathsome to them.

Premier Asquith followed Sir Edward Carson and immediately made it quite clear that the Government would not accept the amendment to the home rule bill.

"It would wreck the bill," he declared, as the effect of the amendment would be to exclude several nationalist counties from the operations of the act. Ireland, he continued, must be treated as a whole on the principle that what was beneficial for the country as a whole could not in the long run be injurious to any part thereof.

The Premier asked the Unionists to declare clearly what their attitude would be if the home rule bill in its present form was submitted to the electorate and approved.

Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, said that if the bill were put before the electors and they supported it the Conservative party would not encourage resistance to it by the Ulsterites, but if the Government attempted to force the measure through against the wishes of the people of Ulster he would heartily assist them in resisting it. Mr. Law said he believed the Ulster loyalists would rather submit to being ruled by a foreign country than by the Nationalists.

On division the amendment was defeated by a vote of 294 to 197.

ANGLO-SAXON UNITY.

Ambassador Bryce's Cheering New Year's Message.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Members of the diplomatic corps here yesterday extended New Year's greetings to the world through the columns of one of the local papers.

"The advent of the new year tends to demonstrate," says Ambassador Bryce, "that there never was a time when the English-speaking nations of the world were more anxious to be on friendly terms with all other foreign countries, and also to be friendly among themselves."

Similar in tenor are the others, expressing hope of peace among nations and of prosperity both in this country and throughout the world.

ORILLIA PROSPERS WITHOUT THE BAR

BY MAYOR FROST, WHO WILL SPEAK IN PETERBOROUGH ON SUNDAY.

"Local Option will kill the town; grass will grow on the streets; farmers will deal elsewhere; hotels will close their doors and sheds will be boarded up; factories will lose their men; stores will lose their trade; houses will be empty; commercial men will give the town the 'go-by' and Orillia will be dead." These are some of the things that were said by those who bitterly opposed the passing of the Local Option law in Orillia some five years ago. Not one of these predictions ever came true, and the exact opposite has been our experience. Orillia was never more prosperous in all her history. Instead of killing the town Local Option has proved to be a blessing and advantage from both a moral and commercial point of view.

Instead of the grass growing on our streets the traffic has grown so rapidly that the Council must immediately face a large expenditure to put them in anything like decent repair. The farmers appreciate conditions so well that they come from long distances to trade in a town where they and their sons are not tempted by the open bar.

Hotel accommodation was never better under license — hardly as good. The sheds are still open. The factories are more busy than ever, and the merchants never did a greater trade. Houses never commanded higher rental. We still see an occasional commercial man and Orillia is about as lively a place for a "dead town" as one would wish to see.

When Local Option came into force our population was 5,571. To-day it is over 7,500. Our assessment was $2,178,280. This year the assessor makes it $3,944,335. Our postoffice receipts were $16,844. This year they were $22,251. Our customs returns amounted to $86,352. This year they exceed $112,000.

Our power plant, costing in the neighborhood of $400,000, will have to be considerably enlarged to meet the demand for increased service.

Over five hundred houses, many stores, and several factories, employing hundreds of hands, have been built during the past three years.

The churches have shared in the general prosperity. A new Catholic church has been erected at a cost of over $65,000. The Methodist Church have spent $30,000 on a modern Sunday school, and the Baptists have for the same spent $10,000. The Y. M. C. A. have doubled the size of their plant at a cost of $33,000, and at the present moment the Presbyterians are erecting an addition that will cost about $50,000.

The law is very strictly enforced. Drunkeness is a rare thing on our streets. Of course there is a certain amount of bottle drinking, as there always will be, but the percentage is very small. There are no "blind-pigs" operating in Orillia. I have this on the authority of the Chief of Police, and a Government Detective who recently investigated the matter fully. In the last year under license there were were 126 convictions in our Police Court, five men were sent to the Central Prison and six to Kingston Penitentiary, with sentences aggregating over eighteen years. Last year's record was 60 convictions, mostly for minor offences, one man being sent to Central Prison for six months—surely a great difference.

The truth of the matter is the working out of Local Option, in so far as this municipality is concerned, is no longer an experiment, but a distinct success, amply justifying the adoption of the measure.

The opinion of the great body of our people, the testimony of manufacturers, business men and representative workingmen, coupled with the records of our Police Department, all bear out the assertion that closing the bars has proven entirely satisfactory. There are few indeed who would wish to return to the former conditions.

In fact I am persuaded our people will never again tolerate the open bar, consenting to receive in return for the privilege of sale gold that is blistered with tears, smeared in blood, and cankered with a thousand sins.

W. S. FROST, Mayor.

Orillia, Dec. 27, 1912.

TURKISH PEACE TERMS ARE MORE REASONABLE

Latest Conditions Offered by Ottoman Delegates Agree to Cede Macedonia and Epirus But Want Mediation Regarding Albania and Crete.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The peace conference between the delegates of the Balkan allies and the Turkish Empire settled down to real business yesterday afternoon, in spit of a temporary hitch caused by M. Madjaroff, the Bulgarian, departing in indignation from the meeting with the declared intention of informing the British Foreign Office that the war would be resumed by the allies.

The Turkish envoys when the conference gathered again later, presented in writing new proposals, which are a great advance on their first offer. They now express themselves as ready to cede absolutely Macedonia and Epirus, with Salonica, and as being ready to discuss the question of the fortress of Adrianople and the future boundary between Turkey and Bulgaria in the Province of Thrace.

They still refuse to give up the islands in the Aegean Sea and desire to submit the question of Albania and Crete to the European powers.

It was only with much difficulty that the Turks would divulge the exact terms of their note to the press. They were as follows:

First, the rectification of the Turco-Bulgarian frontier by making the boundary west of the line now occupied by the troops of the allies in the vilayet of Adrianople.

Second, the question of the status of Adrianople to be settled by Turkey and Bulgaria direct.

Third, the cession of the remainder of European Turkey, including Janina and Scutari, to the allies.

Fourth, the Albanian and Cretan questions to be solved by the powers.

Fifth, the Aegean Islands to remain Turkish.

The conference lasted three hours and a half yesterday, and the delegates then adjourned until Friday.

The official account of the conference says:

"The Turkish delegates to-day presented counter proposals which were discussed by the conference. An agreement was reached on certain points, while on certain others the discussion was adjourned until Friday."

The representatives of the allied Balkan nations recognized that the Turks have taken a great step toward meeting their demands.

On the question of the Turco-Bulgarian frontier in the Province of Thrace in European Turkey, Dr. S. Daneff, the leader of the Bulgarian deputation, spoke with firmness. He insisted that the Turkish proposal on this question must approximate very closely to the Bulgarian demands if an agreement were to be reached.

During the conference Michel Madjaroff, the Bulgarian minister to England, had uttered a sharp protest against the dilatory tactics of the Ottoman peace plenipotentiaries, concluding with the declaration of his intention to inform the British Foreign Office that the allies would resume the war.

The concessions mean an almost complete surrender of European Turkey. But the Turks refuse to give up Adrianople. There is an imperishable sentiment which makes them crave for the Holy City, the earliest site conquered by Murad I. in 1361. This condition probably explains yesterday's sudden yielding to the allies on other points. Turkey seemingly hopes by ceding almost all her territory to be allowed to retain the only point on which she insists. It is thought likely she also may be ready to cede her islands for the sake of seeing the green banner of the Prophet still waving over "The Jewel of the Orient," as Adrianople is called.

"Elnora," he said at last, "if it hadn't been for one thing I'd have tried to take legal steps to make you ours when you were three years old. Maggie said then it wasn't any use, but I've always held on. You see, I was the first man there, honey, and there are things, you see, that you can't ever make anybody else understand. She loved him, Elnora. She just made an idol of him. There was that oozy green hole, with the thick scum broke and two or three big bubbles slowly rising that were the breath of his body. There she was in spasms of agony and beside her the great heavy log she'd tried to throw him. I can't ever forgive her for turning against you and spoiling your childhood as she has, but I couldn't forgive anybody else for abusing her. Maggie has got no mercy on her, but Maggie didn't see what I did, and I've never tried to make it very clear to her. You be a patient girl and wait a little longer. After all, she's your mother, and you're all she's got but a memory, and it might do her good to let her know that she was fooled in that."

"It would kill her!" cried the girl swiftly. "Uncle Wesley, it would kill her! What do you mean?"

"Nothing," said Wesley Sinton soothingly. "Nothing, honey. That was just one of them fool things a man says when he is trying his best to be wise. You see she loved him mightily, and they'd been married only a year, and what she was loving was what she thought he was. She hadn't really got acquainted with the man yet. If it had been even one more year she could have borne it and you'd have got justice. Having been a teacher, she was better educated and smarter than the rest of us, and so she was more sensitive like. She can't understand she was loving a dream. So I say it might do her good if somebody that knew could tell her, but I swear to gracious I never could. I've heard her out at the edge of that quagmire calling in them wild spells of hers off and on for the last sixteen years and imploring the swamp to give him back to her, and I've got out of bed when I was pretty tired and come down to see she didn't go in herself or harm you. What she feels is too deep for me. I've got to respectin' her grief, and I can't get over it. Go home and tell your ma, honey, and ask her nice and kind to help you. If she won't, then you got to swallow that little lump of pride in your neck and come to Aunt Maggie, like you been a-coming all your life."

"I'll ask mother, but I can't take your money, Uncle Wesley, indeed I can't. I'll wait a year and earn some and enter next year."

"There's one thing you don't consider, Elnora," said the man earnestly. "And that's what you are to Maggie. She's a little like your ma. She hasn't given up to it, and she's struggling on brave, but when we buried our second little girl the light went out of Maggie's eyes, and it's not come back. The only time I ever see a hint of it is when she thinks she's done something that makes you happy, Elnora. Now, you go easy about refusing her anything she wants to do for you."

"Uncle Wesley, you are a dear," said Elnora—"just a dear! If I can't possibly get that money any way else on earth I'll come and borrow it of you, and then I'll pay it back if I dig ferns from the swamp and sell them from door to door in the city. I'll even plant them, so that they will be sure to come up in the spring. I have been sort of panic stricken all day and couldn't think. I can gather nuts and sell them. Freckles sold moths and butterflies, and I've a lot collected. Of course I am going back tomorrow. I can find a way to get the books. Don't you worry about me. I am all right."

As Elnora neared her own door her mother said:

"What kept you so? I expected you an hour ago."

Elnora looked into her mother's face and smiled. It was a queer sort of a little smile and would have reached the depths with any normal mother.

"I see you've been bawling," said Mrs. Comstock. "I thought you'd get your fill in a hurry. That's why I wouldn't go to any expense. If we keep out of the poorhouse we have to cut the corners close. It's likely this Brushwood road tax will eat up all we've saved in years. Where the land tax is to come from I don't know. It gets bigger every year. If they are going to dredge the swamp ditch again they'll just have to take the land to pay for it. I can't, that's all."

Elnora again smiled that pitiful smile.

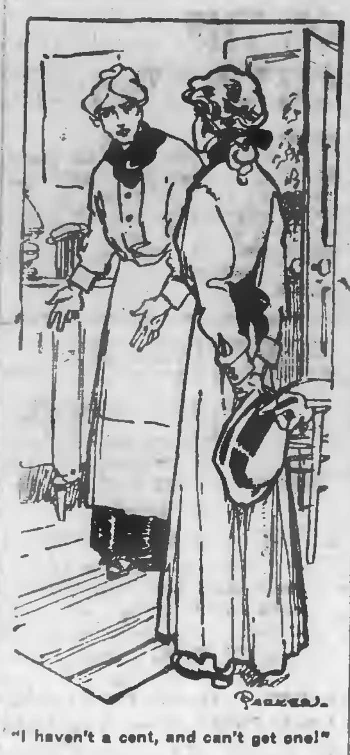
"Do you think I didn't know that I was funny and would be laughed at?" she asked.

"Funny!" cried Mrs. Comstock hotly.

"Yes, funny—a regular caricature," answered Elnora. "But there's always two sides. The professor said in the algebra class that he never had a better solution and explanation than mine of the proposition he gave me, which scored one for me in spite of my clothes."

"Well, I wouldn't brag on myself."

"That was poor taste," admitted Elnora; "but, you see, it is a case of whistling to keep up my courage. I honestly could see that I would have looked just as well as the rest of them if I had been dressed as they were. We can't afford that, so I have to find something else to brace me. It was pretty bad, mother."



"I haven't a cent, and can't get one!"

"Well, I'm glad you got enough of it!"

"Oh, but I haven't!" hurried on Elnora. "I just got a start. The hardest is over. Tomorrow they won't be surprised. They will know what to expect. I am sorry to hear about the dredge. Is it really going through?"

"Yes. I got my notification today. The tax will be something enormous. I don't know as I can spare you, even if you are willing to be a laughing stock for the town."

"I have had two startling pieces of news today," said Elnora. "I did not know I would need any money. I thought the city furnished the books, and there is an out of town tuition also. I need $10 in the morning. Will you please let me have it?"

"Ten dollars!" cried Mrs. Comstock. "Ten dollars! Why don't you say a hundred and be done with it? I could get one as easy as the other. I knew what you would run into! But you are so bulldog stubborn and set in your way I thought I would just let you try the world a little and see how you liked it."

Elnora pushed back her chair and looked at her mother.

"Do you mean to say," she demanded, "that you knew, when you let me go into a city classroom and reveal the fact before all of them, that I expected to have my books handed out to me? Do you mean to say that you knew I had to pay for them?"

Mrs. Comstock evaded the direct question.

Catarrhal Bad Breath

Corrected Quickly by the Use of Catarrhozone

Catarrh is an inflammation. Where there is inflammation there is always more or less offensive secretion. Inflammation may be of the very active sort, but it is often of the slow kind, and this is the particular form in which the breath is rendered offensive and the presence of the sufferer becomes an offence to every person of delicate sensibility.

Bad breath is in itself sufficient to urge you to correct it, because one dislikes to be unpleasant to their friends, but this form of catarrh is dangerous because it supplies a hotbed for the [illegible] of Consumption or of other diseases of the throat and lungs.

Bad breath is an evidence that the microbes have found a good resting place and are carrying on their evil inroads into the health of the body.

Catarrhozone acts at once and destroys these minute organisms, but it does more—it heals the inflamed surfaces in which they found a nesting place and consequently removes both cause and effects of their action.

If we only rightly estimated the value of prevention and used Catarrhozone at the beginning of a cold or just before it becomes well seated, the deadly ravages of Consumption would be stayed and the terrible agonies of sufferers of Asthma or Bronchitis completely abolished.

There is no remedy as effective for bad breath, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., as Catarrhozone. Besides being healing and soothing it is germ destroying. Nothing ever offered to the public can compare with it in its promptness, efficiency, and permanency of action, and you can buy it from any dealer in medicine throughout the Dominion of Canada, 25c, 50c, and $1.00 sizes. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

PRESENTATIONS MADE AT SALEM

Special Correspondence.

Salem, Dec. 26.—On Monday, Dec. 23rd, about thirty of the young people of Salem Sunday School, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Sargent taking them completely by surprise, and presented them with an address and presentation as a token of their appreciation for their services.

After the young people gathered and they had had some music, Mr. James Grattan stepped forward and read the following address, and Mr. Roy Webster presented the beautiful presents:

To Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Sargent,

Dear friends,—We, the members bers of the Salem Sunday School, have met in your home to-night to spend with you a few hours of this festive season and to express our Christmas greeting.

It is with much pleasure and gratification that we re-count the steps of progress which, with God's blessing, our school has taken while under your faithful superintendency.

We wish to thank you most sincerely for the able service you have rendered in conducting our school, and for the cheerfulness with which you have sacrificed the oftentimes much needed hour of rest, in order that we might prosper in our work. In token of our appreciation we ask you to accept this watch fob.

To Mrs. Sargent we present this ring, whose golden circlet is to us emblematic of your increasing helpfulness, not only as president of our organization, but as a willing and efficient promoter of good in all branches of our Sunday School work.

We join with heart and voice in conveying to you both, the good old wish—"A Merry, Merry Christmas," and may the best that Heaven and earth affords, be yours throughout the coming year.

Signed on behalf of the S. S.,
JAMES L. GRATTAN,
ARNOLD R. WEBSTER,
CLARA ARMSTRONG,
SADIE JOHNSTON.

At the close of this address Mr. Sargent suitably replied.

The evening was spent in games and music, and refreshments were served. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close with hearty greetings of the season.

ONTARIO'S FIGHT AGAINST DISEASE

84,341 Deaths Last Year Due To Various Diseases. — Only 98 Caused By Alcoholism.

While prohibition advocates are seeking to concentrate public attention on the liquor question, and wildly exaggerating the number of deaths attributable to alcohol, there is a really serious question, vitally concerning every family, that is pressingly engaging intelligent minds.

Recently the Rev. Dr. Chambers, Governor of the Toronto Jail, made the public statement that last year there were 5,000 deaths due to strong drink in the Province of Ontario. The annual report, just out, of the Registrar-General of Ontario, reveals that there were just 98 deaths in the entire Province due to chronic and acute alcoholism. Here there is a discrepancy of 4,002 deaths between the figure named in the Rev. Dr. Chambers' assertion and the facts as stated in the Registrar-General's Report.

Such inexcusable and preposterous exaggerations not only discredit the statements made by the prohibitionists, but they show that the whole tendency of the prohibition movement is to becloud the popular mind and divert it from the great and pressing evils demanding remedy.

Those who are interested in preserving human life and in realizing the exact status of mortality in the Province of Ontario may consider these startling facts now set forth in the Registrar-General's Report:—

In the 10 years from 1902 to 1911 there were 5,015 deaths from diphtheria, 5,796 deaths from typhoid fever, 7,215 deaths from bright's disease, 13,555 deaths from cancer, 20,922 deaths from organic heart disease, and 25,937 deaths from tuberculosis. In a single year —1911—8,235 children died before completing their fifth year, and of this number 6,421 died under one year of age.

Here is a problem to cause people to think. When out of a total last year of 84,341 deaths in Ontario only 98 could be attributed to excess in drink, the imaginary disastrous results of alcohol can be dismissed from consideration. No doubt, excess in such hard intoxicants as whiskey, gin, brandy, etc., may have had an indirect influence in superinducing a certain number of deaths, but the number was very small compared to the whole. Moreover, it is a noteworthy fact that wherever prohibition is introduced a mild beverage like beer is driven out because of its difficulty of transportation and concealment, and the large and surreptitious use of whiskey goes on. Beer which has but 3 or 4 per cent. of alcohol has no such ruinous effects as the poison whiskey which has 50 or more per cent. of alcohol.

But whatever may be the problematical effect of alcohol in its direct relation to disease, it is certain that few, if any, of the greater number of deaths was even remotely associated with drink.

Diphtheria is a distinct germ disease, and like other infant diseases, usually originates, as the Registrar-General's Report remarks, in bad housing, impure milk and inferior food, and other such causes. Great numbers of cases of bright's disease result from privation, overwork, worry and improper food. Of cancer, the report says, "It is unfortunate that the medical fraternity are, more or less, in a state of perplexity as to the cause of cancer." Tuberculosis, another germ disease, flourishes in unsanitary or overcrowded quarters where there is a lack of air and sunshine. As for typhoid fever the report remarks, "The greatest cause of typhoid in the Province in undoubtedly sewage-contaminated water. Several very extensive epidemics can be traced to this cause.

If prohibitionists are so much concerned about the rate of mortality, they have an opportunity of joining in some real work that will be productive of salutary results in thus eliminating or reducing the causes of these diseases. Instead of denouncing the fancied effects of drink they might, for example, learn that impure water has swept away nearly 6,000 persons in ten years, and with that knowledge, give their time to agitating for a better water supply in quarters where it is badly needed.

ROBBERS WERE SKILFUL.

Jewel Thieves In Toronto Used Up-to-date Devices.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—Master criminals successfully carried out an ingeniously-planned robbery at Scheuer's jewelry store, 88-90 Yonge street, sometime near midnight on Tuesday. About $200 worth of valuable were taken from the show cases and so far the burglars have not been apprehended.

For daring and cleverness the robbery can well be classed with the largest that have occurred in Toronto during the past five years.

Above the jewelry store is situated a suite of vacant rooms. The robbers gained access to these and with a large auger bored holes in the floor, and removed the board. Boring a hole through the plaster the men attempted to pass a closed umbrella through it. Too much plaster fell, however, and they withdrew it.

The intention was to poke the umbrella through a small hole in the plaster and catch the plaster in it. Failing in their purpose the burglars waited until the bells and whistles were signalling the New Year. The remaining plaster was knocked off in small pieces so that it did not make much noise on the floor.

The robbers passed through the hole on to the top of a show case. They descended to the floor and then began operations on the showcase. The one chosen for the robbery was situated near the Yonge street window. It was carefully plastered with heavy flypaper. After wrapping a miniature canon in an overcoat, the robbers struck the glass below the flypaper. The glass broke, but none fell. Instead it stuck to the flypaper.

About 72 diamond rings were taken, in addition to other jewelry. The robbers made their getaway in the same manner as they came.

THREE IN SUICIDE PACT.

Young Men Who Loved Same Girl Carried Out Dramatic Agreement.

VIENNA, Jan. 2.—A suicide pact which three youths carried out in a cafe here on Monday night has been explained by a young girl, who says that the youths were all ardently in love with her and had threatened to commit suicide on her account.

The three young men were drinking tea in a secluded corner of the cafe when all suddenly fell from their chairs dying. They had evidently placed poison in their beverage and the result proved fatal in each case.

A photograph of the trio was found in their possession addressed to the girl, who told of their threat.

Unable To Raise Barge.

SARNIA, Jan. 2.—The tugs of the Reid Wrecking Co. of Sarnia yesterday again attempted to upright the overturned sand barge Hustler, which sank in a collision with another barge near Algonac about a month ago, when two marine men of Goderich, Ont., were drowned. Two powerful tugs broke two number seven steel cables and several barge hawsers when the boat was nearly upright with the result that she went back again.

The air pressure was so great when lifting the one side out of the water that the ropes could not stand the strain.

Close Fight In Sarnia.

SARNIA, Jan. 2.—Present indications are that the local option fight is to be a very close one. Sarnia being a border town is peculiarly situated. Should the town go dry the Port Huron hotelkeepers are looking for a big boom in their line of trade. The American police also anticipate a big increase in their duties should the measure carry.

The chair was taken by Bro. D. H. Currie, pastor of the Presbyterian church, who made a brief introductory speech, eulogizing the Order and inviting the young men to become members of it. Miss Florence McKay opened the program with a piano solo and later repeated with a left-hand number. She played all the accompaniments; her work was of a very high order and much applauded. The delineations of Miss Pearl O'Neil called forth encores and double encores to which she responded most affably. Her powers of mimicry are so entrancing that the audience seemed to never tire of her renditions. Miss Jessie Fax appeared in solo and duet numbers which were much appreciated. She possesses a sweet soprano voice of high register. Mr. Howard Russell sang "The Carnival," "Hail King George," "A Scotch Song" and "A New Christmas Song," in splendid voice, with clear enunciation and dignified stage effect. He was a great favorite and received great applause. The encores were many and the performers very liberal in responses. It was a disappointment that Mr. James Fax was unable to take his part, owing to a throat affection which appeared after the practice in the afternoon, but he was present and put on a quartette at the last of the concert. It was wildly cheered even though Mr. Fax's voice was scarcely audible. He was sadly disappointed and so were many of ther audience, but the occurrence was beyond the control of him or of the committee. The order was excellent all through the program, which was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem. The aggregate receipts were $221. The committees in charge are to be congratulated on the signal success of a very pleasant social evening.

Mr. Hubert Cottingham was home for Christmas. He has accepted a position of fireman on the G.T.R. and has had three weeks' experience on the rails.

Mr. Wm. Smythe is spending the holidays with his Omemee friends.

The Misses C. and R. Davis of Peterborough, Messrs. W. and H. Davis, of Bethany; C. Johnston, of Cavanville, and F. McKnight, of Millbrook, were the guests of Miss Hamilton on Christmas Day.

Dr. N. H. and Mrs. Sutton, of Peterborough, came over in their auto the day after Christmas to visit friends.

Miss N. Hamilton, who has charge of the dress-making department of Chas. Ivory's store, was the hostess of a delightful At Home given on Christmas Eve after business hours, in the dress-making apartments, to the employer and employes. The entire staff was present, including Mr. Cronk, of Moose Jaw, a former clerk. The evening was opened by a duet from Miss Hamilton's assistants, the Misses J. Cottingham and M. Clemett. The hostess followed with an able address which called forth speeches from the chairman, Mr. H. Lamb and from the proprietor, Mr. C. Ivory. After a few extempore numbers, refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening was concluded with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

FIRST N. T. R. TRAIN.

Twenty Cars of Wheat Pass Over the Great New Highway.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—The National Transcontinental Railway made good its promise of a year ago when a trainload of wheat arrived in Port Colborne early yesterday morning. Almost a year ago it was stated by the directors of the road that they would have a train running over the entire line before Jan. 1st.

The train consisted of twenty cars of wheat, approximately 600 tons, consigned to the Maple Leaf Milling Co., Ltd., Port Colborne, all of which was grown in Saskatchewan. It was collected by the James Carruthers Co., Ltd.

The wheat is to be unloaded and milled at Port Colborne, and immediately reloaded and forwarded on the same train to St. John, N.B., from where it is to be shipped to South Africa on a ship which is awaiting it.

It is expected that the wheat will be milled before twelve o'clock noon to-day and again on its way before night, arriving in St. John by Saturday. This, when accomplished, will be something of a record, both in transportation and milling.

Major Leonard, who accompanied the train, was greeted along the route by crowds of enthusiastic friends and at Cobalt Mayor Trudel and a committee of citizens were in waiting.

Castro Returns To Europe.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Having abandoned further effort to gain admission to the United States, Gen. Cipriano Castro, the exiled dictator of Venezuela, spent New Year's Day in detention at the immigration station on Ellis Island, angered at the hostility shown him here.

Castro's wishes to return to Europe by a German steamer will be readily granted by the authorities at Washington, according to a despatch from the capital, and if there is no unforeseen obstacle the unwelcome visitor will probably sail for Hamburg on Saturday.

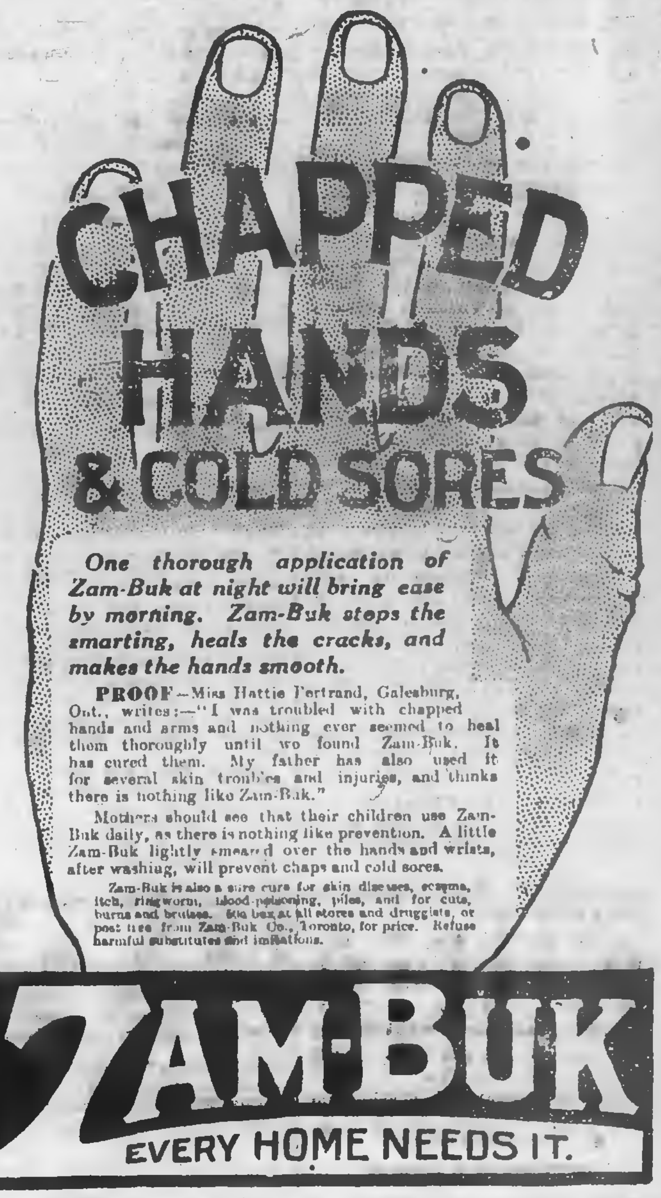
Greeted New Year With Reverence.

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—With the words: "Blessed be God, blessed be His holy name," on their lips, and the host raised by the hand of their archbishop in benediction over their heads, a congregation of over 13,000 persons ushered in the New Year at Notre Dame Church.

River as Law Court.

To act in a legal capacity while enjoying a morning swim—surely a unique record in the annals of law—once fell to the lot of Vice-Chancellor Shadwell. The then Duke of Newcastle had commenced to cut down the timber at Clumber in such a rapid and wholesale manner as to raise the anger of his eldest son, Lord Lincoln, who, finding expostulations useless turned to the law and sought an injunction to restrain his father. Although it was Long Vacation, he ordered his solicitor to press matters forward, for the magnificent trees were falling at an alarming rate.

So up to town posted the attorney, and had the affidavits drawn up the same night. The following morning he repaired to the Vice-Chancellor's house on the banks of the Thames, to find on his arrival that his lordship had gone for his morning's swim. With exemplary presence of mind he chartered a boat, and, after a stiff pull, came up with the judge, and at once stated his case. Meanwhile the Vice-Chancellor trod water, and, on the injunction being formally applied for, granted it forthwith and resumed his swim.



One thorough application of Zam-Buk at night will bring ease by morning. Zam-Buk stops the smarting, heals the cracks, and makes the hands smooth.

PROOF—Miss Hattie Fertrand, Galesburg, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with chapped hands and arms and nothing ever seemed to heal them thoroughly until we found Zam-Buk. It has cured them. My father has also used it for several skin troubles and injuries, and thinks there is nothing like Zam-Buk."

Mothers should see that their children use Zam-Buk daily, as there is nothing like prevention. A little Zam-Buk lightly smeared over the hands and wrists, after washing, will prevent chaps and cold sores.

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin diseases, eczema, itch, ringworm, blood-poisoning, piles, and for cuts, burns and bruises. 50c box at all stores and druggists, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful substitutes and imitations.

EIGHT MEN KILLED.

Bridge Collapses Under Train While Workmen Are Repairing It.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Jan. 2.—Eight men were killed and fifteen injured when a freight train on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad went through a bridge over the Guyandotte River, three miles from here at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The known dead:

Engineer E. S. Webber, Russell, Ky.; Emmett Wood, Tablot, W. Va.; Chas. Maddy, Halbott, W. Va.; John O'Connor, Huntington, W. Va.

It was said that four more ironworkers were missing.

A crew of thirty or more ironworkers were employed in repairing the bridge when the freight train appeared on the main track. Some of them believing the structure to have been weakened left their posts, but others laughed at danger and were carried down with the wreckage when the bridge collapsed under the weight of the train. The fireman of the engine, it was reported, refused to cross the bridge and witnessed the accident.

Brantfird Courier Changes Hands.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 2.—A change in the ownership of The Brantford Courier went into effect yesterday. A joint stock company, headed by W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., and W. S. Brewser, M.P.P., and others have acquired control. The change marks the retirement of R. H. Roville as business manager, while F. Douglas Roville will continue as editor.

Horse Distemper

Prince Edward Farmer Solemnly Declares "Nerviline" Is a Specific.

"After fifty years' experience in raising horses I can safely testify that no remedy gives such good results for an all-round stable liniment as Nerviline." Thus opens the very earnest letter of J. J. Evanston, who lives near Wellington, P. E. "I had a very valuable horse that took distemper a month ago, and was afraid I was going to lose him. His throat swelled and hard lumps developed. His nostrils ran and he had a terrible cough. I tried different remedies, but was unable to relieve my horse of his pain and suffering. [illegible] I mixed a bottle of Nerviline and sweet oil and rubbed the mixture on the throat and chest three times a day and you would scarcely believe the way that horse picked up. Nerviline cured him. I also have used Nerviline for colic in horses and cows, and earnestly recommend it to every man that is raising stock."

Nerviline CURES QUICKLY

For strains, sprains, swellings, colic, distemper, coughs, and colds, no liniment will prove so efficacious in the stable as "Nerviline"—it's good for man or beast, for internal or external use. Wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse substitutes. Large bottles 50c, trial size 25c, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

CORNS CURED IN 24 HOURS

You can painlessly remove any corn, either hard, soft, or bleeding, by applying Putnam's Corn Extractor. It never burns, leaves no scar, contains no acids; is harmless, because composed only of healing gums and balms. Fifty years in use. Cure guaranteed. Sold by all druggists, 25c bottles. Refuse substitutes.

PETERBOROUGH AND POWER

In view of the submission of the Hydro-Electric by-law here the remarks of Dr. Rodolphe Messel, F.R.S., retiring president of the (American) Society of Chemical Industry, at its annual meeting in New York the other day, is of particular interest. He said he believed Canada and Norway were destined to lead the world in manufacturing industry, owing to their possession of inexhaustible water-powers. Referring to the employment of electroity in the manufacture of various chemical products ,he said that first of value to the world was the production of compounds of nitrogen by electricity. Cheap water-power, air and lime were alone required. "The factories of Norway are fast becoming the largest and most important in Europe. Canada is the next place to seek to establish these industries, for Canada has water-power, air and lime in abundance." Toward the end of his address, he said: "Electricity is in evidence everywhere. It threatens to displace the furnace for many new industries. And Canada's part in this new era can only be maintained by the development of her water-powers."

From one or two remarks, it is to be feared Dr. Messel has his eye particularly on the Long Sault water-power of the St. Lawrence, which Canadians are determining shall not be utilized to the detriment of navigation. There are plenty of water-powers for electrical development elsewhere.

THE TRENT CANAL

A Government report recently issued states that the total expenditure to date on the Trent Valley Canal is $11,302,045, of which $309,000 was spent prior to Confederation. During the year 57.000 tons of merchandise were moved on the canal, an increase of 11,027 tons. Of the caroges, 31,000 tons consisted of lumber.

This indicates that though over $10,000,000 has been spent on the Trent Canal, so far as real, beneficial traffic is concerned, the expenditure has been much a failure. To move 50.000 tons in a year is no great thing for a canal in this part of Ontario. The traffic is not at all commensurate with the amount of money spent on it. If there is any more conclusive argument why the canal should be rushed to completion at both ends, to open it up to through traffic instead of making it serve merely local purposes, we would like to have it presented. Very often when a man or corporation finds he or it has spent a certain sum on a project, only to find the result quite inadequate, he or it finds it good business to put some more money into it to complete the canal. If the Welland Canal were dug from Port Colborne to within a mile of Port Dalhousie, but that last mile left undug for lack of funds, of what use would that canal be? The money in it would be wasted, unless that last mile were constructed. So with the Trent canal. It ends in Rice Lake on one end and Lake Simcoe on the other, neither of which are "anywhere." It is too shallow, too narrow, there are too many locks, and it is too winding, ever to be of first class importance under present circumstances. If it were extended to Georgian Bay and to Lake Ontario, and were put into as good shape in the central districts as possible, it would be of some service to general navigation. The transporting of a mere 50,000 tons of material in a season would not be the limit of its usefulness.

POVERTY, RENT AND DRINK IN NEW YORK

From the Toronto Sunday World of Nov. 12th, 1912:—

An investigation made in New York by the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor into the circumstances of 6,730 dependent families discloses that in 40 per cent. of the cases the dependence is due to sickness, in 37 per cent. to unemployment, and in only 5 per cent. to intemperance. The report is striking because so many reformers and so many students of poverty and of crime insist that the larger part of poverty and nearly all of crime are due to the cause here held responsible for so small a percentage.

One of the chief burdens of life for the poor in this city is rent. The calculation of experts on sociological subjects is that not more than 20 per cent. of income should be spent for that purpose, but it appears that to obtain fairly good living quarters in New York the average worker has to pay about 33 per cent. of his income. This condition of affairs impels the poor to overcrowd their tenements, and as a consequence they violate sanitary laws and suffer through sickness more than they gain by the economy on rent.

Standards of living vary with the races. Some of our immigrant population find comparative comfort in homes that to one American-born would appear destitution. It is, therefore, impossible to determine what income is required to provide a healthful and well-supplied living for a family. It is clear, however, that in too many cases the earnings of even the most industrious and saving do not always equal it.—New York World.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any cause that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

LOCAL OPTION FRIGHTENS THE LIQUOR INTERESTS

It is a Great Success and Well They Know It --- Their Campaign of Deception is Here Exposed.

The citizens of Peterborough are now being given a last hour dose of anti-local-option arguments. These are being administered in large quantities and in sugar coated form in the hope that they will be swallowed by the public before time permits of their being shown to be misrepresentations, lies and forgeries of one kind and another. Look out for them. Don't be easy. Don't believe all that you hear and read during the next few days against local option. Ask for proof for everything. Then you will be safe.

SOME FACTS TO KEEP IN MIND

The liquor interests are endeavoring to convince you that local option is a bad thing for the towns where it is in force, that it increases drunkenness, injures business, leads to the sale of liquor to minors, closes hotels and works general ruin. There are 463 municipalities in Ontario in which there are no licensed bars. that the liquor interests say that it is then the people in these municipalities would be glad to go back to the license system at the first opportunity. Are they doing it! NO. WHY? BECAUSE THEY ARE DELIGHTED WITH LOCAL OPTION- Here is the proof. OUT OF 294 MUNICIPALITIES THAT MIGHT HAVE GIVEN UP LOCAL OPTION AND GONE BACK TO THE LICENSE SYSTEM DURING THE PAST TWO YEARS NOT ONE DID SO. Local option is good enough for them —It will be good enough for us. Join with us and decide next Monday to give it a trial.

When people tell you that local option is a failure in Campbellford, Lakefield, Havelock, Midland, Owen Sound, Collingwood and wlsewhere, and when they quote the names of unknown people to prove it, ask them this simple question: "WHY DON'T THE PEOPLE IN THESE PLACES REPEAL LOCAL OPTION AS THEY HAVE THE POWER TO DO?" Then watch them squirm and twist. Why? Because they can't answer you. THE FACT IS LOCAL OPTION IS A GREAT SUCCESS WHEREVER IT IS IN FORCE AND WELL THE LIQUOR INTERESTS KNOW IT. They will tell the truth about it sometimes. In the issue of the Wine and Spirit Journal and Brewers Review for October, 1912, appeared this significant statement: "IT IS MUCH EASIER TO DEFEAT A LOCAL OPTION BY-LAW NOW THAN TO REPEAL IT THREE YEARS LATEER." That proves that they are frightened that when we carry local option we will never go back to the license system. No wonder, therefore, that they are trying to mislead you about local option.

A CAMPAIGN OF DECEPTION

The facts set out below prove how shamelessly the liquor interests are attempting to mislead and deceive you and how brazen they are about it. They show, also, what representative men in the towns mentioned, have to say about local option.

A CAMPAIGN OF DECEPTION--MISSTATEMENTS EXPOSED

If proof is needed that none of tae statements being made in the papers and on the bill boards of Peterborough against local option can be believed the following exposures of most of those already made should be sufficientlt.

THE CAMPBELLFORD SITUATION

In Monday night's papers appeared a four column advertisement headed "Campbellford Citizens Protest Against Local Option." Underneath was published what claimed to be a copy of a statement, signed by what purported to be 18 representative citizens of Campbellford, stating that local option in Campbellford was a failure. The Citizens' Local Option Committee of Peterborough sent a representative to Campbellford on Tuesday with the following results: It was found that the petition in question was four years old; that it was the same petition that was published in Peterborough three years ago at the time of the fight held then. Two of the 18 parties whose names were published have never lived in Campbellford. One has been dead for 14 months and one is living in Toronto. This last man's sons were convicted of selling liquor illegally and he should have been. Two are bankrupts, having lost their business through drink. One, who was formerly a 'bus driver for the hotel, is now out of business. One was a clerk in a store during the Christmas trade. Three are well known to be addicted to liquor. Two stand by the statement- Linton Bros. say they are sorry that they signed it. J. A. Irwin reported that he was euchred into signing it four years ago. A. E. Janeway and F. E. Long said that they were sorry that they had signed it and that they are now in favor of local option. S. J. Moore reported that he has changed his opinion about local option since he has seen how well it works and he signed the petition that appears in the adjoining column.

When the mayor and other prominent citizens of Campbellford found that it was being reported in Peterborough by the liquor interests that local option was not a success in Campbellford they were quite indignant and helped to circulate the petition appearing in the next column which was signed by not only the mayor and police magistrate but by the present two candidates for the mayoralty, and by the leading citizens of the town. AND YET THE LIQUOR INTERESTS CONTINUE TO PUBLISH THIS TIME-WORN, UNTRUTHFUL STATEMENT IN AN ATTEMPT TO PROVE THAT LOCAL OPTION IS NOT A SUCCESS IN CAMPBELLFORD.

CAMPBELLFORD CITIZENS ENDORSE LOCAL OPTION

Last Tuesday, when the citizens of Campbellford found that the liquor interests were advertising in Peterborough that local option was a failure in Campbellford the following statement was circulated and readily signed by the prominent citizens of the town:

To Whom It May Concern:

We, the undersigned professional men, business men, and manufacturers of the town of Campbellford, after four years' experience under local option, emphatically declare that our town is in a thriving, flourishing condition; that the hotel accommodation is good; that business has not decreased, and that the town is to-day a cleaner and better city in which to live than ever before. Local option is a decided success. We would not go back to the license system.

THE CITIZENS OF MIDLAND HAVE BEEN SLANDERED

In Tuesday night's Peterborough papers appeared a paid article headed "Why Vote For Local Option?" This article went on at considerable length to show that local option has been a failure in Midland, that convictions for drunkenness there have increased, that the law is flagrantly violated and that similar conditions exist in other local option districts.

These are the facts: Mayor Horrell of Midland, when telephoned to by the Citizens Local Option Committee of Peterborough said "That statement has been circulated by the liquor interests for some time and it is absolutely false. Not one tenth as much liquor is drunk now as there used to be under the license system. Our business men are so indignant about it taey recently arranged with the editor of one of our local papers for the publication of a statement signed by thom to the effect that local option is a great success here, that business is thriving and that we would not think of going back to the license system. We will send you 1000 copies of this statement to distribute in Peterborough. It is true that we have had more convictions for drunkenness than formerly but that is because we now arrest every man we find drunk—which we did not do when we were under license—and because it is possibmie to and because it is possible to get liquor at a place only three miles from here where there are four open bars. Our drugks do not get their liquor in Midland but at this other place where the open bar still exists." May we not ask, WHY DO THE LIQUOR INTERESTS NOT TELL THE TRUTH ABOUT MIDLAND?

OTHER LIES NAILED TO THE MAST

In recent issues of the Peterborough papers and on hand bills the liquor party has published statements as follows: J. H. Burgess, of Lakefield, is quoted as saying that local option is a failure in Lakefield. Mr. Burgess reports that he never authorized such a statement and wants its publication stopped. Acting Reeve Kidd, of Lakefield, declares that local option has been a great success and a benefit to the town and that the main trouble they have is from men who purchase liquor at Peterborough. He hopes that Peterborough will vote for local option and thus help Lakefield.

John J. Rogers, of Norwood, has been quoted as saying that local option is a failure there. There are only two men of that name in Norwood. Both declare that they never signed such a statement and that they believe in local option.

A. C. Barrett, of Havelock, is quoted against local option. Reeve Joyce of Havelock, reports that there is no man of that name in Havelock, and that local option is proving such a success there, there has been no mention of repealing the by-law.

S. Richardson, of Millbrook, is quoted against local option. Town Clerk Given reports that he does not know of a man of that name in Millbrook.

Henry Snider of Brighton, is quoted as stating that local option has hurt Brighton. Reeve Wade, of Brighton, reports that there is no man of that name in Brighton and that local option there is a distinct success. Its repeal has not been suggested.

EDUCATION NOT THE REMEDY

In an effort to prove that education is the remedy for intemperance the liquor interests published a statement recently in all three Peterborough papers showing that in spite of a great decrease in the number of liquor licenses in Ontario during the last few years there has been a great increase in the number of convictions for drunkeness. These in 1910 amounted to 41401. From this they argue that Local Option does not decrease drunkeness.

Investigation will show that there has been a great decrease in the number of convictions in Local Option districts. The increase in convictions has taken place in towns and cities where the open bar is still permitted. There were over 11,000 arrests in Toronto alone last year. As soon as places like Peterborough begin to close the open bar we will soon see a great decrease in the number of convictions for drunkeness. The liquor interests would like to fool us but they can't if we will only do our own thinking and not believe everything they say.

MUCH LESS DRINKING IN COLLINGWOOD

T. W. Robinson, of Collingwood, is quoted as saying that local option has led to large quantities of liquor being consumed on the sly and that it has hurt business. Chief of Police Bothwick denies this and says that not one twentieth as much liquor is drunk as formerly and that what few drunks there are drift in from other places where tae open bars still exists. Mayor Currie of Collingwood, says that Collingwood is one of the most prosperous towns in Ontariom and that the only business that has been hurt by lacal option is the liquor business.

LICENSE MAKES DRUNKARDS OF CHILDREN

In the Anti-Local Option material appearing in Monday night's city papers, is an article claiming that boys are exposed to greater danger in dry territory than under license. In proof of this it is stated that during the year there had been seven convictions in New Ontario for selling to minors.

The records of the Peterborough Court show that for the year ending Dec. 1st, 1912, seven Peterborough license holders were there charged with the same offence. One of the seven was discharged. The other six were convicted.

Does it not seem strange that under the much lauded license system there should be as many cases of selling to minors in the City of Peterborough alone, as in the whole of Northern Ontario under prohibition? Not long since a 14-year-old boy was seen while drunk going into a George street restaurant. Peterborough hotel-keepers should not talk about selling liquor to minors.

OWEN SOUND CONVICTIONS

A pamphlet being distributed in Peterborough for the liquor interests claim to give the number of Police Court convictions in Owen Sound. The figures are false, as was shown by Mr. C. A. Flemming, of that town in the Peterborough Opera House recently. He showed from the official records that instead of 30 convictions for vagrancy as reported, there were only 6, for breaches of the license law 23 instead of 35. Other offences given as 73 totalled only 15. In all there were only 166 convictions and not 236 as stated in the pamphlet.

Mr. N. A. Brand of the R. G. Sturgeon Company, Bowmanville, was in the city over the holiday.

Mr. S. Hetherington, 177 Antrim street, leaves to-day for Hamilton, where he has secured a good position in the Westinghouse Electric Company.

Mr. Norman Rae of the Bell Telephone Company has been promoted to the local managership of the Bell Telephone plant at Tweed, to succeed Mr. Harry Soanes, who comes back to Peterborough to accept a higher position.

A pleasant time was spent on New Year's Eve, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jeffries, when their nephew Mr. Bob. Jeffries, entertained a few of his many friends at a watch-night party. The evening was spent in games, music, dancing etc. After all had done full justice to a sumptuous supper, the whole gathering joined in song, and compliments for the year 1913 were freely extended to the host and everyone present.

LOCAL OPTION AND LICENSE COMPARED

Owen Sound is a very bad town, according to the advocates of the licensed drinking place. Let us see, Fort William and Port Arthur are lake-port cities, more nearly like Owen Sound than any other Canadian towns. The former, Fort William, is somewhat larger and the latter slightly smaller than Owen Sound.

In 1911 Fort Arthur had 1308 convictions for drunkenness, and Fort William 1248. These cities are under license. In Owen Sound under local option there were 232 convictions. 16

VERY STRONG TESTIMONY

Oshawa's Leading Citizen and Financial Man Scores Local Option.

Mr. W. F. COWAN

President, The Standard Bank of Canada,
President, The Ontario Loan & Savings Company,
President, The Ontario Malleable Iron Company, etc., etc.

makes public the weaknesses of Local Option.

From OSHAWA VINDICATOR, Dec. 26th, 1912.

WHAT ONE OF OUR MOST PROMINENT CITIZENS THINKS OF LOCAL OPTION

Oshawa, December 24th, 1912.

To the Editor of The Vindicator :

Oshawa is generally admitted to be the most prosperous town on the Grand Trunk Railway between Toronto and Montreal, and if its growth is not interrupted by adverse municipal legislation, will in the near future be in a position to demand a city charter.

Its eligibility, however, as an attractive residential centre is seriously marred by the fact that the street cars are debarred from connecting with the Sunday passenger trains, and the only conveyance available for visitors on that day is a delapidated old vehicle, which would not be tolerated by the most remote backwoods village in the country.

Strangers naturally ask why an intelligent community does not remedy such an aggravating traffic condition, and on whom the responsibility for its origin and continuance rests.

This serious drawback to the advancement of the town I may inform them was the work of a bigoted majority in the town council, who had a clause inserted in the charter given to the Oshawa Railway Company debarring it the privilege of running any cars on Sunday.

One might reasonably suppose that this mortifying specimen of puritanical legislation, resulting as it has in the permanent injury of the Town, would have warned our municipal representatives from any further attempts to curtail the liberties and legal enjoyments of its citizens.

It would appear, however, that our cup is not yet full; the sword of Damocles so long suspended over our unfortunate heads is about to fall, and if not averted is certain to strike a deadly blow to our most cherished hopes and aspirations.

As an example of what may be expected here if Local Option is adopted I beg to cite that the neighboring town of Bowmanville many years ago adopted the "Scott Act," thereby closing up all its hotels, but it soon realized its folly, and after a short season of gloom it repented figuratively in sackcloth and ashes and embraced the first opportunity to repeal the tyrannical edict. But history is ever repeating itself, and a new generation has arisen there which under the leadership of impracticable demagogues has imposed the Local Option Act upon the little town which had never fully recovered the blow struck at its welfare by the passage of the "Scott Act."

Again, however, the fatal mistake has been realized, and the heads of the great manufacturing enterprise which is lifting up the dead town on its shoulders are demanding relief from the disabilities it imposes upon the liberties of their great army of intelligent employees.

In a simple letter of this nature it would be idle to enter into any abstract argument covering the use of alcoholic stimulants. It has been a bone of contention for centuries and will continue to be fought over until the advent of the millennium in the dim and distant future.

What we have to do with in this enterprising town is to realize clearly how it is going to effect us. Our hotels are now inadequate for the entertainment of the travelling public and many individual residents find it difficult to obtain rooms at certain seasons or partial board aside from lodgings.

What we really want is a large substantial increase in our hotel accommodations, of which there is practically no hope owing to the baleful shadow thrown upon all hotel property by the threatened Local Option Act.

In order to squarely realize our position in this matter let us suppose what course the inhabitants of this town would pursue if say the C. P. Railway would offer to build a fine hotel similar in class, but not in size of course, to those it has constructed in Quebec, Montreal, Winnipeg, Vancouver and Victoria. Would not every impartial man warmly welcome the proposal and decide to consign to perpetual oblivion the Local Option Act with all its confiscations and remorseless attacks on private property of law abiding citizens?

Rely upon it if this unjust act should be carried it will reduce the value of all real estate in this municipality to an extent far below the figures now ruling, it will be found indeed a formidable check to our future prosperity.

Local Option in my opinion is responsible for the developing of more drunkards than the open bar, because the pocket flask is of easier access than the remote barrel in the public house, pretty much in the same ratio that far more suicides are connected with the ever present handy revolver than with the long range rifle.

In conclusion, let me call the attention of the Utopianists who have entered upon a crusade to restrict the liberty which is the heritage of the humblest citizen to the report recently issued by the "Committee of One Hundred" on the relations of drunkenness to crime in America which states that "One Prison Warden whose prisoners came for the most part from a great city with free saloons in which he declared that less than two per cent. of the inmates of his institution came there through drunkenness; while another Warden in a Prohibition State declared that nearly half of his inmates were there through the Liquor habit."

I submit that no stronger confirmations of the futility of prohibition enactments could be submitted for the consideration of an impartial tribunal.

Yours truly,
W. F. COWAN.

COLLEGIATE OLD BOYS TO HOLD ANNUAL RE-UNION

One of the most interesting events so far of the holiday season was the gathering of a number of old Peterborough Collegiate boys and friends of the classes of '08 and '09. Twelve members of the class were present, among whom were holiday home-comers from both Eastern and Western Canada. They were, Mr. Donald Denham, of Cornell University; Mr. Harold Jobbit, of Medicine Hat, Alta.; Mr. Bruce Clegg, S.P.S. Toronto, Mr. Michael O'Brien, Toronto; Mr. Allan Cameron, Fort Arthur and Winnipeg; Mr. Harold Wallis, S.P.S. Toronto; Mr. Harold Brown, Toronto University; Mr. Herbert Conroy, McGill University, Montreal; Mr. Ray Scott, Toronto University; Mr. Max Dobbin, Montreal, and Messrs. Percy Hooper and Harold McGill, of this city.

So successful was the banquet that it was decided to make the gathering an annual event. The following officers were elected:

President——Michael O'Brien.
Sec.-Treas.—Max J. Dobbin.
Executive Committee—Harold McGill, P. Hooper.

One of the features was the reading of the "Fourth Form Chronicles" a diary of the daily happenings in and around the old Fourth Form of the years '08 and '09. Other features of the evening's entertainment were speeches by Messrs. A. Cameron, H. Conroy and H. Wallis; a piano solo by Mr. Harold Brown and songs by Messrs. Denham and O'Brien.

VIOLATION OF THE LAW IN NEW ONTARIO

The liquor interests are striving to make a great deal out of the fact that large quantities of liquor have been seized in New Ontario during the last three years. They claim that over 9000 bottles of whiskey were seized in New Ontario this year and that perhaps an equal amount got through undetected. From this they try to prove that local option could not be enforced in Peterborough.

Suppose that 18,000 bottles of liquor were consumed in the thousands of square miles of territory in New Ontario in one year; that amount does not represent as much liquor as is consumed in only one of the large bars of Peterborough in a year. We have fifteen licenses. Which conditions therefore—by their own showing—is tae best?

But New Ontario is not under local optian. It is simply a non-license district. The local option law is much the more strict of the two. Any one found drunk in a local option district can be sent to goal until he tells where he got his liquor. This new provision of the law is scaring the life out of the liquor sellers. There is no such provision in New Ontario.

Under local option a man found selling liquor is fined from $100 to $500 and on a second conviction is sent to goal for four months without the option of a fine. This is not the case in New Ontario. WHAT IS THE USE THEN OF COMPARING CONDITIONS IN NEW ONTARIO WITH WHAT THEY WOULD BE IN PETERBOROUGH UNDER LOCAL OPTION?

DYNAMITERS NOW SAFE IN THE PENITENTIARY

Each of the Prisoners Gets Hair Cut and Prison Uniform—Ryan is the Oldest.

LEAVENWORTH, Kansas, Jan. 2.—The thiry-three labor union officials sentenced at Indianapolis for complicity in the McNamara dynamite plots arrived at the federal prison here at 7.15 yesterday. They immediately were photographed, dressed in penitentiary clothes and formally enrolled as convicts.

As Frank M. Ryan, president of the Ironworkers International Union; Olaf A. Tveitmoe, the Pacific Coast labor leader; Herbert S. Hockin, John T. Butler and the others stepped from the special train which brought them from Indianapolis, they were taken in charge by the prison authorities.

New Year's Day thus found the labor leaders beginning in the federal penitentiary here punishment for their connection with crimes for which the McNamara brothers, confessed dynamiters, are serving terms in the state prison at San Quentin, California.

The prisoners were taken by rail directly into the prison grounds.

Their first view of the interior was from the windows of the train.

Within an hour after arrival each prisoner had been subjected to a hair cut and garbed in the prison uniform.

It was a memorable trip which brought the prisoners over the 570 miles from Indianapilis on New Year's Eve. Once started, U. S. Marshal Edward Schmidt, decided not to reach Leavenworth before daylight so that almost twenty hours were passed on the train.

The train was guarded at windows and doors as a rolling adjunct of the penitentiary, all the curtains being drawn, and no one being permitted to give out any word as to the happenings within.

When the prisoners were registered it was found that Ryan, aged 54 years, was the oldest, and Fred. Sherman, aged 28, is the youngest.

Charles Wachtmeister, Detroit, with eight children, has the largest family. He is sentenced to two years.

TO EXCHANGE OFFICERS.

Col. Seeley Says Imperial Reciprocal System Will Be Actively Pushed.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The question of interchange of officers between Great Britain and the dominions, which received the strong advocacy of Hon Sam Hughes and Senator Pearce, Australian Minister of Defence, was raised in the Commons Tuesday, when Sir Gilbert Parker asked Col Seeley, War Minister, how many Imperial officers were at present serving in the dominions and how many domnions' officers were employed in the British War Office or engaged in British military service. Col. Seeley replied that the number of Imperial officers in the dominions' service was: Canada 30, Australia 11, South Africa 14, New Zealand 16, exclusive of officers holding appointments as A.D.C.'s. Dominion officers serving in the War Office with British and Indian forces, exclusive of those attached for instruction was: Canada 2, Australia 2, New Zealand 1.

Sir Gilbert Parker: "Will the Government consider any considerable extension in the appointment of over sea officers in the service here, not only for the purpose of extending the good feeling existing, but for the acquisition of knowledge necessary for proper development of the Imperial system?"

Col. Seeley: "We are very anxious to extend this interchange of officers in every way we can. We shall take every step possible."

HIGH COURT WAS ADJOURNED

The High Court sittings were adjourned on Tuesday afternoon until January 25. When they re-open the Cardwell versus Breckenridge action will likely be resumed. The argument in the Dickson Company vs. George N. Graham action was deferred until Thursday in Osgoode Hall. The Canadian General Electric Company versus Fairweather action will be the last defended case on the list.

BOYS FOUND HUMAN SKULL

A human skull was unearthed on property near the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage yards by two boys on Tuesday afternoon. Chief Thompson was notified and is investigating the matter.

If there is too much blurring in the rinsing water, all bad effects can be avoided by adding three or four tablespoonfuls of household ammonia.

May we draw upon content for the deficiencies in fortune.

SICK DAUGHTER NOW WELL

Mrs. C. Cole Tells How Her Daughter Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Fitchville, Ohio.—"I take great pleasure in writing to thank you for what your medicine has done for my daughter.

"Before taking your medicine she was all run down, suffered from pains in her side, could not walk but a short distance at a time, and had severe pains in head and limbs. She came very near having nervous prostration. She had begun to cough a good deal and seemed melancholy by spells. She tried two doctors but got little help.

"I cannot find words to express my gratefulness for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for my daughter. She feels and looks like another girl since taking it, and I shall always feel that I owe you a great debt.

"You can use this letter for the benefit of others if you wish, as I shall always recommend your medicines for female troubles."—Mrs. C. COLE, Fitchville, Ohio.

Hundreds of such letters from mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Seven Years of Turmoil

(From Owen Sound Herald, Dec. 27, 1912.)

The people of Owen Sound have had seven years of practical experience with Local Option, and every citizen can judge for himself, and will judge for himself, whether our people have been benefited either morally, socially or financially through the cutting off of restrictive licenses in Owen Sound.

They are not going to take the word of the brewer or the hotel-keeper on this question: neither are they going to accept the opinion of the Local Option fanatics who would vote "dry" if everything went to rack and ruin. Neither will they be guided by any Anti Bar-room League and its hired band of spellbinders, who have waxed fat and rich at the hands of our people.

The people of Owen Sound have eyes to see and ears to hear. They had seven years of practical experience with a Local Option law. If they take anybody's advice it will be that of the Citizens' Committee of Owen Sound, men who have lived here and who expect to continue to live here and pay taxes long after these imported orators have shaken the dust of Owen Sound from their feet.

The Citizens' Committee Organization of Owen Sound is composed of 400 merchants, professionals, artizans, laboring men, and not a single member is connected with the liquor business and not a single member therefore intends to engage in the license business if Owen Sound restores a prohibitive license system.

The men are nearly all men of family. They have boys and girls growing into manhood and womanhood. They are just as anxious to surround their children with a pure moral atmosphere as is the most ardent social reformer or religious worker. Bear this in mind Mr. Voter. If the promises made by the Local Optionists seven years ago have be fulfilled, would it be natural to suppose that these business men would now be advocating the reopening of the license system in Owen Sound?

If drunkenness and poverty have been almost wiped out through the closing of the bar-rooms, do you suppose these business men, who stand for morality and decency, would be asking for the return of the license system?

If the money that was spent for liquor when Owen Sound had bar-rooms had gone into other channels of trade, as the Local Optionist advocates seven years ago told you it would, would it not be the most natural thing to find these same business men now championing the Local Option cause? Would any sensible business man who has enjoyed unbounded prosperity through the shutting off the license system ask for its restoration? No, gentle reader, it is not a theory but a condition which confronts us now.

Over and over again, whenever Local Option has been tried, whenever the man who does not drink has been allowed to say to the man who does drink, "You shall not": whenever the drinking of mild stimulants has been made illegal, the drinking of stronger alcoholic stimulants has increased. This is not only the case in Owen Sound, but in every community where there are a considerable number of people who want to drink liquor.

From the earliest days of this planet men have taken alcoholic stimulants in one form or another, just as they have taken meat in one form or another. And the exceptions, the races that have abstained from alcohol and have abstained from meat have always been the inferior and conquered race.

We must all believe that a day will come when man will arise from his animal condition, when the eating of flesh will be unknown and when drunkenness will be unknown. But you cannot change human nature by legislation. Laws must be made in accordance with the nature of man and not in violation of his nature.

Among the Local Optionists are many of the most admirable, earnest and good men and women of Owen Sound and not a few warm, personal friends of THE HERALD, and we ask them isn't it time to try something in place of Local Option, which has failed. For many years past drunkenness has steadily diminished throughout the world. And drunkenness has diminished where prohibition or Local Option is unknown, whereas drunkenness has increased where a vain effort has been made to prevent drinking by legislation, because Local Option makes drinking secret and shameful.

It makes the hidden sale of mild stimulants difficult or impossible because of bulk. It makes the sale of strong liquor easy and profitable. One "boot-legger" can conceal and sell enough bad whiskey to make a whole village drunk.

Temperance must be taught, it cannot be enforced. You can make men temperate by education, by prosperity, by good food, by providing healthy amusements in place of false excitement of drink. You can educate and persuade men to be temperate. YOU CANNOT FORCE THEM.

The issue is not "The Boy and the Bar-room." The issue before the people of Owen Sound, who have tasted seven years of Local Option, is simply this:

"IS THE OPEN, WELL-REGULATED LICENSE SYSTEM MORE CONDUCIVE TO TRUE TEMPERANCE AND MORALITY THAN THE BLIND PIGS AND SPEAK EASY?"

Your vote on January 6th, 1913, will not wipe both of them out. It will only decide which one shall remain in our community.

And, Mr. Voter, bear this in mind, Local Option is beautiful in theory, but a monumental failure in practice.

The Local Option law does not stop people from drinking and never was intended to.

YOUNG AT SEVENTY.

The Most Valuable Period of a Man's Life.

Dr. Earl Barnes caused considerable comment in a recent lecture in London by quoting figures which show that the period of greatest productivity of a man's life lies in the decade between his sixtieth and his seventieth year.

"At first thought," said Dr. Barnes, "one would be inclined to disbelieve this, but the investigation which ended in the publishing of the statistics was carried to such a length that its outcome must be given consideration. The beginning of the investigation was made in an attempt to disprove the much misunderstood so-called Osler theory, which by the way, Dr Osler says was only a banquet joke.

"The attempt to show the fallacy of the statement made by Dr. Osler was taken up by Dr. William A. N. Dorland, himself a physician and author of some reputation.

"He selected the names of four hundred of the most noted men of all times from all lines of activities, statesmen, painters, warriors, poets writers of history, fiction, and other prose productions. Opposite each name was placed the name of the greatest work of his lifetime; his greatest picture, greatest battle, greatest poem or book; whatever the greatest thing he had done in his lifetime might be.

"This list was then submitted to a considerable number of competent critics for suggestions. The list was revised and re-revised. Names were added, names were dropped; the list was thoroughly gone over time and again, until the majority opinion was that the list as it stood represented the four hundred greatest men of the world's history.

"When the list was completed to the satisfaction of the critics, Dr. Dorland appended to the list of the achievements of the men, the age at which the deed was accomplished. The list was arranged according to decades of age, and the result was startling.

"It was found that the decade of years between sixty and seventy contained 53 per cent. of the world's greatest achievements. Between the ages of seventy and eighty, 23 per cent. of the achievements fell; and in the years after the eightieth, 6 per cent.

"In other words, 64 per cent. of the great things of the world have been accomplished by men who had passed their sixtieth year; the greatest percentage, 35 per cent., being in the sixth decade.

"The figures for the other periods of life are interesting. Between the fiftieth and sixtieth years are found 25 per cent., between forty and fifty, 10 per cent. These all totalled together, leave the almost negligible quantity of 1 per cent. to be attributed to the period below the age of forty.

Stayed With Dying Master.

An instance of a dog's fidelity was given at an inquest held at Hornsey, England, the other day, on Louis Saget, aged 18, of Nelson road, Stroud Green. A neighbor said that on Sunday, during the absence of his people from home, Saget suddenly became ill, and two visitors who had called summoned assistance from neighbors. When the witness arrived he found Saget breathing very hard, and apparently unconscious. A dog was lying on him. The animal began to whine and bark, and would not let the witness approach. The witness went out to call a doctor, and then went back to see if he could get the dog away and give assistance to Saget. He was, however, unable to dislodge the animal until the doctor arrived. It was stated that Saget died while being medically examined. Heart failure was the cause assigned, and the jury returned a verdict of natural death.

Dainty Young Men.

The young man "about town" in London is industriously cultivating the side-whisker and doing his utmost to tie a stock-tie. As a general rule he meets with small success in either of these efforts, but so long as he is in the swim, which is imitation of the early Victorian period, he is supremely satisfied.

In addition to this fad for imitation century-old customs men are cultivating "beauty doctors." One of these "doctors" said, according to a London newspaper:

"Men come to be manicured and generally beautified, and they all want advice as to how they may best preserve a youthful appearance. Many of my men clients will sit for over an hour having their nails polished and their hands massaged.

"They will buy any kind of powder I care to recommend for the face, any lotion for the skin, and any remedy for the hair."

WOULD COME BACK.

Finally Bourchier and His Friends Destroyed the Suit.

The English drama owes much to Mr. Arthur Bourchier, who has been one of the most influential actor-managers for a number of years. He has portrayed all manner of roles, from Shakespeare to very modern comedy, and his career has been as lengthy as it has been successful.

From his earliest years Arthur Bourchier was stricken with stage fever. When a very small boy he was sent to a private school kept by a Dr. Hawtrey, the uncle of Mr. Charles Hawtrey. He spent the greater portion of his pocket-money on toy theatres, in which he produced fearful melodramas. Even at the age of twelve he was noted throughout his native place of Newbury for the zeal with which he produced plays and charades during his holidays, and all the boys in the neighborhood were pressed into service for these dramatic triumphs.

But when young Bourchier began to show signs of whiskers, his father, Captain Bourchier, informed him that his career was to be the army. Eventually a compromise was made by the father saying: "Go to Oxford—take your degree—then you shall go on the stage."

At Oxford young Bourchier maintained his interest for things theatrical. At that time the only theatre in Oxford was a wretched place, visited by fifth-rate companies. One night a melodrama was produced, and in the first act a character entered sporting a suit that had once been black-and-white, but was now green with age. The suit was greeted with weird noises, and when at the end of the act its wearer announced his intention of going to Africa for ten years the cheering was tremendous. When the second act commenced the ten long years were supposed to have elapsed, but nevertheless, the wanderer returned in the same moth-eaten suit in which he had left the old home a decade ago. This was too much for the audience. Some rowdy Christchurch men jumped on to the stage, chased the wearer of the suit to the wings, thence to the stage-door, and out into the street. Finally they caught him, and tore the offending suit into as many pieces as decency would permit, so that there might not be any chance of its appearing again. This episode came to the knowledge of authorities, and the offenders, amongst whom was Arthur Bourchier, received a severe wigging. The final upshot of this adventure was that Mr. Bouchier received permission from the vice-chancellor to found the University Dramatic Society, and build a theatre at Oxford.

Mr. Bouchier made his first professional appearance at Wolverhampton twenty-three years ago in 'As You Like It.' Five years later he married Miss Violet Vanbrugh, who has been associated with him in all his big successes.

Just Moving Pictures.

Perhaps it is safe to say that the large majority of the discoveries and inventions which have benefited and blessed as well as instructed and amused the world were the outcome of experiments conducted for altogether different results. What we know as moving pictures originated in a question asked by Sir John Herschel of his friend John Babbage. This was in 1826, and the question asked was how both sides of a shilling could be seen at once.

Babbage replied by taking a shilling from his pocket and holding it before a mirror.

This did not satisfy Sir John, who set the shilling spinning on a large table, at the same time pointing out that if the eye is placed on a level with a rotating coin, both sides can be seen a once.

Babbage was so struck by the experiment that the next day he described it to a friend, Dr. Fitton, who immediately made a working model.

On one side of the disc was drawn a bird, on the other side an empty bird cage. When the card was revolved on a silk thread, the bird appeared to be in the cage. This model showed the persistence of vision upon which all moving pictures depend for their effect.

The eye retains the image of the object seen for the fraction of a second after the object has been removed.

This model was called the thaumatrope.

Next came the zoetrope, or "wheel of life. A cylinder was perforated with a series of slots, and within the cylinder was placed a band of drawings of dancing men. On the apparatus being slowly rotated, the figures seen through the slots appeared to be in motion.

The first systematic photographs of men and animals taken at regular intervals were made by Edward Maybridge in 1877

HOW THE WHISKY TRADE IS THRIVING

Instead of Hurting It, Local Option and Prohibition Have Increased Its Profits.

Whatever may be the results otherwise of prohibition and local option laws they certainly have proved of the greatest benefit to the whiskey trade.

If anyone be inclined to doubt this fact he has only to consult the statistics in the Dominion Inland Revenue Reports.

In Ontario, of the 828 municipalities, 289 have adopted local option, and 134 others have local option without any specific by-law. From 1874 to the present the number of licensed bars in Ontario have been reduced from 6,185 to 1,630. In the Province of Quebec more than 630 bars have been closed out. In Nova Scotia prohibitory laws were brought about in 1909 for the whole Province except the city of Halifax where the people were allowed local option. All of these laws were forced by the prohibitionists on the promise that the consumption of hard intoxicating liquor would enormously decrease, and likewise intoxication.

If these claims were true, the returns of the whiskey distilleries ought unmistakably to show it. Whiskey manufactories do not turn out their product unless there is a demand for it. If the demand fell off, the production would infallibly fall off, too. The whiskey trade is in business for profit not health.

But despite the increasing number of prohibition and local option communities the production of whiskey in Canada has by no means appreciably decreased.

In 1909-1910 a total of 5,721,424.24 gallons of whiskey were manufactured in Canada, of which 4,446,579.33 gallons were manufactured in Ontario.

During the next year the total output of whiskey in Canada was 5,256,133.07 gallons.

In 1911-1912 the quantity of whiskey produced in Canada was 4,784,396.15 gallons. The exports of whiskey had fallen from 412,859 gallons in 1907-1908 to 298,769 gallons in 1911, thus proving that a greater quantity of whiskey than previously was used for home consumption.

Considering the fact that in so many places prohibition or local option has been forced by the prohibitionists, the question is where does this immense supply of whiskey go?

Strange as it may appear much of it goes to the very places where prohibition and local option prevails. "Dry" laws, by closing out the bars, drive out the mild beverages such as beer which is too bulky to transport and to conceal and sell surreptitiously, and which is unpalatable when warm. No such objections, however, apply to whiskey; hence the large secret sale and consumption.

If any proof be wanted for this statement, it can easily be found in such local option places as Owen Sound, Orangeville and other towns to which the weekly shipments of whiskey are enormous.

Northern Ontario is also a striking example. The Cobalt, Porcupine and certain other districts are drastically non-license. According to the reports of Provincial Secretary W. J. Hanna the Provincial Police seized there during the ten months ending October 31, 1910, a total of 5,915 bottles of whiskey. During the next year 8,898 bottles of whiskey were seized, and during the present year more than 9,000 bottles of whiskey—making a total of more than 23,000 bottles of whiskey seized in that section in less than three years. Large quantities of whiskey in bulk were also seized.

If this immense quantity was discovered and seized, the question is how large were the quantities of whiskey smuggled in such ingenious ways that they escaped detection? That the quantities escaping seizure must have been, and are, extremely large is evidenced by the fact that there are hundreds of "blind pigs" doing business in Northern Ontario. The arrests for the illegal sale of liquor in the Cobalt district alone average about 60 a month.

Prohibition and local option have added to the profits of the whiskey trade. If separate licenses were granted for the sale of beer, which contains only three to four per cent. of alcohol, it is certain that the widespread sale and use of whiskey which contains 50 per cent. or more of alcohol, would be effectively discouraged.

Mrs. Youngwedd (to caterer's boy)—Oh, this is the chicken salad my husband ordered. Here's the money for it, and now you must tell me how you make it.

Boy (puzzled)—I can't tell you how it's made, mum.

Mrs. Youngwedd—But you must; my husband told me when I paid for it to be sure to get the receipt.

Ancient and Modern.

Mr. Choate, the well known American diplomatist, was being shown over a very old English parish church. Pointing out an oak screen, the rector informed his visitor that it was "centuries old." "And this paneling on the door?" inquired Mr. Choate, much interested. "Oh," replied the rector, "that is quite modern! It was put up only forty years before the discovery of America, you know!"—London Globe.

Secure Another Industry

The Henry Hope & Sons By-law is to give a site and an exemption from taxes (except school taxes and local improvement taxes) for ten years.

The company agree to erect a building 80x 200 feet, and invest at least $60,000 in building and plant and to employ from the start at least fifty persons.

The cost to the ratepayers at the present assessment will be less than 12 cents a year on an assessment of $1,000 for twent years. But the increased population will mean an increased assessment to bear the small necessary rate and reduce this 12 cents.

At the present assessment of the site the city receives from the land $97.00 in taxes, and at a moderate assessment the company will pay $260.00 in taxes over the exemption.

Each new factory means more employment, more population, more business and more prosperity.

EVANGELIST FROM CHICAGO

Rev. C. M. Murphy of Chicago at the Tabernacle

The Rev. C. M. Murphy of Chicago is in the city conducting evangelistic meetings in Bethany Tabernacle. The first meeting was held last evening and the attendance was very good. The text read was from 1 John 3:21, If our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart and knoweth all things. Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then we have confidence toward Good.

Mr. Murphy said that while many speak with living in communion with God and in union with the Lord Jesus Christ, yet the fact that their life is cold, barren, fruitless, proves communion is hindered. The message was presented with clearness and was very heartsearching.

The meetings will continue for ten days, services being held to-day and on Friday at 3 and 7.15 p.m., and on Saturday evening at 7.45. On Sunday the services will be at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., and each day next week at 3 and 7.45 p.m. All will be cordially welcomed at these meetings.

REV. MR. DANIEL AND LOCAL OPTION

The liquor interests are distributing in Peterborough a pamphlet which undertakes to prove that local option has been a bad thing for Owen Sound. In it appears a statement to the effect that Rev. Mr. Daniels, of Owen Sound, when interviewed, had to admit his inability to say that local option was a success. The Citizen's Committee of Peterborough, called up Rev. Mr. Daniels last Saturday evening with the result that he furnished the following statement:

"In regard to the statement first published in a Chatham paper, which has since been used elsewhere and which I understand is now being used in Peterborough to the effect that when asked by the reporter, I did not care to express a favorable opinion in regard to the working of local option in Owen Sound, I desire to state, and to have you announce that I corrected that statement when first published a year ago, and that the people who are now instrumental in the circulation know that I did so. Local option in Owen Sound is a distinct success and I have said so from the first. I have always worked for it and am at present a member of the Local Option Committee here in Owen Sound. You can't say too strongly for me that local option in Owen Sound is a great success." How the liquor interests do lie about these things!

Mr. and Mrs. Allen will reside in Peterborough.

COLLIER—LIGHTFOOT

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. John Lightfoot, Stewart street, on New Year's day, when her eldest daughter, Jessie, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Wesley H. Collier, B. A., M.E.E., by the Rev. Thos. Manning of Charlotte street Methodist church.

As the strains of Lohengrin's exquisite wedding march were heard, the bride unattended entered on the arm of her uncle, Mr. W. F. Whalan of Buffalo, N.Y. She was daintily gowned in ivory charmeuse entrain with garniture of lace and pearls and veil arranged in Juliet X cap with orange blossoms and carrying a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Mendelssohn's beautiful wedding march was played by Mrs. York of Aurora, aunt of the bride, who also accompanied Mrs. Herbert Collier, sister of the groom, who sweetly sang 'O Perfect Love.' A reception was held, after which dainty refreshments were served.

The out of town guests were Mrs (Rev.) Henry McDowell, of Aurora, grandmother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert B. Collier, Master [illegible] and Miss Phyllis Collier, of Toronto; Mrs. and Miss Yorke, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Willis, of Aurora; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. W. C. Riddiford, pastor of the Park street Baptist church.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of the family. Those from a distance being Mr. and Mrs. W. Patterson, Mr. H. and A. Nesbitt and Miss Mary E. Nisbitt, all of Dummer, Sask. The bride was charmingly gowned in ivory silk and chantilly lace, with tulle veil arranged with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of roses. Miss Mary E. Nisbitt sister of the bride, made a very pretty bridesmaid, attired in white chiffon, over silk. She carried a bouquet of carnations. Mr. Allan Payne of Warsaw, acted as best man. After the bridal dinner the happy couple left on the evening C.P.R. train for a short wedding tour to Paisley and other points. Mr. and Mrs. Cameron will reside in Peterborough.

A BY-PRODUCT OF PROHIBITION

Says the New York World: "Royall E. Cabell, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, is quoted as saying there is more whiskey stored in Kentucky to-day than ever before. He attributes the increase of whiskey largely to prohibition.

"The argument for the conclusion as to whiskey is simple. 'It appears,' says the Commissioner, 'that in 'dry' territory, whiskey, being of smallest bulk in proportion to alcoholic content, is more easily handled than beer, ale or wine. A bottle of the one contains many more drinks than a bottle of either of the others.'

"Sumptuary legislation never yet failed to have a recoil of some kind, often more pernicious than the evil the legislation was designed to suppress. This seems to be one of that kind."

FIRST TIME IN TWENTY YEARS

The Y.M.C.A. Close the Year a Credit Balance

The officials and friends of the Y.M.C.A spent Tuesday afternoon balancing up accounts, and revealed the gratifying position that all accounts had been paid, and that there was a credit of $25.00 to the good.

All were much pleased. Not in twenty years has the slate been cleaned off, and it is recognized that it was owing to the generous subscriptions of Mr. E. R. Wood and many others that the work was accomplished.

The directors venture to hope that the people of the city will recognise the value to the community of the Y.M.C.A. and unite to see that for future years the balance is always on the right side.

Put a box of rich earth in the cellar; before frost comes, it will be ready for use when you want to start your early seeds in the spring.

HYDRO ELECTRIC POWER AT COST AND SHARE IN PROFITS BY PEOPLE

COMMISSION AS TRUSTEES FOR MUNICIPALITIES

Profits From Hydro Cannot be Used For Any Other Civic Department--What the Introduction of Municipal Ownership Will Mean to Peterborough, Both City and County.

Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission addressed nearly five hundred citizens and rate-payers last evening, in the Grand Opera House on Hydro-electric operations, dealing with them first in respect to Ontario as a whole, and later with the proposed adoption of the system in Peterborough. The gathering was a most representative one in every sense, and the speaker was frequently interrupted by enthusiastic outbreaks of applause. On the platform were Mayor Bradburn, who acted as chairman, J. H. Burnham, M. P., J. J. Sexsmith, M. P., Jas. Thompson, M. P. P., W. H. Moore, K.C., E. A. Peck, M. P. P., Aldermen Johnston, Brown, Gordon, Duncan, Buller, Graham, Anderson, and Mr. B. J. Kidd, candidate for alderman. The Grand Opera House orchestra was in attendance and previous to the speaking contributed several selections.

HIS WORK IS FOR THE PEOPLE

Mayor Bradburn introduced the Honorable speaker with a few appropriate and well received remarks. He referred to Hon. Mr. Beck as the man who was seeking to furnish the people of Peterborough with cheaper light and cheaper power. He felt convinced that the Hydro-Electric By-law, which would be presented for the approval of the rate-payers on Monday, January 6th, would carry by an overwhelming majority, thereby equipping the city with a municipally managed lighting and distributing plant.

Hon. Adam Beck on rising was greeted with hearty applause.

"I no longer feel like a stranger when visiting your city," he remarked, "having visited here now so frequently within the past year or more. I also recognize the ardor and energy which your Mayor and Council have exhibited continuously in obtaining information to present to you relative to the Hydro-electric power for your municipality. They have been consistent in their efforts to bring such knowledge before you all.

Mr. Beck then extended his congratulations to the Mayor and his re-election by acclamation for the year 1913, and hoped that he and the City Council would have a prosperous year in civic circles.

Before commencing his address on his subject, Hon. Mr. Beck said that he hoped everyone present had made up their minds as to the reception they would tender the by-law and the great project behind it, when they marked their ballots on Monday, January 6. Referring to Hydro-electric operation as a whole he stated that they had more than fulfilled the most sanguine expectations of the Commission. Fifty-one municipalities are equipped with Hydro-electric power at the present time and between twenty-five and thirty would vote on Hydro-electric during the next week.

The honorable speaker then described the tremendous growth of Hydro-electric territory, from the time they began in the Niagara district, from there extending north to Owen Sound, northwest to Goderich and to Windsor and Sarnia; The Trent district in which Peterborough was situated, he considered to be a most advantageously location for the acquisition for a Hydro-electric system.

Hon. Mr. Beck then described how the Hydro-electric Commissioner developed the power of the Severn River which was capable of producing five to six thousnad horse-power. They found however that they were handicapped by lack of a market. The Commissioner finally got together and financed an undertaking whereby they agreed to sell power to Collingwood, Midland, Orillia, Elmdale, Waushaushene, Barrie, Allendale and other places. At first they conducted their business at a losing rate of $1200 a month. The company did their engineering at cost bought their material at a low price and paid out altogether $29,000 in distribution. All this of course was done by co-operation between the municipalities and the Commissioner

PEOPLE GET THE BENEFIT OF THE SURPLUS

"Wherever Hydro power is extensively used, oppostiion must eventually cease," said Mr. Beck, "because in Hydro-electric you have a system that operates at cost, and never will a municipality be under the necessity of buying power from a competing company. The municipality shares in the profits and the profits are returned to the people in cheaper lighting. The surplus in all cases returns to the consumer.

Hon. Mr. Beck however, explained clearly and unmistakably that Hydro-electric profits would never under any circumstances be used to

HERE ARE REASONS FOR THOUGHTFUL VOTERS

You can abolish the bar-room by a popular vote, but a man's appetite does not depend upon majorities, and so long as appetite remains it will call for the supply and get it. It will be met by the lawful bar-room, or by the lawless blind-pig, pocket peddler, or mail order house.

You can never tell how badly local option hurts business until you try it. When a man who lives midway between a local option and a license town, starts to market, his horses know which way to turn as soon as he drives out of the gate. Most people prefer to trade in a city where they neither have to wear a moszle nor become a criminal in order to exercise their natural rights.

When one man governs another on the question of temperance, it is an act of tyranny.

Local option is the hot-bed in which blind-pigs and pocket peddlers are bred, fostered and fattened, breeding sneaks, liars, hypocrites, perjurers and petty criminals which menace the morality of every local option community in Canada.

A man may now and then missjudge his capacity, get drunk and still be a man of honor, a devoted husband, a good father, a patriotic citizen, whose word is like a government bond, but this cannot be said of the sneak, the liar, hypocrite, and perjurer, the blasted fruit of local option.

The proposition that a man who has sense enough to fight life's battles, to decide for himself the kind of a woman he would like to marry, to select a Church to attend, to conclude what party he should give allegiance, and at the same time does does not know enough to decide for himself what he wants to drink with his meals, and between meals, is an insult to his intelligence.

Freedom of choice which local option would destroy, is the basis of all morality.

The opponents of local option deplore intemperance, but can see no reason why all well people should be compelled to take medicine because a few get sick.

Majorities can never make it right to destroy, or confiscate private property, without indemnity. When an individual is guilty of this crime he is arrested and sent to jail. The nature of the property cannot modify or condone the offense. The principle is the same whether property taken, or destroyed, be bank, brewery, farm or bar-room property.

The cause of local option is based upon false assertions, mutilated statistics and hysterical imaginings. The leaders hope to arouse suspicion, warp the judgment of honest men, and by dethroning reason, create enough local option sentiment to blind thousands of good citizens to the weakness and injustice of their crusade.

If a burglar should break into a hotel in Peterborough, and do on a small scale what local option advocates propose to do on a large scale, he would be arrested, convicted and sent to prison. If it is a crime to loot a hotel-keeper's safe, it cannot be a virtue to "wipe out" his entire investment.

A man who needs a law to make him temperate needs brains more than anything else.

A man who is incapable of choosing for himself between good and evil makes a poor guardian for others.

It is wrong to abuse the right to drink, but worse to rob all men of that right, becaue a few abuse it.

A blind-pig is worse than the worst bar-room.

Regulation is better for temperance than local option.

When a man has not the liberty to enter a restaurant anywhere and order for himself what he wants to eat and drink, he has no liberty worth bragging about.

Evil consists in the abuse of good things, and it would be idiotic to abolish all good because some men abuse freedom of choice.

The boy who needs a local option straight jacket to prevent him from becoming a drunkard, needs parents a blame sight worse.

Only through freedom of choice can man develop the faculty of self-control.

Without self-control true manhood cannot exist.

Without freedom of choice there can be no manhood, and no moralty, as God cannot credit any man with morals for doing a thing which others compel him to do.

Without personal liberty there can be no personal responsibility, or personal morality.

God made man able to stand but free to fall.

Certain people in certain local option towns are very anxious for Peterborough to adopt local option. A great deal of trade that used to go to their towns is now coming to Peterborough, and they hope to get some of it back.

Local option parents cannot hope to keep their boys always tied to their local option apron strings. They will get away after awhile, and when they do, if they have not been brought up with sufficient strength of character to resist temptation, they are liable to fall, and there are things they can fall for a thousand times worse than taking a glass of beer.

Bring up a boy in the way he should go and go in that way yourself.

The evils of drink are greatly exaggerated. If one man gets drunk 365 times, the record shows 365 drunken men, when in fact it is the same fellow all the time.

How long has it been since you saw a drunken man in Peterborough?

How many drunken men have you seen in Peterborough within the past seven days?

Do not fail to attend the mass meeting at the Opera House this evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Wright's speech will deal with conditions in Owen Sound under Local Option, and every one in Peterborough should be, at this time, especially interested in knowing what those conditions are.

Mr. Durand's speech will be a great treat and if you do not hear it you will regret it.

The meeting at the Opera House, Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, to be addressed by Mr. Livingston and Dr. Wadleigh will be especially interesting to every one desiring to know the truth about local option and its effect upon society.

Come to both of these meetings. You will hear some excellent music and splendid speeches. It will cost you nothing to get in and nothing to get out. 1d18

GARRISON FALLS BEFORE THE GREEKS

Turks Also Lose Sailing Vessel Which Struck Mine

Special Correspondence.

Smyrna, Jan. 3— The Turkish sailing vessel, "Theodores," was blown up to-day by coming in contact with a floating mine at the entrance to Smyrna Bay.

London, Jan. 3— The Turkish garrison of the Island of Chios, numbering two thousand men, surrendered to-day to the Greeks. It was rumored on the Paris Bourse that Adiranople had fallen.

London, Jan. 3— The opening of the Peace Conference was postponed till six o'clock this evening to permit the Turkish envoys to digest their fresh instructions.

Ottoman Delegates Say They Have Offered All They Can

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The plenipotentiaries to the peace conference enjoyed a day of general relaxation. Even the meeting of the ambassadors yesterday was purely academic, as all agreed that Wednesday's advances by Turkey had changed the situation to such an extent that they must await corresponding instructions from their respective Governments.

The Turks continue to declare that their concessions have surpassed any logical expectations, but that now they cannot at any cost cede an inch more.

On the other hand, the allies with unanimous voice and compact front maintain that they would rather end the conference than renounce what they claim is due them by right of their victories in the war.

The real stumbling block is Adrianople as a compromise solution respecting the Aegean Islands is possible. Some suggest that Turkey cede them to the powers, which can decide their fate.

The struggle will certainly be bitter now between the Turks and the allies. The former are threatening to appeal to the supreme tribunal of Europe; the latter are threatening to resume the war. It is expected, however, that relief from this situation may result from the meeting of the ambassadors, to whose judgment probably both Turkey and the allies will submit, if they decide unanimously what the fate of the islands must be.

The powers are particularly concerned in this question, because some of the islands — Samothrace, Imbros, Lemnos and Tenedos are of international importance, commanding as they do the entrance to the Gulf of Smyrna. The remainder of the islands are still in the hands of Italy, which occupied them during the war with Turkey.

If the powers unanimously ask Greece to evacuate some of the islands already occupied, it is believed that Greece will obey.

CATTLEMEN WERE KILLED AND ROBBED

Canadian Press Despatch

Valencapo, Minho, Portugal, Jan. 3.—Bank smugglers this morning attacked a wealthy cattle breeder, Joseph Murilhaes, who was proceeding home from fairs attended by 40 of his herdsmen carrying ninety thousand dollars as the proceeds from sales of stock. Nine of the cattlemen were killed, and a number of the rest were wounded, including Muriljaes. All the money was captured.

LOCAL OPTION LEADS THE WAY TO BRIGHTER AND BETTER THINGS

It Stays Wherever Tried is the Experience of Ontario Municipalities

The reason the liquor interests in Ontario—and in Peterborough, for that matter—are so demoralized, is because Local Option is sweeping everything before it. In 1905 only 47 municipalities in Ontario had adopted local option. To-day 312 are under Local Option, and 151 others are without licenses. This makes 463 municipalities in Ontario that are without the open bar. No wonder the advocates of the open bar are becoming desperate in their efforts to discredit local option. There are now only 365 municipalities in Ontario that still have the open bar, and in 80 of these local option fights are now in progress. Who can doubt that within another few years the bar will be driven out of Ontario?

Not many years ago there were 114 bars in Peterborough County. To-day there are only 17. Who would say that the County has suffered because we have cut off 97 bars? Who can seriously believe that if on Monday next Burleigh and Peterborough vote to wipe out the remaining 17 licenses—as all signs indicate — that anything but good will result? Who can seriously believe that when these 17 bars meet the same fate as the other 97 the City of Peterborough, and the County at large, will not be safer, better places to live in and still more prosperous than they are now?

PETERBOROUGH BUSINESS MEN FAVOR LOCAL OPTION.

The advocates of the bar try to tell us that Local Option will hurt business. How foolish! Will it result in one less man being employed in the Canadian General Electric or by the Quaker Oats? Will it injure such manufacturing establishments as the B. F. Ackerman Co., the Peter Hamilton Co. the William Hamilton Co., or the G. Walter Green Foundry? Would it close up any of our leading stores like those of Richard Hall, the A. W. Cressman Co., Robert Neill, Peter Connal & Son, or a number of others that might be mentioned? Evidently the proprietors of these last mentioned establishments do not fear any disastrous results from Local Option for they are all members of the Citizens' Local Option Committee that is trying to bring Local Option into effect in Peterborough. These shrewd business men know that Local Option has been a benefit to every town in which it has carried. The money which was formerly spent over the bars is now spent in the stores for articles of merchandise, that benefit the purchaser and the merchant, and make the employees of the manufacturing establishments more prosperous. The men who are shouting that Local Option will hurt Peterborough are not the business men of Peterborough. They are men who are trying to deceive the public in order that they may save their own business.

WHO SAY LOCAL OPTION IS NO GOOD?

Don't be misled by the arguments that are being used in Peterborough to discredit Local Option. Notices that the advocates of the bar are making no effort to bring a single representative citizen, such as the Mayor of a municipality or a well known merchant or manufacturer, from any town in Ontario which has Local Option, to prove that Local Option has not been a bad thing. They are advertising that a Mr. Samuel Wright, a business man of Owen Sound, will speak in Peterborough to-night against Local Option. When the members of the Citizens Committee telephoned to Owen Sound to find out who this Mr. Samuel Wright is, they were informed that there is not a business man of that name in Owen Sound, and that such a name does not appear in the City Directory.

UNITED STATES CONDITIONS ARE DIFFERENT

The advocates of the bar are bringing two men from the United States to Peterborough in an effort to prove to our citizens that Local Option will be a bad thing for this city. Why don't they bring men from other points in Ontario, where Local Option is in force? These men from the States know nothing about our Local Option Law. It is the best law of the kind in the world, and infinitely ahead of any municipal law of the kind they have anywhere in the States. Our penalties for offences against the law and our machinery for carrying it into effect are so much superior to anything of the kind they have across the border, there is no comparison.

In last night's evening papers, for instance, appeared a long article making out that prohibition has not been a great success in Maine. What has that got to do with Peterborough? The prohibition law in Maine was carried by the State, but its enforcement is left with the municipalities. Municipalities that don't want prohibition, don't enforce the law and therefore it is violated. In Ontario, when a municipality carries local option, it not only has the enforcement of the law in its own hands, but its enforcement is assisted by the Provincial government as well. It is because the Local Option law is so well enforced in Ontario that out of 294 municipalities that might have repealed it during the past two years not one did so. What better evidence can be given that local option is a success in Peterborough? What is the use of bringing in men from abroad to tell us that we cannot enforce our own laws, and we have positive proof that we can?

HOW WILL LOCAL OPTION AFFECT TAXES

Peterborough now derives a revenue of $3,750.00 a year from license fees. In last night's papers the advocates of the bar endeavored to show that taxes in Peterborough will be increased when the bars are voted out and this revenue is lost. Don't be alarmed. The assessment of Peterborough is approximately $8,000,000. This means that at the worst taxes in Peterborough on each $1,000 of assessment would be increased not over 44 cents. But it would not increase taxes that amount. In towns like Orillia, Collingwood, West Toronto, Bowmanville and many others where local option has been carried, business conditions have so improved and the prosperity of the people has been so enhanced by the savings that result where the sale of liquor is prohibited, that taxes have not increased. Then also the saving that result from the enforcement of law and the maintenance of drunks in the jails goes far to equal if they do not offset any small revenue derived from liquor licenses.

Aside, from all this, however, even if our taxes were increased 44 cents on $1,000 of assessment, would that be a sufficient reason to lead us to decide to continue the open bar in Peterborough when we know that during the past three years it has caused at least one murder, one attempted murder and many deaths from exposure and excessive indulgence in liquor as well as 258 violations of the law during the past year alone.

LOCAL OPTION AND "NO COLLECTION"

The advocates of an open bar in Peterborough are announcing public meetings and the notices close with the words "No Collection." Now this is generous. Not only are we to have a free show but are not even to be asked for a collection.

Let is look at the other wide of the matter. Someone must be paying for the hall and for the services of the men from abroad who are to speak. It costs a good deal. Is it possible that we have with us enough public spirited citizens with a firm conviction that the material, moral and spiritual interest of the city are being advanced by the open drinking places, to put up the price. Or is the expense being borne by those who are becoming rich by supplying liquor to satisfy the appetites they have themselves created?

"No collection." Think. How many little boys and girls are going about on our sloppy streets to-day without proper protection for their feet, because their boots and rubbers have gone to make the "collection?" Is it possible that Santa Claus failed to visit any of our homes because what he might have brought was in the "collection?" Have any women and children gone to bed cold and hungry during the Merry Xmas season because the fuel and food had gone to swell the "collection?"

"No collection." How many fathers and husbands have lost their manhood, honor and love for home and children in the interests of the "collection." How many broken hearted wives and mothers have parted with all that life holds dear to swell the "collection?" How many of our bright young men will be sacrificed in the next three years if Local Options fails in Peterborough to increase the "collection." "No collection."

UNRELIABLE TESTIMONY

There appears in last night's city papers a letter written by one W. F. Cowan, of Oshawa, and headed "Very Strong Testimony." As local option is not yet in force in Oshawa and the letter is chiefly made up of predictions as to the evils that will result from its adoption, and these mainly in the mind of the writer, it is difficult to see the force of the testimony.

In the letter reference is made to Bowmanville and the effects of local option on business there. In that connection, Mayor Mitchell of Bowmanville, when interviewed last night by long-distance telephone, said: "Bowmanville was never so prosperous as now. It has excellent hotel accommodation and the sentiment of the town is strongly against repeal. Mr. Cowan is talking about things he knows nothing about. There was a municipal matter here in which he interfered some time ago and it was supported by an overwhelming majority of our people. That showed what our citizens thought of his advice." (advt.)

LIMBERLOST
BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

"Anybody but an idiot mooning over a book or wasting time prowling the woods would have known you had to pay. Of course, I knew you would come home blubbering! But you don't get a penny! I haven't a cent, and can't get one! Have your way if you are determined, but I think you will find the road pretty rocky."

"Swampy, you mean, mother," corrected Elnora. She arose white and trembling. "Perhaps some day God will teach me how to understand you. He knows I do not now. You can't possibly realize just what you let me go through today, or how you let me go, but I'll tell you this. You understand enough that if you had the money and would offer it to me I wouldn't touch it now. And I'll tell you this much more. I'll get it myself. I'll raise it and do it some honest way. I am going back tomorrow, the next day and the next. You need not come out. I'll do the night work and hoe the turnips."

It was 10 o'clock when the chickens, pigs and cattle were fed, the turnips hoed and a heap of bean vines was stacked by the back door.

* * * * * * * *

Wesley Sinton walked down the road a half mile and turned in at the lane leading to his home. His heart was hot and filled with indignation. He had told Elnora he did not blame her mother, but he did. His wife met him at the door.

"Did you see anything of Elnora, Wesley?" she questioned.

"Most too much, Maggie," he answered. "What do you say to going to town? There's a few things has to be got right away."

"Where did you see her, Wesley?"

"Along the old Limberlost trail, my girl, torn to pieces sobbing. Her courage always has been fine, but the thing she met today was too much for her. We ought to have known better than to let her go that way. I ought to have gone in and seen about this school business. I'm no man to let a fatherless girl run into such trouble. Don't cry, Maggie. Get me some supper and I'll hitch up and see what we can do now."

"What can we do, Wesley?"

"I don't just know. But we've got to do something. Kate Comstock will be a handful, while Elnora will be two, but between us we must see that the girl is not too hard pressed about money and that she is dressed so she is not ridiculous. She's saved us the wages of a woman many a day. Can't you make her some decent dresses, Maggie?"

"Well, I'm not just what you call expert, but I could beat Kate Comstock all to pieces. I know that skirts should be plaited to the band instead of gathered and full enough to sit in and short enough to walk in. I could try. There's patterns for sale. Let's go right away, Wesley."

"Well, set me a bite of supper while I hitch up."

They drove toward the city through the beautiful September evening, and as they went they planned for Elnora. The only trouble was not whether they were generous enough to get what she needed, but whether she would accept what they got and what her mother would say.

They went to a large dry goods store, and when a clerk asked what they wanted to see neither of them knew, so they stepped to one side and held a whispered consultation.

"What had we better get, Wesley?"

"Blest if I know!" exclaimed Wesley. "I thought you would manage that. I know about some things I'm going to get."

At that instant several schoolgirls came into the store and approached them.

"There!" exclaimed Wesley breathlessly. "There, Maggie! Like them! That's what she needs! Buy like they have!"

Before she knew it Margaret was among them.

"I beg your pardon, girls, but won't you wait a minute?" she asked.

The girls stopped with wondering faces.

"It's your clothes," explained Mrs. Sinton. "You look just beautiful to me. You look exactly as I should have wanted to see my girls. They both died of diphtheria when they were little. If they had lived they'd been near your age now, and I'd want them to look like you. I know a girl who would be just as pretty as any of you if she had the clothes, but her mother does not think about her, so I got to mother her some myself."

"She must be a lucky girl," said one girl.

"Oh, she loves me," said Margaret, "and I love her. I want her to look just like you do. Please tell me about your clothes. Are these the dresses and hats you wear to school? What kind of goods are they and where do you buy them?"

The girls began to laugh and cluster around Margaret. Wesley Sinton strode down the store with his head high in pride of her, but his heart was sore over the memory of two little faces under Brushwood sod. He inquired his way to the shoe department.

"Why, every one of us have on gingham or linen dresses," they said, "and they are our school clothes."

For a few moments there was a babel of laughing voices explaining to the delighted Margaret that school dresses should be bright and pretty, but simple and plain and until cold weather they should wash.

"I'll tell you," said Ellen Brownlee, "my father owns this store. I know all the clerks. I'll take you to Miss Hartley. You tell her just how much you want to spend and what you want to buy, and she will know how to get the most for your money."

"That's the very thing," agreed Margaret. "But before you go tell me about your hair. Elnora's hair is h[illegible] and wavy, but yours is silky [illegible] [illegible]led flax. How do you do it?"

[illegible]ora?" asked four girls in concert.

"Yes; Elnora is the name of the girl I want these things for."

"Did she come to the high school today?" questioned one of them.

"Was she in your classes?" demanded Margaret without reply.

Four girls stood silent and thought fast. Had there been a strange girl among them, and had she been overlooked and passed by with indifference because she was so very shabby? If she had appeared as much better than they as she had looked worse would her reception have been the same?

ANTI-LOCAL OPTION NOTES

Items Concerning the Attempt to Close Hotels Here

There are fifteen places in Peterborough where intoxicating liquors are sold under the law, each place paying five hundred dollars per annum for the right to sell. Abolish these places and Peterborough will have to do one of two things: Curtail expenses three thousand, seven hundred and fifty dollars each year, or raise that amount by increasing the taxes of her citizens. More than that rentals will be lower, resulting in a depreciation of property valuations, generally, necessitating the raising of the rate of taxation.

The Chairman of the Local Option meeting at the Opera House, Sunday evening, said: "If you had Local Option in Peterborough five hundred of her citizens would buy automobiles." The gentleman is in the automobile business.

The advocates of Local Option talk as if they were the only temperance people on earth. It is respectfully submitted that those who oppose Local Option are for temperance, and many of them practice total abstinence.

Adopt Local Option in Peterborough and liquor will find its way into homes where it has never been.

Adopt Local Option in Peterborough and men who never before spent a night away from home will be absent for days at a time.

Adopt Local Option in Peterborough and men who are light beer drinkers now will become habitual whisky drinkers.

Adopt Local Option in Peterborough and men who seldom leave home now will, upon the slightest pretext, "take a little trip" to Toronto.

Adopt Local Option in Peterborough and men who were never known to become intoxicated, will frequently become so.

The parents of Peterborough can guard their boys against the legalized open drinking place much easier than they can guard them against the hidden illicit vender of alcoholic stimulants.

If it is wrong for any one to sell alcoholic stimulants in Peterborough it is wrong for anyone in Peterborough to buy alcoholic stimulants anywhere. How many votes would Local Option get in Peterborough if nobody could sell and nobody buy under its operation.

There are twelve hotels and three shops dispensing liquor in Peterborough at the present time, and they have been doing the same thing for a long time. This is very good proof that there are quite a few people in and around Peterborough possessed of an appetite for something to drink. It is not an unreasonable assumption that these people will have the same old thirst after the election no matter which way the election goes, and they will gratify their longing in the way that suits them best.

You may vote a city dry, but you cannot vote its people dry.

Did you ever hear a Local Option advocate advising people to quit drinking? You never did for that would be taking the man away from the drinking place and would be reasonable and sensible; for the drinking place would not follow the man. They spend all their time trying to take the drinking place away from the man, and that is unreasonable and idiotic, for the man follows the drinking place wherever it goes.

Extract from Toronto Daily Star, June 14, 1912:
Rural Dean Cayley took the stand that the moral welfare of the community would not be best served by the closing of the bars. A large number of the clergy of Toronto, he said, took this view. The closing of the bars might give rise to greater evils. It was the biggest possible mistake to make to think that by closing the bars the community would be made moral and temperate.

To hear our Local Option friends talk, every man who drinks is a drunkard. Take a piece of paper and a pencil and write down the names of all the men in your acquaintanceship everywhere that you can conscientiously characterize as drunkards. You will be surprised how very few you can call to mind.

One disgusting feature of Local Option is the frequency with which we see men telling other men they shall not drink something when they themselves are doing things a thousand times worse than the thing they seek to prohibit.

Our Local Option friends are constantly proclaiming that Local Option in Peterborough would remove temptation from men and boys. What temptation will it remove? Cannot the blind pig, the pocket peddler and the mail order house tempt them? Local Option, instead of removing temptation from them, will tempt them to become sneaks, liars and hypocrites.

We have had beautiful word pictures lately of the lovely conditions existing in Orillia. The following editorial, from the Northern Advance, Barrie, August 8th, 1912, will throw a slightly different shade on the picture:

This continual dragging of Local Option into almost every news item of the Orillia Packet and the Collingwood Bulletin is becoming nauseating. Here's one of the latest "wild guesses" from the Packet, in whose home town there is said to be as much "booze" consumed as in any other town under License in Ontario:

"The latest report of the House of Refuge, Beeton, shows that it only cost $78.62 for the keping of the indigents of Orillia, while those of Barrie, with a smaller population, cost $285.95, or more than three and a half times as much for the open bar town. Has Local Option had anything to do with it?"

No, Local Option has nothing to do with it whatever, Brother Hale, but the fact that Barrie is the County Town to where many undesirables drift (and not a few from Orillia, as can be shown by the names of the House of Refuge Roll) and are from here committed to the Home, is the principal reason for the large difference in the costs apportioned to each of these two Municipalities.

Let us take a peep at some other phases of life in Orillia the Good, and Barrie the Wicked. How long since a serious criminal case has been heard in the Courts here, the principals of which were Barrie residents? Not for some years, to the writer's knowledge. What about Orillia? Two or three murder trials in about as many years, rape cases and several others, in fact the Courts are hardly ever free of the task of washing Orillia's dirty linen.

Brother Hale, if you are so solicitous for the moral welfare of the citizens of Orillia (and we honestly think your intentions are of the very best) why do you not start a crusade against the wholesale drinking bouts said to be nightly going on in some of the boathouses along the shores of Lake Couchiching? Why not try to instruct the young men who come to Barrie for the purpose of carrying home suitcase loads of whiskey that they are breaking the law? Those Orillia youths may be seen staggering under the weight of their loaded grips as they make their way to the depot in Barrie, but it is a very rare thing to see a Barrie young man the worse of liquor. We hold no brief for the whiskey men, nor are we oblivious of the daily drain on the vitality and wealth of the country as a whole, through the immoderate use of liquor but we submit that it is a poor policy for a town like Orillia, or Collingwood, either, to be continually throwing stones at Barrie, where the moral standard of the residents is far above that of either of the aforementioned places, under Local Option.

"Let he that is without sin cast the first stone," seems appropriate to the case in mind, and if the Editors of the Packet and the Bulletin would begin a campaign to clean their own back-yards, there would be more justification for this continual harping on this theme, and the apparent desire to create the impression that we are "better than thou art."

Do not fail to attend the mass meeting at the Opera House Friday evening, in opposition to Local Option in Peterborough. Mr. Weight will tell the truth about Owen Sound and Mr. Durand will discuss generally the failures and fallacies of Local Option.

There will not be a dull moment from start to finish. Good music. Come. Admission free. No collection.

There will be another meeting in opposition to Local Option in Peterborough at the Opera House, Sunday evening, January 5th, 1913.

The speakers at this meeting will be Mr. James A. Livingston of Grimsby, Editor of the Grimsby Independent, and the Rev. Thomas B. Wadleigh, of Illinois.

Mr. Livingston has given much thought to the liquor question and has observed the working of license regulation and control, and the effect of Local Option, where it has been tried in the Province of Ontario and he comes to Peterborough to give its citizens the benefit of his study and investigation. His speech will be highly instructive and entertaining.

Dr. Wadleigh is a Congregational Minister and was an Assistant Chaplain in the British Army in India for one year. He has been in the ministry over twenty years and was on the lecture platform five years for the W.C.T.U. and Prohibition party. Having seen the rank failure of Local Option he has repudiated the same, and stands for high license and Government control. Dr. Wadleigh has travelled around the world, spent four years in India, and has studied the liquor problem from a world-wide view point. Every voter in Peterborough should hear him.

An orchestra will furnish music at this meeting, the admission will be free, and there will be no collection taken.

Galt's Good Progress.

GALT, Jan. 3.—Galt's substantial and steady progress is indicated by customs returns and the record of building permits during the year. Duties collected for December of fiscal year, $241,394, total building permits $566,150, as against $482,384 last year. Population increase, over 1,000.

BROCKVILLE, Jan 3.—C. H. Wilson of Hawkestone, Ont., graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College, has been appointed head farmer at the Provincial Asylum here. The services of A. McCrimmon, the present incumbent, will be retained in an assistant capacity.

OLIVET, Mich., Jan. 3.—While playing hockey on Pine Lake, near here yesterday afternoon, three boys broke through the ice and were drowned, in site of heroic efforts by their companions to rescue them.

ROCKEFELLER FLEES

Brother of John D. Escapes Money Probe by Sailing Away.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Jan. 3.—Wm. Rockefeller, wanted as a witness before the "money trust" investigating company, sailed from Jeykl Island, near Brunswick, Tuesday on an unidentified steamer for an unknown port, according to reports here last night.

Accompanied by his wife and son, Wm. C. Rockefeller, as well as the latter's wife, Mr. Rockefeller arrived at Jeykl Island more than three weeks ago. Instead of going to the Rockefeller winter home, the party got quarters in an apartment house and remained in seclusion. The apartment house is near the handsome home of Mr. Rockefeller.

Extreme secrecy is maintained by residents of Jeykl Island regarding the departure of the Rockefellers. The name of the vessel on which they departed also has been carefully withheld.

FOUGHT HOUR'S DUEL.

Count Tisza Severely Wounds His Opponent, Count Karolyi.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Jan. 3.—Count Michael Karolyi, a prominent member of the Opposition in the Hungarion lower House, was severely wounded by Count Stephen Tisza, the Speaker of the lower House, in a duel with sabres, which took place here yesterday. Count Tisza also was cut on the hand.

The duel lasted an hour, during which time thirty-two bouts were fought. It was brought to a conclusion only by the exhaustion of the contestants, who separated without being reconciled.

The combat arose out of a political quarrel.

Textile Strike Ends.

LITTLE FALLS, N.Y., Jan. 3.—The Little Falls textile strike has ended. At a meeting at which considerable enthusiasm was displayed, the strikers last night voted to return to work in the Gilbert and Phoenix mills, thus bring to a close a labor difficulty which since early October last has vexed this industrial centre, giving rise to numerous sensational developments, including several riots and the arrest of prominent socialists and leading finally to mediatory measures by the State Labor Department.

Nearly Killed by Horse.

GUELPH, Jan. 3.—Austin Muir, an employe of Hunter's bakery at the Victoria Mills, had a narrow escape from death when he went into the stable to feed the horses, when one of them let both hoofs fly out. One hoof caught Muir on the chin, cleaving it. He will recover.

First Tug of the Year.

SARNIA, Jan. 3.—Navigation on the St. Clair River opened for the year 1913 yesterday, when a tug from down the river arrived at Sarnia for lumber. A sand barge is also working between the river here and Detroit.

TWO POINTERS ON HOW TO CURE A COLD

When you begin to sniff and feel a burning sensation in the nasal passages, or when a tickling irritation in your throat starts you coughing, the first important thing is to act at once. It's the neglected cold that becomes troublesome and dangerous.

The second important thing to do is to take Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, and keep it up till the cold disappears entirely.

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne is absolutely free from harmful drugs, and can safely be given even to moderately young children. It is pleasant tasting and quick acting, promptly relieving the irritation of the throat and nostrils, loosening the mucus, promoting expectoration, and checking the cold.

Your druggist has Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne in 25c. and 50c bottles, or can quickly get it for you. Compounded by the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited. 315

Local Option Has Depreciated the Value of Property in Orillia

Police Magistrate Clark, of Orillia, has spoken in a number of places throughout Ontario in favor of Local Option. He has publicly stated that Local Option has been the means of increasing the value of real estate. The advertisement below has appeared in the Orillia News Letter for a number of weeks. That no one can be found to buy a modern house costing $9,000.00 for a little over half the cost is the best proof that Local Option has not improved the value of real estate in Orillia.

The assignee of the estate of J. H. Lavalle has instructed me to offer for sale the splendid residence at the corner of Mary and Nottawasaga Streets. There are six bedrooms, three fireplaces, bathroom and every modern convenience.

The situation is central, within less than two blocks of the Town Hall. The five points ensure a good breathing space for all time.

There is a good garage and other out-buildings. The whole property is in excellent repair. As it stands it cost over $9,000 and I am instructed to sell it to the first comer at the astonishingly low price of

CANADA'S INCREASING DRINK BILL

Consuming 1,050,694 More Gallons of Spirits Than It Did Five Years Ago.

Canada is drinking more than a million gallons of spirituous liquors in excess of what it did five years ago.

Evidently prohibition agitation and the enforcement of local option laws have been a great boon to foreign spirit manufacturers. According to the latest report of the Dominion Department of Trade and Commerce a half million more gallons of brandy, gin, rum and whiskey were imported from Great Britain in 1911 than were imported four years previously. In 1907 the total of these imports was 641,622 gallons. Year after year the imports rose until in 1911 they reached a total of 1,156,879 gallons.

During the same period the imports into Canada of spirituous liquors from other countries greatly increased. Excepting the United States, the imports from these countries increased from 928,459 gallons in 1907 to 1,462,691 in 1911.

From the United States the imports of spirituous liquors increased from 11,684 gallons in 1907 to 22,989 in 1911.

In all, this makes 1,050,694 more gallons of spirituous liquors imported in 1911 than were imported in 1907. The great bulk of these imports was whiskey.

At the same time the whiskey distilleries located in Canada have been making and selling an average of 6,000,000 gallons a year.

These official statistics force the admission that years of prohibition campaigning have had no other result than to increase the consumption of whiskey and similar strong liquor, and benefit the whiskey interests which seem to be rolling in profits. If further convincing evidence is wanted, it is supplied by the 1912 report of the Dominion Inland Revenue Department which shows (page xviii) that the per capita consumption of whiskey in Canada is now higher than at any time during the last twenty-seven years.

Local Option and prohibition laws have had, it must be acknowledged, the paradoxical effect of driving out weak beverages and inciting the secret sale and consumption of heavy intoxicants.

Beer, for instance, is a drink having only three to four per cent. of alcohol. But put up, as it is, bulky kegs or bottles, it cannot be transported with anything like the ease and secrecy that whiskey can. Another factor militating against the use of this mild drink in local option regions is that to insure its sale it must be kept properly cold. People reject it when warm.

Whiskey, however, needs no such treatment, and can be conveniently and surreptitiously sold from the pocket or suitcase as well as from hidden receptacles in the "blind pig." When it is considered that whiskey contains 50 per cent. or more of alcohol, it is not surprising that its widespread use under these conditions has resulted in summary convictions for drunkenness increasing in Canada from 29,802 in 1907 to 34,068 in 1910. The returns from many Local Option and other non-license places in Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and elsewhere show a great increase in convictions for drunkenness. 1d18 pay for current civic expenditures, such as street cleaning, uniforms for the police, etc. He remarked in a joking manner upon the well-fed and well clad appearance of the Peterborough police force, accounting for it through the fact that one of them at least came from London, his home city.

HYDRO ELECTRIC POWER AT COST

The speaker reiterated the statement that the surplus from Hydro goes back to the consumer and that at the end of the debenture term the municipality is in absolute possession of its own lighting and distributing plant. The Commission adopted the reasonable and just practice invariably of returning the big profits to the users at the end of each year in reduced rates, and never allow them to be used for the reduction of the tax rate.

"Years ago," said the speaker, "it was startlingly announced that the Commission would cause the tax rate to be raised throughout the whole Province, alarmists going so far as to fix an increase of $2,000,000, and prophesying for Ontario complete bankruptcy.

"Let me emphatically say," said Mr. Beck, warmly, "that never will one dollar of increased taxation be levied upon the Province by the Hydro-Electric Commission."

He then went on to describe Ottawa and how it had reduced its power rates through the introduction of Hydro. But Peterborough will be in a better position than Ottawa, said the speaker, because Ottawa has to go to Hull for part of their power, which means a little extra cost. Water power in Peterborough will be under municipal control; it can be secured at cost and developed for next to nothing.

"Peterborough will then look like an electric city," he added, causing a burst of applause.

"The Commission hopes in time to be trustees for five hundred municipalities, not just fifty-one, as at present." Every municipality connected with the Hydro-Electric Commission obtains the benefit of the best legal and industrial advice possible, and the Commission assumes indirect control of all the work and users of power are treated equitably and fairly, whether they have been manufacturers, or householders. No bonusing of factories is countenanced by the Commission. This encourages small industries, which are fully as good, and even preferable, to large concerns, because they give a variety of labor best suited to the physical capabilities of the employes. The Commission is endeavoring to build up the whole of Ontario, and that is the policy which will eventually be the greatest factor in the welfare of the municipalities."

Hon Mr. Beck, in referring to the competent engineers with the Commission, said that thirty-eight of of them were Canadian boys, many of them graduates of the Canadian General Electric Works of this city. These were the young men to whom the Commission had entrusted the work of forwarding their work. He also noted that much of the apparatus was turned out by the Canadian General Electric Company.

LINDSAY'S EXPERIENCE.

Mr. Beck believed that the people of Lindsay were sorry that they had not dealt with the Commission, who had offered to take over the Fenelon Falls power, with Lindsay paying only for the distribution system.

Instead they dealt with the Seymour people. They were told the Sylvester works would be started again and would need 1,000 h.p. more than could be supplied. Hundreds of men would be employed in the works. The pepole voted and tied themselves to a franchise. Soon after the by-law carried, the business moved to Orillia. Lindsay now has an empty building and is signed up with the power company. The speaker cited this case to show the dangers from "jokers" in agreements and added that it was the fault of the companies that the Commission was obliged to take up something on its own account.

LOWER RATES FOR HOUSE LIGHTING.

For house lighting, Hon. Mr. Beck pointed out that it was possible for the city to eventually have a rate of 2 1-2 cents per kilowatt hour, instead of 7 cents as now paid. London with power transmitted all the way from Niagara, paid 4 cents per 100 square feet, or 6 cents per kilowatt hour. Electric power would become a common commodity in Peterborough. The street would be lighted and made as safe as though protected by a double force of policemen.

From St. Thomas, where the rate was $34 per h.p., connections were made with six farms, where the speaker explained the farmers were using the power for all farm purposes, such as milking machines, wood chopping, preparing the grain and also for cooking and heating utilities. They had 2 h.p. and paid $100 yearly.

"If that can be done with power at $30, what can be done in this district with $15 power? If there's a district that lends itself to making rural distribution possible, its the Trent district." Mr. Beck further prophesies that Peterborough would not be paying the first rates more than a year before it was demonstrated that they were too high. "The Commission will take over the Otonabee power house," he said. "The lease of No. 4 dam could be had when asked for. If the people assert themselves and have something commendable, there is no Government that will not give what they demand. You are in a strong position.

"We will finance it at 4 per cent., and not ask you to pay back till the business justifies it. You work up your business as the other people do. Your misfortune has been that you have allowed these valuable powers to get out of your hands. We have made application for 5 or 6 others along the Trent. As soon as you consume what you contract for, we will increase the supply as you require it. We're the trustees for the Province and the municipalities When it's paid for it will belong to the municipalities—the same with the distribution system.

"I see great prospects for this city and district," said Mr. Beck. "The whole of the country from Toronto to Cornwall is looking on Peterborough. You have the grit, the courage, the conviction, and the means to develop for your own people. The others will follow. I'm glad there is no controversy in this thing. The people showed at the last election that you mean business. I hope it will not be long before some of your aldermen or the Mayor will have the honor of turning on light and power owned by the city of Peterborough."

At the conclusion of the address Alderman Johnston moved a hearty vote of thanks to Hon. Mr. Beck which was seconded by Ald. Buller, and conveyed to the visitor by His Worship the Mayor.

Hon. Mr. Beck suitably acknowledged it and the meeting dispersed with rousing cheers for the King.

PROMINENT CATHOLIC CLERGY FAVOR LOCAL OPTION

Rev. Patrick J. Murphy, of Dalhart, Texas, who is a native of Peterborough, and whose mother is still living on Lake street, in this city, in an address at Waco, Texas, some months ago, said in part

"About two years ago I had the pleasure during a period of three weeks, and until the rains had washed it out, of seeing on the sidewalk pavement of a Texas city my own blood, where it was spilled by a Texas bartender in an effort to take my life. That little incident helps to account for my being here to-day, as a Catholic priest, to register a solemn protest against a business, which, by its very nature, may encourage the taking of the life of any man. My principal reason, however, for being with you, in this magnificent assembly today, is this: I want to make one assertion that will go out through the press of Texas, and in printed pamphlet form enter every Catholic home in Texas, from the sunlit skies of Dalhart to the Miocene formations and the derricks of Beaumont. That one assertion is this:

"In the campaign that is now being inaugurated every Roman Catholic in the State of Texas, whether priest or layman, is absolutely free to work for and to vote for statewide prohibition. The Church of Christ is supposed to stand for something higher than the saloon business. And the day has now gone by when any churchman or any leader in any Church can come out in defense of the saloon business and achieve anything thereby but a most unenviable notoriety.

"The real issue in this campaign is the saloon business as we now have it, and the right of the people to decide whether it is a good thing or an evil thing, and their right, if they know it to be an evil thing, to vote it out. Remember this, and tell it to your saloon friend hiding behind the mask of local option: "The question of a fundamental right or wrong is not a matter of locality." If the saloon is an evil thing by reason of its nature in any County, then it is by that same fact an evil thing in every County.

"Did it ever occur to you that when the state places the ballot in your hand she is entrusting you with the voting power of a home? You are the head of a household, and you are supposed to vote the sentiments of your constituency. 'Your wife and family are against the saloon.' Then you will cast that vote of theirs against the saloon if you know what honor is, and if you are not a traitor to your family.

"For the home and against the saloon! It is not regulation! And it is not moderation! And it is not local option that you are voting on! You are going to cast the ballot of a home either for that home or against it! What is it? Come on! Be a man!"

FATHER MINEHAN.

Rev. Father Minehan, of Toronto, says, in speaking of the necessity for making every effort possible to curtail the evils of intemperance.

"How are we going to bring about this result? I say, unhesitatingly, that the best weapon at present available for this purpose, is Local Option. Some may say, 'Why not go in for prohibition at once?' Simply because prohibition is a Dominion measure, and the Dominion, as a whole, is not yet prepared for that extreme. But to the individuals who wish to thraw down Local Option by raising the question of Prohibition, I say, "The liquor curse must be strangled at any cost, and if any measure less energetic than Prohibition will not suffice, then Prohibition we shall have."

THE PLENARY COUNCIL.

The following is an extract from the pastoral letter of the Fathers of the First Plenary Council of Quebec: "Almost everywhere the civil authorities have given their weighty co-operation and have devoted themselves in a truly Christian spirit to the checking of this plague. It has, above all, been realized that the evil should be attacked at this source, namely, that the traffic in intoxicating liquor should br suppressed."

Cardinal Gibbons says: "I am heartily and absolutely in favor of Local Option." (advt.) 18

"Public notice is hereby given by the board of police commissioners of the city of Brantford that the commissioners will receive, with as little delay as possible, any letters embodying complaints regarding the police department, and upon receipt of same will fix a date for the public investigation of same, in so far as the said board has jurisdiction, of which sittings public notice will be given.

(Signed) "A. D. Hardy, Chairman,
"Board of police commissioners."

For a month or six weeks there has been more or less general talk and indirect complaint against the police and Chief Slemin, following the arrest of a young girl who was employed in a factory here and her examination by a doctor at the instigation of the police. The girl was alleged to have been implicated in the death of a baby found in Brantford, but after her examination the charge against her was dropped. Her employers heard of the examination, and at once decided to pay all costs of an action against the chief, the doctor who examined her and the two constables who were present at the examination. Robinette, Godfrey & Phelan of Toronto were employed, and notice of an action for $10,000 was served, returnable in a month. Mr. Godfrey, who has charge of the case, stated last night that the matter would be pressed and the writ issued next week. A citizens' committee has been formed to subscribe funds for the conduct of the action.

FORMAL APOLOGY MADE.

Guelph Petitioners Will Try to Have Howitt Charges Stricken Out.

GUELPH, Jan. 3.—Charged with criminal libel by Dr. H. C. Howitt, medical health officer, in connection with the charges made against that official to the City Council on Thursday last, 20 men, headed by W. R. Robinson, who signed the petition, appeared before Magistrate Saunders in the police court yesterday.

After the case had been duly presented to the magistrate, and a public apology had been made to Dr. Howitt by the men concerned, the case was rested, and at the request of Mr. Mowat, acting for the crown and J. R. Howitt, counsel for the plaintiff, an adjournment was ordered for one week, and in the meantime efforts will be made to have the words "medical health officer" expunged from the petition altogether before it goes before Judge Jamieson for investigation.

Chief Randall said yesterday morning that he welcomed the fullest investigation of the charges against his department. What course he would allow now rests with his counsel. The chief was away for some days out of town, otherwise he says he would have requested the police commission to take the matter up and investigate any charges against him.

Sand Barge Is Righted.

SARNIA, Jan. 3.—The sand barge Hustler was righted yesterday by the Reid tug. The boat when turned right side up was found to be in a bad shape. The upper works had been torn off when she collided. The boiler and machinery are still in the boat, however. She will be repaired at once.

SPEEDY CURES.

Dr. Alexis Carrel Has Made a Great Medical Discovery.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, who received the Nobel Prize for medicine in 1892, is the first to announce a great scientific discovery in 1913. In the current issue of The Journal of Experimental Medicine, the official organ of the Rockefeller Institute, dated Jan. 1 he predicts, as the result of a series of experiments which have been in progress since 1907, the possibility of healing a cutaneous wound in less than a day, and the repair of a broken leg in four days. Although Dr Carrel does not mention in his preliminary report, the assertion is also made that the reparative process may become applicable not only in cases where the tissues have been divided as in knife wounds, but in cases where large areas of tissue have been destroyed in various parts of the body by disease.

Dr. Carrel's latest discovery is the result of speculation as to the manner in which cells multiply and thus effect the growth of tissues.

Aided by knowledge of the fact that the growth of the body is dependent in many respects on the more or less mysterious activities of some of the ductile glands—the thyroids for instance—he applied a mixture of thyroid extract and macerated portions of other organs of the body to cutaneous wounds.

The results were wonderful, almost miraculous. They bear out the scientist's statement that "if the rate of the reparation of tissues were activated ten times only, a cutaneous wound would heal in less than twenty-four hours, and a fracture of the leg would be cured in four days."

Baxter Vancouver's Mayor.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 3.—Ald. T. M. Baxter was yesterday declared elected mayor of Vancouver by acclamation. Jonathan Rogers and former Mayor L. B. Taylor handed in their nomination papers, but in the excitement of the last moment Taylor forgot to sign his and was declared out of the race. Rogers was disqualified because of errors in entries of property he tried to qualify on.

His first wife to whom he was married here, was living in North Adams, Mass, when he went to Brier Hill, N.Y., in November last and married Miss Swaden, of Brockville.

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, JAN. 3, 1913.

HON. SAMUEL BARKER

The Review compliments the Federal Government on its appointment of Mr. Samuel Barker to the Privy Council and congratulates the distinguished member for East Hamilton on the honor conferred upon him. The appointment is of particular local interest, as Hon. Mr. Barker is well known to the leaders of the party in this city and is the father-in-law of Mr. C. H. Pennefather, manager of the local branch of the Union Bank.

Before his retirement from the bar, he was a lawyer of wide repute. He has been a member of Parliament for more than twelve years, and has taken a very prominent part in debate and in the councils of the Conservative party. In the debates of 1903 and 1904 upon the National Transcontinental Railway Bill, he was one of the principals; his speeches were notable for clear insight, searching analysis, and keen criticism. Mr. Barker has had a great experience in the political organization of the Province of Ontario, and the fact that Hamilton is a Conservative strong hold is due largely to his planning and personal attention to organization there.

BABY FARMS

For the benefit of the unitiated, it may be explained that baby farms are places receiving materntiy cases, at which the baby is adopted after birth, and left to grow or die, as the case may be. Unmarried mothers used to find the baby farm a convenient way fo getting rid of the encumbering and disgrace-testifying baby. At the last session of the Ontario legislature, a Maternity Homes Act was passed, licensing all these places, putting them under inspection, and requiring the filing of records regarding all births and deaths in the plase with certain public officials. This has been a much needed reform, and only a few weeks ago the license of one house was cancelled because its proprietor failed to report a birth.

Dr. Hastings, the medical Health Officer of Toronto, says that the infant mortality in these homes in Toronto show a death rate of 11 per cent., of cases admitted. The death rate in Montreal is 97 per cent. That is, only three babies per 100 born in these places survive. In Toronto practically eighty-eight out fo a hundred are saved. It was not long ago that a government official in Toronto declared that in these institutions many babies were literally let die. Their deaths were desired, because they had no friends. The inspection and registration has stopped this more or less in Ontario It is to be noted, however, that the Montreal medical authorities deny that the death rate in the Montreal institutions in 97 per cent., or anywhere near it. In the Hospital de la Maternities it is about 15 per cent. In the Montreal Founding and Baby Hospital it was 31 per cent., these institutions taking in deserted babes. But what Dr. Hastings had reference to are the Maternity Homes to which expectant mothers may go, hidden from the world for the time being. In Montreal these are uncontrolled by public authority, unlicensed, and uninspected. The Montreal medical authorities do now know what the death rate in them is. The regular hospitals are not in question. It seems time for the French province to follow the lead of Ontario in its legislation.

BOOST HOME INDUSTRIES

Peterborough has a good many societies and organizations, enough perhaps. But if there are any persons anxious to start something, we might suggest a Made-in-Peterborough Club—an organization to promote the purchase of goods made in this city whenever possible, and when this is not practicable to call for Made-in-Canada articles. Germans set the world an example in this matter. Here are the Germans' ten commandments:

1. In all expenses keep in mind the interests of your compatriots.
2. Never forget that when you buy a foreign article your own country is thus made poorer.
3. Your money should profit no one but Germans.
4. Never profane German factories by using foreign machinery.
5. Never allow foreign eatables to be served at your table.
6. Write on German paper with a German pen and German ink, and use German blotting paper.
7. German flour, German fruit and German beer alone can give your body true German energy.
8. If you do not like German malt coffee drink coffee from German colonies.
9. Use only German clothes for your dress and German hats for for your head.
10. Let not foreign flattery distract you from these precepts; and be firmly convinced, whatever others say, that German products are the only ones worthy of citizens of the German fatherland.

PAUL RAINEY'S AFRICAN HUNT

The wonderful motion pictures which Mr. Paul J. Rainey secured during his recent big game hunt in the jungles of British East Africa, and which have been pronounced "the most marvelous ever taken," will be the attraction at the Grand on Monday and Tuesday next, matinee and evening, each day.

Rainey is a young Cleveland multimillionaire whose love of travel and adventure has taken him to almost every quarter of the globe, he now being in India, where he will participate in the winter tiger hunts arranged by the native Indian princes.

The expedition to the African jungles was undertaken merely from the point of sport, and Mr. Rainey was the first big hunter in that section to provide that the wonderful scenes he saw, and the strange experiences he passed through, should be preserved for exhibition to the public through the medium of the motion picture, colored slide and trained lecturer. Accompanying his expedition was a large corps of expert photographers and motion camera operators, and whenever there was a hunt to be undertaken or a dangerous trip into the jungle, these fearless men were always in the forefront. The expedition or safari consisted of thirty-five white men, 325 carriers and guides—black giants of the Massais, Somalis and Swabeelis, all African tribesmen noted for their courage and endurance—while 135 camels, 40 horses, 54 oxen and 150 sheep were included in the caravan. Mr. Rainey also took with him his pack of sixty hunting dogs, brainy and courageous Airedales, trained American bear hounds and several unbeaten fighting dogs.

Over a quarter of a million dollars was spent by the young millionaire on this expedition, but he considers this time and outlay well spent in the immense addition to natural science he was able to secure, and the great amusement that his series of motion pictures has afforded the theatregoers of the world.

The African Hunt motion pictures and lecture is being played in only the best class of theatres throughout the country, the first English production being scheduled to open in the Empire Theatre, London, England, on Jan. 13th. The Canadian tour comprises London, Ont., Brantford, Peterborough, Kingston, Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto.

Honesty is the rule, probably, with seven or eight men out of ten, although all of us might enlarge our vision of honesty.

KRYPTOK

Means "hidden eye." The "near" lens is actually hidden in the "distance" lens making a solid piece of glass.

No "lines" no cement, and perfect sight with the discomfort and unsightliness left out.

They cost more than the regular "cement" bifocal, ("Bifocal" means two lenses in one—far and near) but if you are particular of comfort and appearance they are worth the difference. We recommend and sell them.

ONTARIO'S GROWTH IN PAUPERISM

Instead of Decreasing Under Local Option, Paupers Have Increased.

One of the chief arguments used in bringing about local option has been that if the bars were closed out, pauperism would greatly decline, if not altogether cease in the local option districts.

This argument was based upon the supposition that liquor was the chief cause of pauperism. But although the number of bars in Ontario has been reduced from 2,002 to 1,532 from 1908 to Jan. 1st, 1912, and although 289 Ontario municipalities are under local option, and 154 others have no licenses, nevertheless the number of paupers has increased.

In 1907 there was an average of 1,533 paupers in the County Houses of Refuge. According to the latest report of the Provincial Secretary there is now an average of 1,644 paupers in the 29 County Houses of Refuge. These figures do not include such cities as Toranto, Ottawa and others. Many of the most crowded almshouses are in the very counties where local option generally prevails.

In Brant County, for example, six of the eight municipalities are under local option, yet there are, according to the report issued this year, 50 inmates in the County House of Refuge. In the County of Middlesex, nine of the municipalities of which are under local option there are 69 paupers in the County House of Refuge. In Oxford County where six municipalities are under local option, there are 83 paupers in the County House of Refuge.

In Simcoe County nine of the seventeen municipalities are under local option. These nine municipalities include Orillia and Midland. Yet there are 89 paupers in the County almshouse. In Northumberland and Durham, where 17 of the municipalities are under local option, the County House of Refuge contains 90 inmates.

These are some typical examples. Too evidently local option has not only not had the slightest effect in reducing pauperism, but the number of paupers has increased. Nominally, local option has effaced the bars, but in point of fact, as every well informed person knows, the only result has been to drive out a mild beverage like beer and to cause the secret consumption of whiskey which can be easily concealed and surreptitiously sold.

The facts here given prove that the prohibitionists preach a complete fallacy when they assert that drink is the prime cause of poverty. In certain specific cases long overuse of hard intoxicants such as whiskey unquestionably produces demoralization and destitution. But the large measure of pauperism springs mainly from old age, sickness, unemployment, disability and other such factors which have nothing to do with the liquor question.

When Dickens Bought Coal.

Coal was "up" in March, 1839, when Dickens was in the neighborhood of Exeter arranging for the comfort of his parents in a cottage he had provided for them. "Coals are dear just now—26 shillings a ton," he wrote to Mitton. Boy labor, however, was not, for he goes on: "They found me a boy to go two miles out and back again to order some (coals) this morning. I was debating in my mind whether I should give him 18 pence or two shillings when his fee was announced — twopence." — London Chronicle.

Bright Newsboy's Idea.

An English newsboy has showed that he has just as much ingenuity as most youths and maybe more. It was he who designed a rack, by means of which he was able to reach papers to customers on omnibuses. A long pole has a number of wire frames fastened across it. Into each frame a different paper is thrust and below the whole assortment is a box, into which the purchaser drops his coin. The news vendor has merely to reach up his group of papers and the customer makes his selection and drops the price into the box.

Secure Another Industry

The Henry Hope & Sons By-law is to give a site and an exemption from taxes (except school taxes and local improvement taxes) for ten years.

The company agree to erect a building 80x 200 feet, and invest at least $60,000 in building and plant and to employ from the start at least fifty persons.

The cost to the ratepayers at the present assessment will be less than 12 cents a year on an assessment of $1,000 for twent years. But the increased population will mean an increased assessment to bear the small necessary rate and reduce this 12 cents.

At the present assessment of the site the city receives from the land $97.00 in taxes, and at a moderate assessment the company will pay $260.00 in taxes over the exemption.

Each new factory means more employment, more population, more business and more prosperity.

SUPPORTING THE BY-LAWS

Mayor Bradburn Asks Ratepayers To Give Them Support

While congratulating Hon. Adam Beck on his comprehensive address last evening, Mayor Bradburn took the opportunity to impress upon the ratepayers present the necessity of their voting also for the acquisition of the Henry Hope and Sons Company industry. He described the proposed operations of the Company and the mild concessions asked to be induced to locate here. He also threw out a plea for the $10,000 by-law for an incinerator, which will go to the people at the same time as the Hydro-Electric and industry by-laws.

The first mention of the Henry Hope industry brought loud applause from the audience.

THE OPEN BAR CAUSES MANY DEATHS

In recent issues of the Peterborough papers the statement was made that the report of the Registrar General of Ontario reveals that of a total of 34,341 deaths, there were just 98 deaths in the entire province due to chronic and acute alcholism. From these figures an effort is made to prove that liquor does not cause as many deaths as is commonly supposed. The figures referred to in this case refer only to those whose deaths that were so evidently due to liquor that no other cause of death could possibly be assigned. Take the case of the woman in Peterborough not long ago was shot by her son while he was under the influence of liquor. Was her death not due to the liquor traffic? The figures given would not show it. Not long since a man died in the Peterborough jail after a prolonged debauch. His death was given in the papers as heart failure. The fact fact is, as everyone knows, that thousands of deaths every year from one cause or another are due to indulgence in liquor. The statement made by Rev. Dr. Chambers, Governor of the Toronto jail, that last year there were 5,000 deaths due to strong drink in the Province of Ontario, is a good deal nearer the mark than the advocates of the bar would like to let us believe.

INCREASED CONSUMPTION AND LOCAL OPTION

In an effort to prove that local option has led to an increased consumption of liquor, the advocates of the bar have recently been stating that the consumption of liquor in Canada has increased in proportion with the spread of local option. If that is the case we would expect to see them working tooth and nail to carry local option by-laws. If the adoption of local option in Peterborough is likely to lead to an increased consumption of liquor in Peterborough —as they are trying to make us believe that it will—then if their own contention is right they ought to be on the Citizen's Committee and working hard for the passage of the bylaw.

AUTOMOBILES OR WHISKEY

A resident of Norwood, which is a dry town, was a few days ago in the office of a business man in Hastings the rival town where there is license, when the following dialogue took place :—

Hastings Business Man—"Norwood is pretty dead since local option came in, isn't it?"

Norwood Resident—"Never heard so. How many new business places have you built in Hastings this year?"

Hastings Business Man—"None that I know of. How many in Norwood?"

Norwood Resident—"Well, at least a new bank, a new hotel and three or four stores. How many automobiles have you in Hastings?"

Hastings Business Man—"None. Have you any at Norwood?"

Norwood Resident—"Yes, we have seven and three more coming in the spring.

PLEA OF GUILTY TO THREE CHARGES OF FALSE PRETENCES

Peterboro Man Used Worthless Cheques and is Committed for Sentence.

Hamilton Herald— From the size of the police corut this mornign, there were many fractures of New Year resolutions. The pen was filled and the Magistrate handed down some good advice to the wrongdoers. Three charges of false pretences were read against William Stewart alias Montgomery, who gives his home address as Peterborough. He pleaded guilty in every case, but wanted to be tried by a jury and was committed fro sentence. He used worthless checks as his money making method, and gto away with $20 from W. J. Dore and $127 from the Dominion Bank and the Bank of Montreal. He was arrested in Buffalo and brought back here by the detectives.

Police Chief Thompson, who has had inquiries about Montgomery, said to-day that Montogmery had been sentenced from Peterborough to Central Prison, where he had served two sentences. It is not long since he secured his liberty.

SOME FACTS ABOUT PROHIBITION IN MAINE

Of the 20,099 cases in the superior and supreme courts of Maine in the twelve years from 1899 to 1910, the enormous total of 13,704 cases were for violations of the liquor laws.

The costs of criminal prosecutions in these twelve years were $855,000, the larger part of which was spent prosecuting liquor cases, or other cases indirectly caused by liquor.

The sum of $666,407.44 was paid for the support of prisoners in Maine jails during those twelve years. Most of this sum was expended on prisoners committed for intoxication or other offenses indirectly due to liquor.

Of the 6,727 prisoners committed in 1911 to Maine jails, 4,003 were committed for intoxication.

In 1911, the great number of 11,946 arrests for intoxication were made in twenty Maine cities with populations ranging from 3,000 to 58,000.

In Bangor alone (population 24,803) the police have made more than 2,000 arrests a year for intoxication during the last six years; in 1911 the arrests in that city for intoxication totalled 3,982.

In the city of Portland (population 58,571) nearly 5,000 arrests for intoxication have been made annually during the last five years. In 1911 the number of arrests in Portland for intoxication was 5,695.

There is such great profit in the "blind pig" illicitly selling whiskey, that the "blind piggers" can afford to pay the State of Maine from $55,000 to $175,000 a year in fines, and still have profits large enough left to give them a strong incentive for continuing to violate the law.

The liquor largely consumed in Maine is either inferior or adulterated whiskey of which enormous quantities are shipped in by freight or express in every conceivable disguise. Or it is "dope" concocted right in Maine from raw alcohol with a coloring of prune juice, tobacco juice or bluestone. Beer, which contains only a slight percentage of alcohol, which is too bulky to be transported or concealed successfully and which is distasteful when warm, is seldom sold in Maine. Almost without exception the vast number of cases of intoxication are caused by whiskey. In addition to the "blind pigs," the "pocket peddlers" and the "suit-case brigade" do a large and profitable business clandestinely selling whiskey.

At a recent election to determine whether the prohibition clause in the Maine constitution should be resubmitted to the people or not, almost one-half of Maine's voters voted in the affirmative thus signifying that after a long trial they were fully prepared to abolish prohibition. 1d 18.

A PROTEST BY CANADA

Regarding the Administration of the Panama Canal.

Washington Is Unofficially Advised That Canada Is Elaborating Sir Edward Grey's Complaint to the Effect That the Panama Waterway Should Be Administerd as Welland Canal Is.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—In the midst of the deliberate consideration which State Department officials are giving the note of Sir Edward Grey of Nov. 14, protesting against the exemption of the Amercian coastwise shipping in the Panama Canal, attention has been attracted to a report emanating from Ottawa, that the Canadian Government is preparing new matter to add to that protest. Without official knowledge on the subject, the conclusion has been received that the Canadian protest would be devoted to an elaboration of statements made in the Grey note regarding the effect of the Panama Canal Act upon Canadian railways owning and operating between the Welland Canal and the Panama Canal.

Touching the first matter it is recalled that the British Government reserved the right to discuss further the application of the act to British ships.

The recent action of the U. S. Department of Justice in proceeding against the Grand Trunk Railway officials under the terms of the act is believed to have decided the Canadian Government to insist upon the present discussion diplomatically of this reserved subject.

So far as the Welland Canal argument is concerned the American contentions is simple and direct. In substance it amounts to a sweeping denial that there is anything like a parallel between the Panama Canal, an independent waterway, forming in what some quarters has been regarded as part of the coast line, and the Canadian waterway, which is a mere incident in the boundary waters of the two countries; use of which is specifically guaranteed to both nations on even terms.

Back of nearly every big institution in this country you will find a worthy old gentleman who began in a small way and slowly built up a good reputation.

CITIZEN AT IT AGAIN.

Ottawa Paper Says Sir James Is Alienating His Adherents.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—"Tory Toronto on taxation" is the caption of an editorial which appears in The Ottawa Citizen (Conservative) to-day. It reads:

"If anything were needed to complete the proof that the people of Ontario are in favor of tax reform, it was supplied by the plebiscite in Toronto, whereby the desirability of asking the Legislature for permission to tax business improvement and income less than land was carried by an overwhelming vote of four to one.

"The action of Sir James Whitney in delivering over this splendid current of public opinion to the Liberal party, that it might be transformed into an irresistible political dynamic, cannot be condemned too strongly. Nothing would have been lost by allowing a discussion of either or both of the proposed bills by the members of the Legislature. His blunt refusal in no sense 'saved the country,' or did more than thwart the right of democracy to debate a question of vital public import. What his refusal did do was to make Mr. N. W. Rowell the accepted champion of the tax reformers, and to compel a great many Conservatives, who are aware of the real importance of this measure to follow his banner."

PUT ARM UNDER WHEELS.

Man Says Divine Message Urged Him To Sacrifice His Hand.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 3.—Harry Pullman, 23 years of age of Brooklyn, is in a serious condition at a local hospital from the loss of his left arm which was severed by the wheels of a trolley car. Pullman admitted that he placed his arm under a street car in order that it might be cut off, giving as his reason that he was "commanded to do so by God."

"I purposely put my left arm under the wheels of a street car in order to have it cut off," said Pullman in a sworn statement yesterday. "I was commanded by God to do this and I did it of my own free will. I am not a drinking man; I knew and realized what I was doing."

Honored Wolfe's Memory.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the annual banquet commemorating Gen. Wolfe, held Wednesday night at Westerham under the chairmanship of Lt.-Col. Warde, M.P., who is a descendant of Gen. Warde. Some fifty others attended, among them being Major-Gen. Townshend, Captain Murray, Major Burton, Hon. Maurice Glyn, A. H. Maclean, great grandson of Gen. Cockburn, and Hon. Dudley Carleton.

Some Stern Realities

Many of the young men of this town who formerly drank beer now carry a regular hip supply of whiskey, and our people go in car loads at times to Aurora and other places to get a supply. There is not the number of men doing business in Newmarket on Saturday afternoons that there were formerly. The town no doubt loses a percentage of its trade through the operation of this law. I feel that the licensed law as enforced under the present Government is very satisfactory. Under license it was a total impossibility for any one to get liquor during prohibited hours.

I had a talk with one of the principal business men of Midland, who acknowledged to me that their experience in regard to trading with men is similar to ours. I had occasion to visit Collingwood on business recently, and knowing that local option was in force, I started for the Grand Central Hotel, where I formerly stopped, only to find it closed. This was a hotel that was always looked upon as the best in the place.

Morally or socially, I cannot say intelligently that this law has brought about improvement. When in Collingwood, I put the question to a gentleman who is a large shareholder in the ship building industry of that town. I asked him "Is Local Option doing this town any good?" His answer was, "It is a curse."

AN ELECTION IS POSSIBLE

Appeal to People May Be Made in Great Britain.

Unionists Declare That Premier Asquith's Challenge to Bonar Law Indicates His Intention to Call a "Snap" Election—Chronicle Denies the Story—Lancashire Electors Are Opposed To Taxes on Food.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The possibility of an early general election in the United Kingdom is widely spoken of to-day as a result of Premier Asquith's pointed question to the Unionists in the House of Commons on Thursday, when he asked them to declare clearly what their attitude would be if the home rule bill was submitted to the electorate and approved.

The Daily Chronicle, a Ministerial organ, denies, however that the Government has any intention of dissolving Parliament.

The Times says that the rumors of an impending general election are strengthened by the passage between Premier Asquith and Mr. Bonar Law. "There is reason to believe that this significant incident has been handled with lively satisfaction on both sides of the House. The Cabinet for some time has been considering a general election as the only means of escape from the insoluble difficulties of the Ulster problem. Their anxiety about this course has hitherto been based on the well-founded distrust of the verdict of the constituencies, but that anxiety has been appreciably relieved by the present state of their opponents. Feeling that under existing conditions they have an unexpected chance of victory at the polls, it would not be surprising if the party generally were to turn their attention seriously to the prospects of a "snap" election.

In reference to the Unionist party's criticisms against the leader, Mr. Bonar Law, in connection with his food taxation proposals, Unionists members representing Lancashire constituencies had a meeting with Mr. Bonar Law yesterday afternoon and made it plain that they were solid against the inclusion of food taxes in their election program.

Mr. Bonar Law promised to give their views careful consideration, thus, according to The London Times, leaving the door open to compromise.

Lady Aberdeen In America.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Miss Violet Asquith, daughter of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, and the Countess of Aberdeen, wife of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, arrived here yesterday to be the guests for a few days of the British Ambassador and Mrs. Bryce. Many entertainments and social functions have been arranged in their honor. There was a small formal dinner at the embassy for them last night, but to-morrow night a formal dinner in their honor will be given there.

A LIVE CONSIGNMENT.

Lobster and Shrimps Are Rejected by Parcel Post.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The first violation of the parcel post law was discovered here yesterday afternoon, when a queer-looking package addressed to Philadelphia, was opened to reveal a live lobster and a handful of shrimps. The package was held up and forwarded to Postmaster Morgan.

More than sixteen hundred packages were mailed at the general post-office here yesterday, and many thousands more at the branch offices. At the Grand Central station branch, 8,000 bundles came in during the morning from suburban towns on the New York Central and New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. Among them were 40 cartons containing eggs.

For the first time in the history of the country, a coffin was sent through the mails yesterday from Zanesville, Ohio. The lid had to be sent as a separate package so the body of the coffin would come within the eleven pound limit. The total postage was 68 cents.

GETTING READY FOR SESSION.

Series of Cabinet Councils Began at Ottawa Yesterday.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—The Rt. Hon R. L. Borden, home from his sojourn at Atlantic City, was at his office yesterday morning receiving callers and attending to a lot of work which has accumulated in his absence.

A series of Cabinet councils starting yesterday will be devoted to preparations for the reassembling of Parliament on Jan. 14th. The main estimates are now undergoing their final revision, and will be ready for presentation when the House meets.

The naval bill, however, will have precedence until it is disposed of.

It is not to be anticipated that the naval bill will be passed hurriedly.

Heavy Accident Toll In Gotham.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Street accidents in New York City during the year 1912 caused the death of 532 persons. Statistics made public yesterday by the National Highway Protective Society show that 230 of these victims were children, of whom 103 were run over by automobiles. Of the total deaths 221 were due to automobiles, 134 to trolley cars and 177 to wagons. During the same period 2,363 persons were injured. The deaths from these accidents in 1911 numbered 423.

A New Year's Greeting of Good Wishes for a Prosperous and Happy Nineteen Thirteen

THE CHRISTMAS CAMPAIGN is over, and well over so far as we are concerned. The results have far exceeded our most sanguine expectations. When we read the last chapter of our Christmas trade, as capitulated on our cash sheets by our bookkeepers, we simply said "Isn't this great, where did it all come from?"

We appreciate very highly the increasing confidence manifested by our patrons from year to year, and rejoice, not only for our own sakes, but because ours, being almost entirely a business of necessities, may easily be taken as an indication of the general prosperity of our city.

We want your business for 1913, and we want your friend's business and your friend's friend's business. We consider the advertising our customers give us the best advertising we can have for this store, therefore we make it a point to see to it that every customer of ours gets full value for every dollar he spends here.

Murderer Battista's Charges Will Be Investigated.

MONTREAL, Jan. 3.—Criminal procedure will follow Carlo di Battista's disclosures, in which, before mounting the scaffold, he made startling charges against well-known Montrealers to the effect that they had paid blood money to get crimes committed.

"We are conducting an investigation now," declared Crown Prosecutor Walsh, "and we hope that in a short time we will be able to get the real man back of this."

The common opinion expressed around the court house is that Battista only made shrewd guesses at the truth concerning local crimes.

SAD RESULTS OF PROHIBITION

106,596 Arrests of Drunks in Twenty Maine Municipalities Since 1896.

Those who have insisted that prohibition would do away with the consumption of liquor and intoxication will be put at a loss to explain the startling conditions in Maine as disclosed by a recent tabulation of statistics.

The State of Maine was the first to adopt prohibition, and, by constitutional amendment, prohibition is still organic law. At a recent election virtually one-half of Maine's voters tried to repeal it, and came within a few hundred votes of succeeding.

Official returns show the appalling extent of intoxication in Maine, notwithstanding the fact that there is not a licensed place in the whole State.

In the year 1909 there were 3,609 persons commited to Maine jails and prisons for intoxication. The next year, 1910, the number was 4,728. Last year 4,003 were commited for the same offence.

But the number of commitments does not give an adequate idea of the prevalence of intoxication. To get this, we have only to consult the statistics of arrests for intoxication. In 1909, a total of 8,594 persons were arrested for intoxication in twenty Maine cities. In the same cities 9,340 were arrested for intoxication in the year 1910. During the following year the number arrested for intoxication in those twenty cities increased to 11,946. The largest of these twenty cities is Portland with 58,571 population. The number of drunks in the rural lock-ups cannot be ascertained.

Leaving aside the years previous to 1896, there has been since that year to 1911 the enormous total of 106,596 arrests for intoxication in those twenty cities, the total aggregate population of which is now 232,645.

During the same time there was also an average of 363 commitals to jail and prison every year for violations of the liquor license law.

Prohibitionists vaguely assert that the bar fills the jails and prisons. But here is a prohibition State where the jails and prisons are constantly filled with drunks and violators of the license law. Many of the commitals for other offenses such as assault often result from intoxication.

The curse of Maine is the immense quantity of whiskey secretly consumed, and the hypocrisy under which it is done. Prohibition has driven out the real temperance drinks such as beer, and has fostered the use of whiskey and other spirituous poisons which can be easily conveyed and sold. Beer is too bulky to be concealed or sold surreptitiously, and is unpalatable when warm.

If Maine allowed beer licenses it is safe to assume that there would be no such intoxication and crime as there now is under prohibition. It is also probable that there would neither be the hundreds of "blind tigers" there are, nor the greater number of the fifty-eight express companies which now make large profits by almost exclusively transporting whiskey. It is a matter of fact that the real headquarters of many of these express companies are in Boston whiskey jobbing houses.

SPORTING NEWS

SENIOR LINE-UP THE SAME AS AGAINST McGILL TEAM

The intermediate game with Trenton, scheduled for to-night, is off on account of no ice. The seniors went to Toronto this afternoon to meet St. Miq es at the Arena, in the first contest of the senior O.H.A. series. The game starts at 8.30. The local line-up is the same as that against McGill, with Bradshaw also making the trip. Park will play centre and Armstrong rover.

It is proposed to place a row of reserve chairs on the west side of the rink immediately inside the boards. In the three series, there will be 10 home games, and the proposition is to issue season tickets at $5, the holder having the privilege of attending all games in the first round of the three series and taking the same chair for each game. Ticket holders would have an entrance by way of the door on the west side, thus avoiding the crowds. One chair would retail at 75 cents for each game. The proposition should be a popular one.

Didn't Know of Brock.

A Brock incident connected with the recent Centenary at Queenston Heights was collected by a woman who lectures in one of Canada's educational institutions. A lady from Great Britain, speaking of the celebration said to the woman lecturer, who is a native-born Canadian and deeply attached to the traditions both of Canada and Britain, "Do you know I am so glad to know who Brock is. I quite resented his monument when I first visited Niagara, and now I am so glad to know who Brock is." On further inquiry the Canadian woman learned that the British-born woman had considered the placing of such a conspicuous monument to a man of whom she had never heard, in such a beautiful place — one of the most beautiful places in the world—rather an act of vandalism.

Fell 3,000 Feet.

Prof. Charles Wolcott died recently in Edmonton following an illness of several months. He went to Edmonton at the time of the exhibition last fall, and was taken ill. Prof Wolcott's death was indirectly the result of a fall of three thousand feet from a balloon in South America seventeen years ago. Practically every bone in his body was broken by the fall, and it was necessary in the operation which followed to lay bare the spinal cord for a distance of nine inches. The case attracted world-wide attention at the time, and newspapers and magazines devoted pages to the sensational fall and no less sensational recovery.

GREAT BOOM IN BOOZE

Per Capita Consumption of Whiskey In Canada Is Now Greater Than Any Year In Last Twenty-seven Years.

The recently issued Dominion Inland Revenue Report for the year ended March 31st, 1912, makes the startling revelation that the per capita consumption of whiskey in Canada is greater at present than in any year since 1885.

In that year the per capita use of spirits was 1.126. As the production of beer increased, the consumption of whiskey decreased. This fact was a great help to the temperance movement, for beer contains only from three to four per cent. of alcohol, whereas whiskey is a hard intoxicant containing fifty per cent. and often more of alcohol. Intelligent people learned to use beer instead of whiskey.

But the per capita consumption of whiskey is now up to the high mark of 1.030 — a far greater total than any year in the last twenty-seven years. It might be supposed, nominally, at any rate, that with the growth of prohibition, the consumption of whiskey would grow less and less. In recent years 638 bars have been close out in the Province of Quebec. The whole of Nova Scotia is under strict prohibition laws except Halifax which has the power of local option. The number of licenses in Ontario have been reduced from 2,366 in 1905-1906 to 1,621 in 1911. There are 289 municipalities in Ontario under local option and 154 other municipalities in which no licenses are issued, making a total of 383 Ontario municipalities without license.

This being the case it seems strange, on the face of it, that the per capita consumption of whiskey is much greater than at any time in the last twenty-seven years. Another significant fact stated in the Inland Revenue Report is that although Canadian whiskey distilleries have for years been producing about 5,000,000 gallons of whiskey a year, the exports have fallen from 412,859 gallons in 1907-1908 to 298,769 gallons in 1911-1912. This means that more of it is used for home consumption.

The question is why is it that the production and consumption of whiskey has so greatly increased in the very face of prohibition? This is not hard to explain. Wherever local option or prohibition is introduced, beer because of its bulkiness and unpalatability when served warm is driven out, and the surreptitious sale of whiskey takes its place. Beer cannot like whiskey be peddled in the pocket or retailed by the glass in "blind pigs."

Consequently the demand for the hard intoxicant, whiskey, increases. The shipments of whiskey into various local places are large and continuous. The shipments of whiskey into Orillia have averaged thirty to forty cases a week, each case containing a dozen bottles. An average every week of fifteen cases of 180 bottles, have been shipped into Orangeville. As for Owen Sound it is also a fact that an average of 125 cases, holding 1,500 bottles of whiskey, have been shipped into that town every week. These are typical examples of what has been happening in other local option places. In the non-license regions of Northern Ontario, particularly Cobalt and Porcupine, the Province Police seized 8,898 bottles of whiskey last year and more than 9,000 bottles of whiskey this year. The fact that there are hundreds of "blind pigs", in operation in Northern Ontario proves that, notwithstanding these large seizures, great quantities of whiskey have been smuggled in successfully.

This, in brief, is the explanation why the per capita consumption of whiskey has gone up to such a startling figure, and why the number of commitments for intoxication has increased in Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, Maine and all other places where prohibition or local option prevails. If the more sensible and rational plan of granting separate beer licenses was adopted, there would be a sudden and great drop in the use of whiskey.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR VOTERS

Would you go behind a bar and sell liquor? Would you make money by supplying a drug that you knew would degrade your neighbor? Would you personally amass wealth, to supply you with with which, children were starved, and weary mothers toiled hard for a living to the neglect of their household duties? Would you be willing to grow rich at the cost of the boys made drunkards, girls driven to the streets, homes broken down, and lives wrecked?

If a man asked you to give him in writing a declaration of your approval of his carrying on a business which produced the results just set out, would you write such a letter for him, even though he offered you the bribe of helping to pay your tax bills?

To-day, men say to you practically —Give me your vote in favor of a bar-room system, that I may carry on a liquor business with nominal respectability, and without fear of the punishment that I would incur if I sold without a license.

You cannot escape the responsibility that goes with your consent to the liquor business, if you vote in favor of it.

As a patriot, as a citizen, as a Christian, as one who desires the welfare of Canadian homes, and the uplift of Canadian manhood and womanhood, will you be induced by any sophistry or prejudice to vote in favor of the degrading traffic?

Vote for the right and against the wrong.

Vote for Local Option.

PLAY WRITING.

From the Waste-Paper Basket to Five Pounds a Word.

There is much gold in a successful play, but there are a few who have the good fortune to win it. Shakespeare, it is said, parted with his immortal "Hamlet" for twenty nobles (less than $35), and he has his successors to-day, far removed, it is true, from him in genius, but men of no mean dramatic skill, whose work puts almost as little money in their pockets.

Not so long ago a well-known dramatist confessed "I once sold for $100 a play which was presented over two thousand times in London and the provinces, while others in which I have retained an interest have brought me next to nothing." Another has declared that for many years his revenue from his plays "would have been scorned by a laborer."

And even our most popular dramatists can recall equally "lean years." Sir Arthur Pinero still chuckles when he tells how he commenced his playwriting career by exchanging "Two Hundred Pounds" (the title of his first bantling) for a set of shirt-studs "For my next venture, 'Two Can Play at the Game,'" he says, "Mr. Bateman gave me a five-pound note. My third play, 'Daisy's Escape,' I wrote for Henry Irving, who, to my delight, handed me a cheque for fifty pounds. I can assure you I was very pleased to receive fifty-five pounds and a set of studs for about three months work."

Sir W. S. Gilbert received $150 and a lecture for his maiden effort, "Dulcamara." "After I had received the cheque," Mr. Gilbert (as he then was) once related, "the manager said to me: 'Let me give you a bit of advice young man. Never sell such good stuff as that for $150.' I took his advice and never did."

But happily there is a much brighter side to the dramatic shield, although it is presented only to the fortunate few. "A really successful play," a well-known dramatic critic wrote the other day, "may be said to be worth $50,000, ten times as much, say, as the average successful novel. And as the actual number of words in it rarely exceeds 8,000, it produces the gratifying return of well over $5 a word."

It is thus not difficult to credit the almost fabulous incomes with which some of our most successful playwrights are credited, which, in one case at least—that of Mr. Barrie—are said to average $125,000 a year. Mr. Barrie was at first very doubtful as to the desirability of dramatizing his charming novel, "The Litle Minister." "But," remonstrated a friend, "there is $200,000 in it, if there is a penny." And it has since been stated on authority that even this enormous sum has been doubled.

It is thus abundantly clear that, although the unsuccessful dramatist may work for starvation wages, his more fortnate brother at the top of the ladder of popularity need not envy the Lord Chancellor his five-figure salary, and can afford to smile at the income of a High Court judge or a bishop.

Stripped at the Law.

Dickens describes in his novel "Bleak House" the woes of those who were involved in suits in the chancery court and the delays to which they were subjected before the English judicial procedure was reformed. Tradition says that an artist once represented the same idea in much less space. Two suitors in chancery, being reconciled to each other after a very tedious and expensive suit, applied to him to paint a device in commemoration of their return to peace and amity. He gave them entire satisfaction by painting them in the act of shaking hands—one clad in his shirt, the other without even that.

"Taylor" Day in the Rifles.

F Company, 1st King's Royal Rifles, became noted in Pietermaritzburg as the "Taylor" Company, having no fewer than seven Taylors in its ranks —probably a record for any company in the Army. On the outbreak of the Boer War they were ordered to Dundee, Natal, and their first conflict with the Dutchmen occured at Glencoe. The casualty list that night read as follows:—

"Lieutenant Taylor, killed; Colour-Sergeant Taylor, severely wounded; Sergeant Taylor, killed; Bandsman Taylor, severely wounded; Pioneer Taylor severely wounded; Private Taylor, killed."

Truly a sorry day for the Taylors.

STABBED BY RIVAL.

Toronto Man Resent Inquiry Into Love Affairs and Is Wounded.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—Infuriated because he thought another man was paying attentions to a certain woman whom he admired, Louis Cowell, a foreigner, is alleged to have made an attempt on the life of Frank Studholme yesterday afternoon about 5.15. Studholme was stabbed in three places with a knife. The city detectives arrested Cowell soon after on a charge of making an attempt on Studholme's life.

Cowell is said to have encountered the injured man at the corner of College and Grace streets. The former asked some personal questions of Studholme, which the latter resented. Hot words ensued, a knife flashed several times and Studholme fell to the pavement with a wound under his arm, which required four stitches to close, a hole through his ear and a stab in the shoulder.

Stabbed In Brawl.

HAMILTON, Jan. 2.—As a result of a New Year's Day debauch, in which George Horseshot, 25 years of age, and living at 82 Garth street, was stabbed severely on the right side of the neck. Two men named Charles Semenin and Lonis Horworth were taken into custody yesterday evening, charged with cutting and wounding.

Good and Bad Furniture.

The line between good ornament and bad ornament is the line between beauty and ugliness.

The only good furniture is that which is both beautiful and useful.

All furniture that lacks either beauty or usefulness is bad furniture.

Furniture that is well constructed, of good shape and excellent finish is good furniture, no matter how elaborately it may be decorated.

Furniture of bad shape or bad finish is bad furniture, no matter how free from meretricious mounts and carvings.—Country Life In America.

Not of Much Account.

The lord chief justice of England used to sing in a choir of a parish church. A woman once asked the verger to point out Sir Richard Webster as he then was. The verger replied, "Well ma'am, that's the vicar and them's the curates and I'm the verger, but as for the choir, as long as they does their dooty we don't inquire into their hantecedents!"

LIGHT AND POWER CO. WISH NO OPPOSITION

To the Editor,—As the time is fast approaching for the ratepayers of the municipality to vote on the Council's proposal to raise $120,000 to provide a municipal electric light plant, I am directed to publicly intimate to our friends and employes in the City of Peterborough that we wish no opposition, as far as our interests are concerned, to be offered to the proposed City By-law.

We regret that the suggestions made by us for a partnership control of all the public utilities of the City were not accepted by the City Council, but we have no desire in any way to criticize the rejection of such an arrangement by the City. We had hoped that the idea of a partnership would appeal to the municipality more than competition, but if there is to be competition between the City and ourselves, we are earnestly desirous that it shall be of a friendly and neighborly character without bitterness of any kind. There is no reason, even if we are competitors, that there should be any friction between those managing the municipal plant and our company.

We desire further to say that in case of the City going into the municipal operation of an Electric Plant, that we will be willing to assist them in any way, either by way of joint use of poles, or in case of any accidental interruptions to their system we would be glad to supply their customers temporarily from the system which is under our control and operation.

We are writing this letter with the idea of making it perfectly public and plain to all the citizens of the city that we are in no way opposing the By-law in question.

In conclusion we beg to wish your paper and your readers a prosperous and happy New Year.

Yours truly,
The Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited,
W. H. MUNRO,
Manager.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND

Arrangements completed by the Committee of the Y.W.C.A. with Col John F. Bragg, of New York, for its presentation at the Grand Opera House, Jan. 16th 17th and 18th, of Lewis Carroll's fairy tale, "Alice in Wonderland," in which two hundred and fifty people take part. Almost every man, woman and child in the land is familiar with Lewis Carroll's popular fairy tale of "Alice in Wonderland." It is comparatively of recent date, however, that the book has been dramatized and set to music, but the success has been remarkable. The peculiar and odd characters which Alice saw in her wonderful dream will be enacted on the stage, interspersed with bright songs, specialties, marches, dances, etc.

In order to do justice to Miss Leonard's work it will require about 250 of Peterborough's best talent who will be assigned to the various speaking and singing parts by Miss Leonard, an instructor from New York. Preliminary training will commence on the 6th at the Y.W.C.A., and in due time other instructors will arrive from New York to assist in rehearsals. The entire production is under the management of Col. John F. Bragg, of New York, who will be here in person to superintend each performance.

Over 500 gorgeous costumes are used which are furnished by the management. The properties, electrical and calcium effects are beautiful, and "Alice in Wonderland" is without doubt the most pretentious amateur opera ever given in our city. The Y.W.C.A. is in need of money, and large audiences are expected. Full particulars will be advertised in subsequent issues. 1d

COULD NOT ADMIT CHILDREN ALONE

Manager Clayton of the Red Mill Theatre wishes to apologize to the parents of the hundreds of children to whom he had to refuse admission on New Year's Day, because they were not accompanied by an adult. There is a provincial law which prevents proprietors of amusement places from permitting children to enter unless accompanied by parents or some other adult, and it was on account of this measure that Mr. Clayton was compelled to turn the little ones away. Parents who wish their children to see the pictures should go with them or see that they are accompanied by some grown person. 1d.

BAD STORM BETWEEN TORONTO AND ATLANTIC

Wires Blown Down and Traffic Disturbed During the Night.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—One of the most severe gales in months raged last night between this city and the Atlantic seaboard. Although the velocity of the wind did not exceed 38 miles an hour in Toronto, in some places between here and Montreal it reached as high as sixty miles. The high wind was accompanied by rain and sleet, little or no snow having fallen.

The gale wrought havoc with the telegraph and telephone lines, the chief seat of trouble being the Great Northwestern Telegraph and the Bell Telephone lines between Toronto and Montreal and Ottawa. The telephone lines were blown down some distance east of Port Hope, also the G.N.W. telegraph lines. As a consequence the G.N.W. telegraph service between Toronto and points east was paralyzed, the company having to use the telephone lines for urgent business.

"It is one of the most severe storms that eastern Canada has experienced for some time," the weather man said last night. The disturbance, he said, developed on the Atlantic coast three or four hundred miles south of this latitude and moved rapidly northward, the storm centre at midnight being in the vicinity of Montreal. Toronto was on the western fringe of the storm.

Schooner In Distress.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 4.—An unknown three-masted schooner is anchored, flying distress signals, five miles northwest from east of Little Egg life-saving station, according to a long-distance telephone message last night. Because of the high wind and rough sea life-savers found it impossible to send out a boat from Little Egg Station, and have requested that a Government revenue cutter go to the assistance of the disabled vessel.

The captain in charge of Little Egg Station believes that the schooner has engine trouble and broken steering gear and is unable to proceed under sail against the gale. He says that, while the vessel is being buffeted considerably by the heavy seas, she is in no immediate danger.

A 64-hour gale is blowing along the coast from the southwest.

New Record In Aviation.

MULHAUSEN, Germany, Jan 4.—Arthur Faller, the aviator, yesterday exceeded by five seconds the world's record for a duration flight in a biplane carrying five passengers. His time, one hour, six minutes and five seconds. The previous holder of the record was Henri Molla, who, at Douzy, France, Jan. 26, 1911, flew for one hour and six minutes.

TRACED BY MEANS OF FLY-PAPER

And Young Man Is Locked Up on a Robbery Charge.

"Joseph Shanahan" Is In Jail For Breaking Into Jeweler's Store In Toronto on New Year's Eve—Druggist Who Sold Him Fly-Paper Remembered Him When News of the Burglary Became Known.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—It was New Year's Eve and the city's supply of flies had been in their winter quarters for some time, when a well-dressed young man entered a drug store on Yonge street aboue nine o'clock.

"I want seven double sheets of fly-paper," ordered the young man.

The druggist looked up in surprise, but a moment later bethought himself of his duty and went in search of his stock of fly-paper. This he soon found, and seven sheets he counted out and handed to his customer.

"Will you wrap it up?" asked the young man.

"Certainly," said the druggist; but as he was doing the wrapping he asked why the young man wanted fly-paper at this time of the year.

"I am an engineer," said the young man, "and I want the fly-paper to catch cockroaches around the boiler."

This explanation satisfied the druggist, but he took a good look at the young man as he was leaving the store, and it is owing to this that Joseph Shanahan of 227 West King street to-day finds himself locked up in the Court Street police station charged with shopbreaking and the theft of $3,000 worth of jewelry from E. Scheuer's store, 90 Yonge street, on New Year's morning.

The druggist learned of the fly-paper jewelry robber on Thursday morning and his mind went back to his peculiar sale on Tuesday evening. He then notified the police department and later gave Detectives Montgomery, Wallace and Newton a full description of the young man who told him the "cockroaches" story.

The three detectives went out on the case with their eyes open and yesterday afternoon they came in contact with the man for whom they were looking. After being trailed for two hours the young man went into a pawn broker's shop on West Queen street, where he spent some time. As he came out of the shop at 6 o'clock he was nailed by the police and identified by a young man in the shop as "Joseph Shanahan," 227 West King street.

A search of the premises of the pawn broker resulted in the recovery of seventy-three diamond rings, which the pawn broker admits were received from Shanahan.

Shananhan said he was a jewelry dealer and claimed that he peddled in Canada and the United States.

Shanahan had a pal when the robbery in Scheuer's was pulled off, and the police department expect to connect with him within a few days. The diamond rings were in a show case on the glass of which they applied the fly-paper so that it would break noiselessly. A small iron cannon, wrapped in an overcoat, was used to smash in the glass.

BAIL FOR DYNAMITERS

$10,000 For Each Year of Their Sentence.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—A writ of supersedeas staying execution of the sentences imposed upon the dynamite conspirators recently convicted at Indianapolis, will be issued by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here to-day.

Bail was based on the number of years which the prisoners had been sentenced to serve — $10,000 for each year. Thus Ryan's bail was fixed at $70,000. Those given sentences of six years must furnish $60,000; four years, $40,000, and so on down to $10,000 for the one-year sentences.

According to defence lawyers, the court, Judges Seaman and Baker sitting, seemed most impressed by the extradition feature of the arguments presented.

Defence lawyers stated that money enough to admit all to bail would be forthcoming.

FIVE ACTORS ARE FINED

Montreal Burlesque Performers Receive Severe Jolt From Judge.

MONTREAL, Jan. 4.—"You men are worse than burglars and thieves because you prey upon and corrupt the young men in the community, and I sentence you to five days' imprisonment," said Judge Leet yesterday morning to the five actors, who, with fifteen girls, were arrested for being connected with an alleged indecent show at the Theatre Royal.

To the women his honor remarked "I am sorry for you, because circumstances have, I suppose, forced you into this unfortunate method of gaining a livelihood; you will therefore be allowed to go on suspended sentence."

After hearing a plea from the lawyer for the men, Judge Leet changed his sentence to a fine of $20 each, and ordered that both actors and actresses leave town at once.

Ulster Differs From Bonar Law.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.) —The leading Ulster Unionists do not endorse the undertaking of A. Bonar Law, the leading member of the Opposition in the House of Commons that he would not resist the enforcement of home rule if it was confirmed by the electorate. Mr. Law made it clear that he spoke only for himself although he believed that the members of the Opposition on the front benches concurred with him.

Harbor Improvements at Sarnia.

SARNIA, Jan. 4.—It appears that the promises made by the former Minister of Public Works, Hon. F. D Monk, to supply this port with a new harbor, will soon be realized. Surveys of the rivers and bay have been made here recently and it is rumored that a huge "E" shaped wharf will soon be built. Tracks, warehouses and all conveniences and modern improvements will be installed.

THINK THESE OVER BEFORE YOU VOTE.

Some Matters Which the Hotelkeepers Desire the Electorate to Consider Regarding the Local Option By-Law.

It looks as if a great many of the ratepayers are unaware of the amount of money spent in the city by the hotelmen in operating their plants Just take a look at the following items and then try and figure up who is going to make up this revenue it you vote for Local Option:

1—Taxes...	$	6085.00
2—Rents...		14,900.00
3—Wages...		110000.00
4—Licenses...		7500.00
5—Foodstuffs...		120000.00
6—Fuel...		10000.00
7—Light...		2500.00
8—Fire Insurance...		2000.00
9—Improvements...		5700.00
10—Laundry...		4000.00
11—Water...		*2000.00
12—Stationery...		2000.00
13—Discount to banks...		6000.00
14—Telephones...		600.00
15—Free busses...		4500.00
		$297,785.00

The large sum for improvements was spent in 1912, notwithstanding the coming of Local Option by-law.

*Half of this amount being water used in public lavatories in hotels, free to all.

Almost 300,000 dollars spent every year by the hotels, exclusive of the bars

Do not allow yourselves to believe when marking your ballot, that the promoters of Local Option will ever attempt to replace the expenditures of the above given amounts in this city.

If the Local Option people were sincere about hotel accommodation they would have bought one here and operated it during the past year without a bar. It is the same old story, the Local Optionist just talks.

Who would look after the travelling man if the hotels were all closed?

Where would the farmer stay when in town?

What inducements would the town offer to tourists?

Think these things over and remember this is Peterborough, a city of 20,000.

Not a small one horse town like Orillia or Collingwood. 1d23

NEW HYDRO POWER ZONE

Hon. Adam Beck Will Begin at Long Sault.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—As a result of action of Attorney-General Carmody of New York State, in declaring the law passed by the Legislature of that state in 1907, and signed by Governor Hughes, granting certain rights to the Long Sault Development Co. for power development purposes, unconstitutional, Hon. Adam Beck stated yesterday that the Ontario Government would immediately begin building a power plant on the Long Sault Rapids in the St. Lawrence River for the generation of electric power. The preliminary negotiations have been completed and in the near future the eastern portion of the province of Ontario will be served with Hydro power, such as the people of central and western Ontario are enjoying at the present tmie.

Hon. Adam Beck is of the opinion that the Long Sault Rapids will prove as efficient for the generation of electric power as does Niagara Falls.

SLANDER ON MIDLAND REFUTED

We, the Business Men and Others, of Midland, wish to raise our voices in protest against the slander on the fair name of our Town, published by the liquor interests throughout the Province. We heartily endorse the Local Option Measure, in that it has improved the conditions here from every stand point. The Town was never in a more peaceful and prosperous condition, notwithstanding their statements to the contrary.

RECHED PASHA PRESENTS THE "FINAL" CONCESSION

Crete is a Matter For Arrangement With the Powers and Turkey Must Keep Islands Near the Dardanelles, Says Delegate.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Although the word "ultimate" was not pronounced, what practically was an ultimatum was presented to Turkey at yesterday's sitting of the peace conference on behalf of the Balkan allies. Lazar Miyuskovitch, the head of the Montenegrin delegation, who presided at yesterday's session, after the Turks had submitted a proposal which was considered unacceptable, told Rechad Pasha, chief delegate of the Ottoman Empire, that either by Monday Turkey must find a way to renounce to the Balkan allies her rights over the island of Crete, cede the islands in the Aegean, and present a ratification of the frontier of European Turkey which would include Adrianople in the territory of the allies, or the allies would consider that further negotiations for peace were useless.

Immediately the minutes of the last sitting had been approved, M. Miyuskovitch asked Rechad Pasha to present to the delegates the promised new Turkish proposals. Rechad, who had been working hard over a cipher telegram until a few minutes before the session was called to order, seemed rather depressed. Upon rising he said his Imperial Government, desiring further to emphasize the conciliatory spirit that animated it, had authorized the Turkish military and technical experts attached to the Ottoman delegation to mark on a map the proposed new frontiers between Turkey and the allies, which he would present later.

Meanwhile he read what he called "the last possible terms Turkey can offer."

These were as follows:

"First, that Crete, enjoying suzerainty of the Sultan, but in reality under the protection of Great Britain, Russia, France and Italy, constitutes a question which can be dealt with only by the powers under the responsibility of which the administration of the island is conducted, especially regarding finance, police and justice.

"Second, that Turkey shall keep her islands. That she cannot renounce those near the Dardanelles, because the are indispensable to the security of the channel of Constantinople, or the Bosphorus, as it is better known, nor those further south because they form an integral part of Anatolia.

"Third, that the rectification of the Thracean frontier shall begin south from Segot (called Port Lagos), in Karagatch Bay, and run almost perpendicularly northward.

TO INVADE ALBANIA.

Joint Action by Austria and Italy Foreshadowed.

VIENNA, Austria, Jan. 4.—Austria-Hungary and Italy are making preparations to land a joint expeditionary force in Albania immediately after the conclusion of the London conference, according to The Wiener Journal.

This step it is said is to be taken by the two allies in order to pacify Albania and to establish a new condition of affairs there.

Roumania Not Mobilizing.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The reports that Roumania is mobilizing her army were characterized yesterday by the Roumanian Minister of Interior, Mr. Jonescu, who arrived in London last night as "nonsense."

"Once mobilization has been officially announced," the Minister added, "it will mean that Roumania has decided to go to war immediately. We shall never employ mobilization as a threat. It is true that latterly our army has taken demand by prudence, but that is by no means mobilization."

BORDEN KEEPS OUT OF TROUBLED BRITISH POLITICS

Stand by Pastor.

HAMILTON, Jan. 4.—The congregation of James Street Baptist Church will stand by Rev. J. J. Ross, the pastor, formerly of Toronto, in the libel action brought against him by Pastor Russell of Brooklyn.

Mr. Russell took exception to a slashing attack made in a circular issued by Mr. Ross when the Brooklyn man spoke here and started proceedings against the local minister. The congregation decided Thursday night to raise funds for Mr. Ross' defence.

Fire In Heart of Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 4.—The Carlisle building, a seven-storey stone structure, at the southwest corner of Fourth avenue and Walnut street, was almost completely gutted by fire here yesterday, entailing a loss estimated at a quarter of a million dollars.

The building is situated in the centre of Cincinnati's commercial district, within several hundred feet of the Gibson House, which was destroyed by fire several weeks ago.

Canadian Ministers Should Not Interfere Wit Domestic Politics in Britain.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.) There is a statement to hand from Ottawa to-day affirming once more that Premier Borden is as strongly convinced as Laurier that Canadian Ministers should not interfere in domestic politics here.

Last night Bonar Law conferred with Lancashire members. The only information regarding this conference even in party journals was that it was characterized by great good feeling.

If some Canadian cables are to be believed there is great excitement in Canada over the Unionist differences here. This certainly is not so on the spot where feverish symptoms over the matter are only manifested in an abnormal flow of printer's ink.

The general public is treating the controversy with amusement and even keen rank and file Unionists are waiting with tolerable equanimity for things to settle down.

HELD OFF TRIBESMEN.

French Columns Made a Heroic Stand Until Relief Arrived.

MOGADOR, Morocco, Jan. 4.—The column of French troops commanded by Capt. Marcel E. Massoutier, which recently had been operating against the tribesmen of the rebel El Hiba, and which at times was sorely pressed, marched into Mogador yesterday with the force of Gen. Brulard, which had been sent to its relief. The populace warmly applauded the rescuers and the rescued.

The officers of Capt. Massoutier's command relate a stirring tale of heroism by their men and of hardships nobly borne. The little force, they say, was surrounded by an army of the fiercest tribesmen in Morocco and were outnumbered ten to one. They entrenched themselves, and bravely held their own against almost ceaseless attacks day and night for a week.

Most of the time they suffered terribly from thirst. Many of the Zouaves fainted under the trying ordeal.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

A syndicate of wealthy Dutch farmers from South Africa is planning to acquire large areas of land in Alberta next spring.

James Hamilton, the second Duke of Abercorn, died in London yesterday afternoon of pneumonia. The duke was born Aug. 24, 1838.

Roswell Miller, chairman of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., was found dead in bed yesterday morning at his home in New York.

The Turkish sailing vessel Theodoros, of 650 tons, was blown up yesterday by coming in contract with a floating mine at the entrance to Smyrna Bay.

Mrs. John Patterson, wife of the manager of the Brussels electric light plant, was caught in shafting and seriously injured. No one witnessed the accident.

The receiver for the Grand Valley Railway has signed the contracts to the Galt Hydro-Electric Commission to take 100 horse-power for the operation of a line from Galt to Paris.

Harry G. Ellard, known as the "cowboy poet," died at his home in Cincinnati Thursday night. He was widely known as a writer of stories on western life. He also wrote several books on baseball.

James Strain and three of his friends had a narrow escape from drowning when the motor boat in which they were carrying mail from Bath to Stella was upset near Kingston and the four were thrown into the water.

NEW LINE FOR SARNIA.

It Will Be Terminus of Boat Service to Bayfield.

SARNIA, Jan. 4.—From present appearances Sarnia will have a new boat line plying between this port and Bayfield, on Lake Huron, as soon as navigation opens on the lakes. The harbor at the latter place is to be dredged soon and a new dock built by the Government. Port Huron and Sarnia capitalists associated with Messrs. Everett of Cleveland, are behind the scheme.

Passenger and freight both will be handled, the boats calling at the different points along the shore where there is no railway connection.

Feline Cause of Riot.

KINGSTON, Jan. 4.—The fact that a citizen ill-used a cat at a street corner, picking up a stray cat and firing it across the street, almost led to a riot among men and women to the number of about twenty. The man who ill-used the cat had a number of friends who assisted him in the free fight which followed, in which revolvers were drawn and women as well as men suffered. One man had his nose broken.

Western Rates Again.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—The Board of Railway Commissioners will conduct its first session of the new year, commencing on Monday next. Thirteen cases are down for hearing, chiefly of minor importance, and mostly dealing with local complaints, and applications from various eastern localities. The last case on the list, which may be taken up on Tuesday, will, it is believed, occupy the attention of the board for several days thereafter. This is the adjourned hearing of the now famous western rates inquiry.

THE BENEFITS OF LOCAL OPTION AS TOLD BY MAYORS AND REEVES

Effects on Business and Hotel Accommodation.

The evidence that Local Option has been a benefit to the towns and villages in Ontario that have tried it is overwhelming. It has led to increased business, the law has been well enforced and even the hotels, after time has been allowed for the change to go into effect, have been improved. Do you doubt this? Do you want positive proof? Then here it is.

Not long since a telegram was sent to the mayors and reeves of towns and incorporated villages in Ontario that are under Local Option. Notice that these telegrams were sent to the representative head of each municipality; the man above all others who should know whether or not Local Option had been a success in every respect. They were not sent to comparatively obscure citizens but to men who could be held to account by the citizens for their utterances. Each mayor was asked the following four questions: 1st—Is your town thriving? 2nd—Is there good hotel accommodation? 3rd—Is it better or worse than under license? 4th—Has Local Option hurt business?

Forty seven replies were received. The results of the answers to the four enquiries may be summed up as follows. The heads of forty-five municipalities reported that Local Option had not been a disadvantage; nineteen of them stating that it had proved a decided benefit; the heads of only two municipalities reported that Local Option had been a disadvantage. With regard to hotel accommodation 41 reported that it was good. The head of one municipality reported that it was not good, although better than it was under license. Three others reported that it was not good and that it was fair. In the columns below appear extracts from many of these reports, lack of space making it impossible to give them all. In one column will be found a summary of the replies in regard to business. In the second column the reports on the effect of Local Option on hotel accommodation and in the third column statements gathered from other resources relating to law enforcement and kindred points relating to Local Option. To save space only the name of the town is given at the head of each paragraph. The statement given in each case is that of the Mayor or reeve of the municipality mentioned.

EFFECTS OF LOCAL OPTION ON BUSINESS

Collingwood.

"We have one of the most prosperous towns in Ontario. The liquor business has been hurt."

Galt.

"Galt is thriving. Greatest increase in population this year of any one year. Manufacturers busy."

Newmarket.

"Newmarket is thriving under Local Option. Important additions have been made to factories, churches and schools. All unite in saying that business and payments have improved."

Owen Sound.

"Our town is thriving. Business is good. Cannot say how business would have been had we had license for the past six years."

Renfrew.

"Town thriving. Business as good as before the By-law."

Havelock.

"Our town is flourishing. The business interests have not suffered from the effects of Local Option."

Campbellford.

"Prosperity and order are good. Retail business since Local Option better than before."

Bowmanville.

"Local Option went into force in Bowmanville in May, 1910. The town is now enjoying by far the greatest measure of prosperity here."

Midland.

"Local Option which has been in operation here for five years and a half has proved a marked success from every standpoint. Trade has increased from ten to thirty per cent. and is more on a cash basis."

Lucknow.

"Local Option has been a blessing to Lucknow. In a year of agricultural depression business has been up above."

Richmond Hill.

"Richmond Hill is prospering under Local Option. New streets are going laid out and the building business is brisk."

Omemee.

"The assessment is higher, the tax rate lower than before Local Option came in. The majority of the business men say it has not hurt trade."

Shelburne.

"The town is thriving. Business is as good as ever and accounts more easily collected."

Waterford.

"Real estate is fifty per cent more valuable than under license."

Coldwater.

"The village is in a healthy condition. Closing the bars has not hurt trade."

LOCAL OPTION AND HOTEL ACCOMMODATION

Collingwood.

"There is good hotel accommodation. The Globe Hotel is spoken of by travellors as being first-class."

Bowmanville.

"The temperance people deserve the highest praise for hotel accommodation, which is immeasurably higher class than it was under whiskey rule. The town takes delight in its reputation for high class hotels."

Newmarket.

"Hotel accommodation superior to license period."

Beaverton.

"Yes, we have two good hotels, with ample accommodation for all, also first class shed and stabling for farmers' horses. The accommodation is better than under license."

Lucknow.

"Hotel accommodation is better than for years past, and is available at rates no higher than generally charged in licensed hotels."

Chesley.

"We have the very best hotel accommodation. It is decidedly better than under license."

Creemore.

"First class accommodation. Very much better than under license."

Leamington.

"Three good hotels, same as before."

Orillia.

"Hotel accommodation is as good or better than it was."

Owen Sound.

"Good hotel accommodation."

Wyoming.

"Only fair, but as good as under license."

Paisley.

"Hotel accommodation is first-class."

Commercial Travellers.

J. W. Charles, traveller for one of the large Toronto wholesale grocers, says: "Every three weeks I cover fifty-one towns in Western Ontario, and of these thirty-eight are dry. In each case with perhaps one or two exceptions, the hotel accommodation in these dry towns is better than before the Local Option by-law came into force. In no place, without exception, are conditions any worse."

C. J. Pasco, who is in the same class as Mr. Charles, says: "The hotel accommodation in the Local Option towns of Ontario is from twenty-five to thirty-five per cent. better now than it ever was under the old license system."

LOCAL OPTION AND LAW ENFORCEMENT

Galt.

Ex-Mayor Patterson writes: "Has the law been obeyed. No hotelkeeper has ever violated the law as far as I know, and they have been very carefully watched. It is true that we have people who occasionally go to Preston and become intoxicated, but that is the fault of the license system and not of Local Option."

Lucknow.

Reeve Waith says: "Drunkenness has been reduced to a minimum. Lucknow is now not only more desirable as a business and residential centre because of Local Option, but is now generally recognized as such by many people who formerly doubted. These are facts easily verified by any unprejudiced inquirer."

Bolton.

Reeve Rutherford writes: "We have no drunkenness in Bolton. Local Option has been in force seven years in Bolton. It was carried under the old law with only 11 majority and no attempt has ever been made to repeal the law. Everyone is satisfied and such action is not considered."

Alliston.

The reeve says that the law is strictly obeyed and enforced. Neither of the hotelkeepers sell liquor.

Southampton.

Mayor McGregor: "No drunken men on our streets now, no profane or abusive language used."

Orangeville.

Efforts have been made in Peterborough in the past few days to show that Local Option has been a failure in Orangeville. The members of the town council ought to know. When a petition was presented last fall asking them to submit a by-law to repeal Local Option, they granted the petition but expressed their views in the following resolution by a vote of 6 to 3:

"Resolved, that whereas a petition for the repeal of Local Option has been presented to the council of the town of Orangeville, and whereas this council realizes that it is under no legal obligation to grant the prayer of the said petition, and, further, we, the members of council here assembled, give it as our conviction that the highest interests as well as of the business welfare of the town of Orangeville will be best served by the maintaining in force of Local Option, yet we are willing to grant the prayer of the petition and allow the electors to vote on the question trusting to their good judgment to maintain Local Option."

Shelburne.

"There is a total absence of rowdyism. Citizens regard Local Option as a great success here."

Winchester.

"Our village is a great deal better under Local Option than license. The moral tone of the town has greatly improved." advt 20

LOCAL OPTION ANNOUNCEMENTS

To-night and to-morrow will see the last shots fired in the Local Option campaign. The Local Option advocates are going to have a busy time of it. This evening at 8 o'clock a public meeting will be held in the Market Hall, at the corner of Charlotte and George streets. This meeting as well as one to be held to-morrow afternoon in the Opera House, will be of special interest to workingmen, as the principal speaker will be Mr. James Simpson, the well-known labour leader of Toronto. A second speaker at both meetings will be Mr. Ben. H. Spence, of Toronto, the Secretary of the Dominion Alliance, and one of the best temperance speakers in Canada. Mr. Spence will devote special attention at this evening's meeting to the argument advanced at the anti-local option meeting held in the Opera House last night.

SUNDAY'S PROGRAM

Sunday afternoon there will be held a parade of the Sunday Schools of the city. This will start from the corner of George and Murray streets a half past two and proceed by way of George, Hunter, Aylmer, Charlotte and George streets back to Murray, George and St. Paul's churches, in each of which meetings will be held simultaneously. Lantern slide views dealing with temperance will be shown at each meeting, all three of which will be for children and women only.

The Salvation Army band will head the procession to the Churches, after which it will fall out and march back down George street to the Opera House where a meeting for men only will be held.

In the evening there will be a meeting in the Market Hall at 8.15. At these meetings addresses will be given by Messrs. Simpson and Spence and by Mayor Frost, of Orillia. It is possible that a speaker will be present from Campbellford.

SPECIAL MUSIC

A special feature of all three meeting will be solos by J. Coates Lockhart, tenor soloist of Toronto, who has twice sung by special request before His Majesty, the late King Edward.

OUR IMAGINATION

We worry a lot over troubles that never materialize. The greater part of our woes lives in our imagination. On [illegible] waste our strength and nerve force, leaving a rather weak prop on which to lean in real adversity. Trouble we must meet—that its inevitable—but we do not have to live it through twice, the first time in imagination. A fear of what the future contains is a clog upon our heels and prevents the achievement of many an important deed.

Always Room For One More.

"That's the tenth can of sardines you have ordered," said the railway magnate. "Aren't you afraid you will make yourself sick?"

"I'm not eating them," replied the employe with inventive genius. "I think I'm on the track of a way to get more people into a street car."

An Accident at Sea.

"So you say you're an old time sailor. Did you ever have any accidents while at sea?"

"Once, mum, I dropped a bowl of hot soup in an old lady's lap."

Could Enjoy Himself.

It is not always that the autocratic editor lords it successfully over the intelligent press correspondent. One of the latter persuasion, pending the pronouncement of the Government's naval policy by the Premier last week, was enterprising enough to secure an advance copy of Mr. Borden's speech and to have it mailed to the office of his paper, a loyal Conservative Toronto daily, for release after the Premier had spoken. But the best laid schemes sometimes "gang awry." By the engaging of a special staff of operators, held waiting at their keys, a Liberal contemporary, succeeded in beating competitors to the streets with the news of the momentous deliverance. Within a short time a breathless page delivered to the foresighted Conservative correspondent a telegram from his editor couched in the following caustic words: "You will be pleased to know that The Evening Blank, Liberal, published Borden's speech verbatim hours before we could use it."

The enterprising correspondent merely smiled, and promptly penned the reciprocal message: "The pleasure is all yours."—Canadian Courier.

An Awful Shock.

The deputy stage manager at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, at one time was a little man named Linders, who had a strange dislike of the ladies of the ballet and treated them rather harshly. He wore a wig, but the fact was not generally known. On one occasion, however, an enraged coryphee seized him by the hair, and off came the wig, exposing a shiny expanse of cranium. He at once dashed off to complain to Mrs. Harris, the manager's wife, but the good lady could only gasp in stupefied tones: "Good gracious, Mr. Linders! Why, you are bald!" To which Linders instantly replied: "No, madam, no. My hair became loose with horror!"

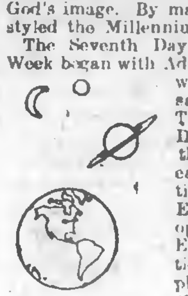
THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS
BROOKLYN TABERNACLE
INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDIES

Genesis 1—2:3—Jan. 5.

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth; and the earth was waste and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep."—Genesis 1:1, 2. (R. V.)

AT "the beginning," of the Genesis account, the Earth had already been created By Divine Power. Higher Critics attribute millions of years to this formative period. Bible students accept the record that the Earth was already in existence, but lifeless.

The Bible mentions days of various lengths. See Hebrews 3:8; 2 Peter 3:8; John 8:56. There is no reason to think that twenty-four-hour days are meant in Genesis 1. God arranged a great Week of Seven Days for perfecting mankind. Six of these Days prepared our planet for Adam, its king. The Seventh Day lacks a thousand years of completion. During that period the Earth will be perfected, and man restored by his Redeemer to God's image. By many this period is styled the Millennium.



Creator of things mundane.

The Seventh Day of the Creative Week began with Adam's creation and will be seven thousand years long. The Six preceding Days were seven thousand years each. From the time when Divine Energy began to operate upon the Earth until creation is fully complete will be 49,000 years. According to Scripture, this period will end a thousand years hence, when Christ will deliver up the Kingdom to God. Then the fiftieth Thousand-Year Period begins, with all creation ascribing praise to the Father and to the Son, forever. In Bible usage, seven is symbolical of perfection, 7 times 7 represent completeness of perfection; and the fiftieth, or Jubilee following, is climacteric.

"Let There Be Light."

The Genesis account is in full accord with facts known to Science. There was no light in the Earth until Divine Energy brooded on the waters. The account suggests an electrical influence and light, somewhat resembling the Aurora Borealis. The earth was shrouded with a canopy of water, minerals, etc., shutting out the light of the sun, until the Fourth Day. The First Day, under the Divine Energy, gradually prepared for the next Epoch.

On the Second Day, or Epoch, was established a firmament. Doubtless the light had to do in a natural way with this. The firmament was completed with the Second Day.

In the Third Day, or Epoch, earthquakes took place, mountains were thrown up, and the waters gathered into seas, draining off a land surface. Forthwith vegetation sprang up. The account does not say that God made grasses, trees, etc., but that under Divine command the earth brought forth these various kinds. Nothing in the Genesis account interferes with an evolutionary theory as respects vegetation. Thus the Third Day accomplished its purpose.

According to the Vailian Theory, the Earth was once surrounded by gaseous rings and belts, similar to those of Saturn and Jupiter, thrown off to a great distance, when the Earth was in a molten state. Held off by the firmament, they spread out like a great curtain, causing darkness. Then, influenced by the rotation of the Earth, they gravitated toward the poles, gradually cooling. Finally they broke, one after another, coming down as great deluges, burying vegetation, and depositing materials.

The last ring came down in Noah's day. For centuries it had been a great watery canopy, through which sun, moon and stars were visible, but not clear. Under this canopy the Earth was like a greenhouse. This accounts for vegetable and animal remains, found long embedded in ice, which formed instantly when the canopy collapsed as a deluge.

The work of the sixth day.

After the fall of several rings, the heavenly luminaries exercised their beneficial influences and served as a great clock, marking days, months and years. Thus the work of the Fourth Day was accomplished.

In the Fifth Day, the waters began to swarm with living creatures. Next came fowl and great sea monsters. A measure of evolution is suggested by the statement that "the waters brought forth abundantly," under Divine supervision. Only in the case of man does the Bible declare a personal creation.

The creation of land animals marks the Sixth Epoch Day. Fish and fowl took precedence in time, as scientists agree. Again we read that "the earth brought forth," but we also read that the Lord directed the matter.

At the very end of the Sixth Day God created man, in His own likeness, to have dominion over the creatures of land, air and sea. Another account implies that Eve was taken from Adam's side in the beginning of the Seventh Day. Since then, God has rested, or ceased from His creative work, leaving matters to our Redeemer, whose Messianic Kingdom will complete that Seventh Day — 49,000 years after God said, "Let there be light!"

A teaspoonful of salt to a gill of milk will remove ink stains from clothing.

Thousands of Tons of Dust.

According to the estimates of a Government expert, who has given much attention to the study of the remarkable phenomena of dust and sand storms in the arid regions of the west, every cubic mile of the lower air during an ordinary "dry storm" contains at least 225 tons of dust, while in severe storms of this kind as much as 126,000 tons of dust and sand may be contained in a cubic mile of air. Dust storms sometimes last for twenty or thirty hours.

LACK OF EXERCISE

Brings on Troubles which are Best Corrected by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Man was intended to live an active, outdoor life, and his digestive system was modelled accordingly. Indoor work with hands or head, long hours sitting or standing still, especially in air that's none too good, slow down the healthy activities of stomach, liver, kidneys and the millions of tiny skin glands.

Sedentary Habits Develop Constipation.

Constipation, headaches, indigestion, biliousness, rheumatism and similar troubles follow.

Then the worth of that good old reliable family medicine, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, is appreciated. Though it has been in use for over half a century, modern science has not been able to devise a safer or better cleanser for the whole system.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are largely vegetable in composition, free from any harmful drug, and mild yet most effective in their action. They are "Mother's standby" in hundreds of homes because they nip in the bud so many of the common ailments.

A Bad Case That Proves Cramps and Stomach Disorders are Cured Fast by Nerviline.

"The distress I suffered from cramps last summer was so severe I thought it meant death," writes P. R. Emerson, of Guys Hill, P. O. "I was doubled up with pain and in such bad shape I couldn't walk a hundred feet. I remembered having Nerviline on hand and took half a teaspoonful in sweetened water. In five minutes I was well and my stomach derangements disappeared entirely."

Music and Drama

Miss Madge Titheradge who has been especially engaged by the distinguished actor Mr. Lewis Waller for the presentation of "A Marriage of Convenience" was literally dragged into public notice making her debut as it were heels first. She made her first appearance at the Garrick Theatre in London as one of the Water Babies in the play of that name and the first night as a fairy she did a passeul with such enthusiasm that she went right over the footlights into the base drum being pulled back onto the stage by her heels.

This little woman who while less than twenty-four years of age is one of the most noted of English leading women was one day during her engagement at the Garrick Theatre, seen by Mr. Cyril Maude. He said, "When that child grows us, I'll have her in my own Theatre." But Maude didn't wait for her to grow up. When she was only 15 1-2 years of age, he engaged here for the role of the child in "Lady Flirt" at the Haymarket Theatre. She continued with Mr. Maude in London for four seasons, and he became so interested in her work that he refused to release her when Lewis Waller wanted her for his production of "The Perfect Lover." She played ingenue roles with Maude and finally became his leading lady in "The Beauty and the Barge."

The Paul J. Rainey African Hunt motion pictures and lecture illustrate in detail the famous expedition of the well-known American millionaire who, at an expense of over $250,000, conducted the greatest hunting party in the world's history. Mr. Rainey, unlike other hunters, who in the past penetrated the most inaccessible portions of Africa in search of big game, employed in his endeavors the aid of sixty-five English and American dogs. These dogs were first trained in hunting big game in the cane-brakes of Mississippi and Louisiana. Their wonderful courage so impressed Mr. Rainey, that he felt sure that the dog and not the lion is the king of beasts. To prove this he set out from America for Africa, and the story of the achievements of these dogs is told in a series of marvelous motion pictures to be shown and described at the Grand Opera House.

MR. LEWIS WALLER

Who will appear here shortly in "A Marriage of Convenience."

WEDDING BELLS

A pretty wedding was solemnized at five o'clock New Year's Day, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Switzer, East Emily, when their daughter, Olive, was united in marriage to Mr. Norman B. Edmison of Smith.

The ceremony was perfomed by the Rev. G. W. McCall of Fairmount Avenue Methodist Church, Montreal uncle of the groom, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the young people, who were unattended.

After the ceremony the guests sat down to a sumptuous repast following which a pleasant evening was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmison will reside in Smith, near Peterborough.

CHOIR BOYS WERE ENTERTAINED

St. John's choir boys spent a pleasant time last night in Coleman's restaurant, at their New Year's party, which was kindly provided by Mr. A. H. Stratton. Real boyish justice was done to the good good things amply set out on the tables, and a "Sing Song" for half an hour wound up a pleasant gathering. Mr. R. J. Devey presided.

HELD PEN IN MOUTH.

Man Who Lost Hands Signed Will With His Teeth Then Died.

HAMILTON, Jan. 4.—Hugh Kelly, G.T.R. car inspector, who had both hands cut off and was otherwiso terribly injured Thursday, was fully conscious after being taken to the hospital, and his first thought was for his family. He had not made a will, so he summoned a lawyer to draw one up. When it came to the signature, he was in a quandary because both hands were gone. He solved the dilemma by taking the pen in his mouth and making his mark instead of a signature. He then settled back peacefully and soon passed away.

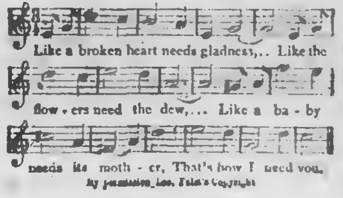
THIS LOVE SONG BROUGHT $10,000

Fancy Price Paid for Copyright of "That's How I Need You."

Fancy prices for the copyrights of popular music reached a climax yesterday when a music man, Leo Feist paid the fantastic figure of $10,000 for the copyright of a song scarcely dry from the press, called "That's How I need You." And yet Feist claims he will make a fortune on it at only a dime per copy, wholesale. Here is a portion of the chorus clipped from a copy just received;

That's How I Need You

Chorus. By PIANTADOSI



Like a broken heart needs gladness,.. Like the flow - ers need the dew,... Like a ba - by

By permission Leo. Feist's Copyright

The song is no better than a thousand others, except that it contains a number of odd harmonies aimed evidently to develop women's voices. The song bids fair to become a fad in Peterborough soon.

DOPED HIS VICTIM.

Young Iowan Robs an Acquaintance By Means of a "Needle."

TORONTO, Jan. 4—Robbery as a fine art was practiced by Thomas Robertson, a young Iowan, on Royce C. Vernon, a Toronto man, and the sequel came yesterday when Robertson appeared in the police court and was sentenced to thirty days in jail. A hypodermic needle did the trick for Robertson in his room in a downtown hotel.

The Toronto youth met the Iowan in the afternoon and after having had one or two drinks with him accepted an invitation up to his room. Here he showed Robertson a sore thumb and then the tragedy commenced. Robertson pretended to be a doctor and produced instruments. He fixed the thumb all right, but took the opportunity of giving Vernon an injection in the wrist and in two minutes the youth stretched out unconscious.

Robertson got $20, a pearl sunburst, a gold chain and two checks. At the hotel office he attempted to cash the checks, and it was owing to this that he was caught.

BRIDGE NOT STRONG.

Lumberman Says Magnetawan Structure Was Faulty.

PARRY SOUND, Jan. 4.—"I say as a man who knows timber that the railway bridge over the Magnetawan River was not properly braced, and that some of the supporting poles were too light to stand the strain upon them."

Such was the startling statement of Police Magistrate Angus McMillan of Byng Inlet, a practical lumberman of thirty-two years' experience, at the adjourned inquest before Coroner Dr. Limbert here last night. He added that for three years past he had deemed the bridge unsafe.

"Do you set up your opinion in that respect against that of bridge constructor McCallum?" asked Mr. W. R. White, K.C., representing the C.P.R.

"I state what I know, irrespective of the opinion of any man," was the reply.

The coroner adjourned the inquest till Friday, Jan. 24. In the meantime the evidence will be reported to the Dominion Railway Commission.

Leave G.T.R. Probe To Courts.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—While members of the House committee on rules were quietly sounding sentiment yesterday on the advisability of proceeding with the enquiry into the alleged understanding between the New York, New Haven and Hartford and the Grand Trunk Railroads, and the effect on the New England traffic, the indications were stronger that the committee at its meeting next week would decide to give way to the cases involving the same matter now in the federal courts.

AN OPEN LETTER

I claim to be a close observer of affairs as they pertain to Collingwood, and this year having been placed in a position where I could judge at close range whether this so-called local option has or has not benefitted the moral and material welfare of the town, I consider it my duty to give the ratepayers the opinions I have formed on the subject.

Local option has had the effect of turning the men who would drink beer into whiskey drinkers.

The reason for this is not hard to find. It is almost impossible to get beer here unless one buys a case, and many are not able to do this. But the whiskey, being much easier handled and a much larger profit in it, can be had at any time. Unhappily, men buy a bottle and thus become drunks. It is sold on the streets and in out-of-the-way places, and this traffic is the hardest for the police to handle. They get the intoxicated man, but not the hip-pocket artist.

We have had cases of young boys getting the stuff—local option and the blind pigs know no age limit.

Local option has had the effect of placing whiskey and beer in the home. This is a menace to the family, and yet under this so-called local option law it is allowed. Anyone who has the price can buy and bring into town all he wants, as long as he keeps within the law. So that the consumption of liquor depends on your financial position.

Whether it is better to let the workingman get his glass of ale in a licensed place, if he wants it, or compel him to take it into his family in wholesale quantities, or if he is not able to buy it by the case, put him at the mercy of the illicit seller of low grade whiskey, I leave the reader to judge, and, mark you, I say workingmen advisedly, as local option has no effect, and was intended to have no effect on his more financially fortunate brother.

In this connection, I would say, that while I have had charge of the police force, both with Chief Borthwick and Chief MacLachlan, they have at all times carried out the law as well and as courageously as the means they had would allow; but it is not an easy task to catch this style of lawbreaker, and a much harder task to convict when you do get him.

And I, also, say, and I wish to emphasize this, that the department for this year at least, has got no help from the so-called leaders of the temperance movement, they having at all times confined themselves to fault-finding, with the exception of now and then pointing out some poor incapable drunk, whom they wished locked up.

I am in as good a position as any man in town to give an opinion as to whether the Local Option Act has had the effect of keeping the drunkard straight, and I say it has not, and I can point to numerous cases where it has had quite the opposite, and I do not believe that there is a thinking man in Collingwood but knows that this is true.

The business of the town has not been increased.

The number of arrests and convictions for drunkenness have increased enormously.

The population of the town during the term of local option has decreased, and although the building of new homes has decreased, the number of empty houses has increased.

These are facts that cannot be denied, as the assessment roll and police court records will amply bear out the statement.

Local option has made the worst class of drunkards (whom no one handling the liquor under license would sell to) a drinker of alcohol and a user of drugs, and in some cases this has had a disastrous effect.

The only good effect it has had and that is purely personal — is the paying of a fat salary to a few agitators who could not make a living in any other walk of life, and even some of them have had to leave town and seek pastures new.

Again, it has divided the people of the town into two armed camps, one pulling against the other; ill will and enmity are seen on all sides and neighbours who should be friends are enemies.

It has retarded the public business of the municipality, and has been a distinct drawback to the advancement of the town's best interests and progress. All other business seems to be dependent on whether a man is for or against local option, and men who on ordinary occasions would do their best for the town along broad lines, are held back and obstructed by the narrow ideas of fanatics on both sides.

Get rid of the whole miserable business as we have seen it for the last three years, thus stopping the hole-and-corner traffic, and have liquor sold in places under strict regulations making these regulations stricter year by year as public opinion demands. This is the only sure way to handle the trade as has been demonstrated in every civilized country in the world.

Let no license be issued to any man whose record is bad, or whose conduct of the business has been at any time reprehensible.

W. CARMICHAEL,
Chairman Fire and Police.

THE HOPE BY-LAW

The terms on which the City Council proposes to secure the location in Peterborough of the Henry Hope & Sons, Limited, factory, are very satisfactory. The by-law ought to have the cordial support of every voter, for if there is anything Peterborough needs to make it a bigger, busier and better city, it is factories, and more factories. A free site costing $11,500, exemption from taxation for 10 years, except for school rates and local improvement, are not exorbitant terms. They reflect considerable credit upon the civic representatives who negotiated them.

Other municipalities are offering much larger inducements for industries than this, as Mayor Bradburn pointed out, and Peterborough cannot afford, for the sake of its own progress, to keep out of the procession. The city was fortunate in securing the De Laval factory, and others of a similar character should be encouraged. The initial cost of the building to be erected will be about $60,000, the Hope firm having made a contract with a Toronto firm for $36,000 worth of sashes and frames. While the Company is legally bound to employ only 50 hands the first year, in the second it will employ at least 100. We feel assured that this by-law will get hearty support from all the citizens, as it has the specially warm endorsement of the business men of the city.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC

Notwithstanding the efforts to chloroform the electorate in regard to the Hydro-Electric by-law, the attendance at the Grand to hear Hon. Adam Beck was good and indicated that there are a large number of wide awake voters in the city. It is to be hoped that the advocates of the power question will make every lawful effort to get out a large vote in favor of the by-law—in other words to impress the members of 1913 Council with the fact that Peterborough must keep up with the procession in the matter of providing electric light and power at the lowest possible price.

Eastern Ontario must take active steps in the matter of manufacturing development or it will not be able to keep pace with Western Ontario, which in recent years has shown unusual activity. Cheap electrical power for manufacturers is better than cash bonuses or gifts of land.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Being an insurance agent, Mr. R. J. Kidd no doubt has a policy to insure his election!!

If the artizans of Peterborough desire cheap electric light they will vote for the Hydro Electric by-law.

Ald. Morgan faces the ratepayers of East City for re-election to the City Council with a good record. He is a candidate of experience, and has always advocated Hydro Electric for Peterborough. He should be returned to the Council to assist in securing electric power users that commodity at cost.

Vote for Ald. Morgan. He believes in a square deal.

Vote for the Hydro Electric by-law and give the small man a chance.

Wm. Langford, jr., is the type of a man that is needed in the City Council next year, when so many important matters will have to be dealt with. He is clean, level-headed, and has a stake in the city.

Workingmen should have one representative in the City Council at least. Every wage earner in the East Ward who has a vote should cast it for Harry Morgan.

LOCAL MAN ON LOCAL OPTION

Editor Review:—Kindly allow me a short space in your paper to give my views on local option. We have read in your paper, on the subject of local option, what mayors, reeves, police magistrates and others have to say on that subject. Not one reference has been made to local option by the class best qualified to judge, viz., the wine clerk. Having had many years' experience as such, and also having operated a temperance hotel, I think my experience may be of some small interest. When Omemee voted for local option, I was obliged to look elsewhere for a job. I rented a temperance house there for a year, to try my luck. In Omemee, I learned what local option means. Boys, not allowed in the bars, bought local option beer. I know of three boys, whose names I can givem who used to buy local option beer, and put the bottles in their hip pockets, thinking they were men. Inside three months, I saw those three boys drunk, and drinking whiskey from a flash behind a building on the main street. I have seen men who used beer or larger habitually under license, go to the bad under local option, by whiskey drinking. This is no fake.

(Signed) THOS. PALMER,

ONE VOTER'S OPINION.

To the Editor,—As a man who has known R. J. Kidd for many years, I wish to say that he is a man who would make good Alderman for the North Ward. He is a man who is clear headed and business like, and has always been very active and enthusiastic in anything he ever undertook. If Mr. Kidd is elected, he would make a valuable addition to the City Council. He is a man of good judgment and the North Ward needs a good man to assist it at the present time. I trust that every North Ward voter will give Mr. Kidd a vote on the 6th.

Yours truly,
"VOTER."

A Huge Elevator.

A huge elevator, with a storage capacity of 40,000 tons is to be erected at the Manchester Docks. The grain will be discharged from the steamers upon the conveyer bands, which will transfer it to the elevators, by which it will be lifted and distributed to the various storage bins. Provision will be made for 260 storage bins and eighty-one shipping bins all 76 ft. 6in. deep. When the grain has to be delivered it will be again lifted and distributed to the shipping bins, when it will be ready for loading. Each of the receiving and shipping elevators will be furnished with an automatic scale capable of weighing 200 tons an hour.

A COSTLY EXPERIMENT

An experiment which is being tried in some parts of Canada seems to be having as disastrous results as one tried long ago in the time of King George II.

The distilling of gin was introduced in England in 1684. Its use became so general that to stop increasing intoxication, Parliament passed an act to arrest the sale of such spirituous liquors as gin by prohibitory laws. But although the act was stringent and the whole country was filled with paid informers, the people used gin all the more. They did not like laws aimed against what they considered their personal liberty. The annual production of gin increased from 948,000 gallons in 1694 to 3,520,000 gallons in 1724; to 4,947,000 gallons in 1734 and to not less than 7,160,000 gallons in 1742. Finally, Parliament seeing that the Act only had an effect the opposite of that intended, repealed that Act in 1743.

The Canadian prohibitionists have been sincere men and women. They have honestly believed that prohibition and local option laws would immediately wipe out intoxication. But if they had learned a lesson from England and other countries, they would have been spared many severe disappointments.

Although prohibition or local option exists in many municipalities in Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia the only result seems to have been to increase the production and consumption of whiskey, of which about 5,000,000 gallons are being distilled in Canada every year. That more and more of this output is used in Canada is evidenced by the declining exports of Canadian distilled whiskey.

In recent years 636 bars in the Province of Quebec alone have been closed out. The natural inference would be that the whiskey trade would become more and more unprofitable with the decline in the number of bars. But it has been in these very years that new whiskey distilleries have been opened in the Province of Quebec, proving that side by side with the adoption of prohibition, the whiskey traffic flourishes. The same is true of the Province of Ontario. Notwithstanding the fact that more than 380 municipalities in Ontario have no licenses, the whiskey distilleries in Ontario are now producing 3,678,000 gallons a year.

These facts, however, are only apparent phenomena. They can be easily explained.

In the progress of the modern temperance movement it was found that beer, which is a beverage with not more than three to four per cent. of alcohol, was a telling factor in discouraging the use of hard intoxicants like whiskey. But the prohibitionists, unaware of the difference between beer and hard intoxicants, clamored for total prohibitory laws, ignorantly classifying all drinks alike in composition and effect. The result of prohibition and local option laws has been to drive out beer which necessarily is cumbrous and bulky in transportation, and undesirable when warm. It cannot be concealed and sold like whiskey.

The consequence has been that in all the local option and prohibition regions large surreptitious shipments of whiskey are constantly being received. In the prohibition sections of New Ontario, for example, the Provincial Police have seized 23,000 bottles of whiskey in less than three years, and this number is probably small compared to the quantity successfully smuggled in. This brief outline explains why the whiskey traffic is flourishing. It will be a fortunate day for the temperance movement when a law is passed granting separate beer licenses, and putting the highest possible tax on the sale of whiskey and other hard intoxicants. 1d20

Bicycles In British Army.

The recent manoeuvres of the British army, conducted on a larger scale than ever before in times of peace, has brought the bicycle into favorable notice, and the probability is that that vehicle will be given an important standing. With good roads, such as are found throughout England, the bicycle has demonstrated its reliability and utility. Some 3,500 of these cyclists were attache to the cavalry, and the rapid movement of that large body was surprising to most people. It is conceded that the bicycle would be no substitute for horses in a battle charge, though the destruction possible with two or three thousand motor-cycles at full speed would certainly cause some confusion, especially if the riders were protected with steel shields. The direction of a cycle command would require specially trained officers: in fact, the French have had the subject under consideration for some time. A combination of motor-cycles and bicycles will not unlikely be the final outcome, for one motor-cycle can tow four or five mounted bicycles over ordinarily good and level roads at a speed of fifteen or twenty miles an hour. For instance of, say, up to thirty miles, a motor-bicycle regiment could be transferred to emergency points in far less time than by railway, even assuming that the railway were convenient for loading and unloading.

EMPLOY 200, SPEND $110,000

The license holders of this city employ about 200 people and pay over $110,000 dollars in wages every year, remember that a vote for Local Option helps to do these people out of their bread and butter. 1d22

Secure Another Industry

The Henry Hope & Sons By-law is to give a site and an exemption from taxes (except school taxes and local improvement taxes) for ten years.

The company agree to erect a building 80x200 feet, and invest at least $60,000 in building and plant and to employ from the start at least fifty persons.

The cost to the ratepayers at the present assessment will be less than 12 cents a year on an assessment of $1,000 for twent years. But the increased population will mean an increased assessment to bear the small necessary rate and reduce this 12 cents.

At the present assessment of the site the city receives from the land $97.00 in taxes, and at a moderate assessment the company will pay $260.00 in taxes over the exemption.

Each new factory means more employment, more population, more business and more prosperity.

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARD ANTI-LOCAL OPTION SPEAKERS

For several minutes last night the order of the anti-local option meeting in the Grand Opera House, was seriously threatened. A remark by Samuel Wright, of Owen Sound, during a fervid speech, intimating that much of the money subscribed for the foreign missionary field never reached its destination, was warmly resented by three members of the local Ministerial Association who happened to be in the audience. The statement by Mr. Wright was made after he had been carried away from the local option question, in his enthusiasm.

Rev. James Rollins, pastor of St. Andrew's, jumped to his feet and demanded an immediate retraction of what in his opinion was evidently an unqualified insinuation against the churches. He vigorously asserted that he could prove to the satisfaction of everyone that ninety-six cents out of every dollar subscribed for the foreign field reaches its destination. The records in Toronto showed it, and they could be referred to at any time.

Mr. Wright although plainly taken back, asked Rev. Mr. Rollins if he possessed information that such was the case with the Methodist churches. He was answered from the gallery by Rev. C. E. Cragg, of Mark street Methodist church, who told the speaker that he could produce evidence at any time showing that eighty cents of every dollar subscribed by the Methodist churches for the foreign field went where it was intended for.

Rev. J. R. Webb, of Murray street Baptist church, arose immediately after and corroborated the statements of the two previous speakers and on behalf of the Baptists, said that their percentage of contributions to the foreign field per dollar was even larger than the figures given by his two brother ministers.

Rev. Mr. Webb insisted that the accusations made by Mr. Wright be taken back. The crowd took up the cry and things looked interesting for a few moments, and it was difficult for any one to make themselves heard.

Finally Hon. Homer C. Durand came to the rescue of his colleague and quieted the gathering by smoothing over to some extent the somewhat ruffled feelings of those whom Mr. Wright had offended. He thought that Mr. Wright not being blessed with the glibness of speech such as ministers and legal men possessed, had perhaps in his zeal made the statement somewhat thoughtlessly and unwisely.

Outside of the above incident, the meeting could be termed a success as far as the liquor interests were involved.

The meeting opened at eight-thirty with the house fairly well filled. The pit was occupied and the largest portion of the first balcony. The chair was taken by Mr. Chris. Graham, who introduced the first speaker of the evening, Hon. Homer C. Durand, attorney, of Cincinatti, Ohio.

Mr. Durand's strongest statement was probably as follows:

"The only thing," he said, "that Local Option needs to kill it deader than a door nail is——publicity."

He quoted passages from the Scripture, all of which, he contended, supported the belief that God never intended that there should be total prohibition. Prohibition, he said was a word which could not be found in the whole Bible. He admitted that it did teach temperance, which was one thing that he personally favored with his whole heart.

"If you want to build up a strong, sturdy manhood you must certainly teach the boys the importance of temperance. But the sort of temperance that makes a town or city dry one week, and in the next week unload a car load of booze into it is not much of a temperance system.

Hon. Mr. Durand attributed intemperance more to poverty than any other cause. It was poverty that caused the majority of people to drown their sorrow in drink. And the cause of poverty, he largely considered, was the oppression of the poor by rich capitalists.

The statements by Hon. Mr. Durand and Mr. Wright were frequently applauded, and apparently met with the approval of a large majority of the audience.

The gathering closed with the singing of "God Save the King."

FIRE AT HOME OF MR. T. C. ELLIOT

Considerable Damage Done to Upper Parts of House

While yesterday afternoon's storm was at it's height fire broke out in the home of Mr. T. C. Elliot, 112 McDonnel street, proprietor of the Beehive, and destroyed the attic and part of the upper storey.

Chief Howard, while on the lookout for breakdowns on the fire alarm system, noticed two of the Otonabee Power Company's wires in dangerous proximity. He called attention of the matter to Mr. Munro, of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, who was passing, and Mr. Munro said he would inform them of the danger.

Before the linemen could get there, however, the high voltage wire came in contact with the low voltage and the insulation of the wires throughout the house was burnt.

Smoldering fires were at once started in all parts of the house which threw out a dense smoke and caused much difficulty for the firemen, who no sooner extinguished one blaze when they were confronted on every side with others.

Edmonton Looks Ahead.

Plans for fifty years ahead that mean an ultimate aggregate outlay of twenty million dollars, have been ordered by Edmonton from a landscape architectural firm.

The plan covers a proposed extension of the city into rural districts, locating residence districts, land to be acquired for park and parkway purposes, so-called zones restricted and not restricted as to occupation, and sites for workmen's houses and for housing municipal empolyes. Land to be acquired for a civic centre will cost $1,500,000, according to estimate, and for an approach to Parliament Houses, $500,000.

There are more ZUTOO tablets for headache sold in this country than all other remedies combined. Think how good these tablets must be to have such an immense sale.

Dealers could not sell them nor would people buy ZUTOO tablets in such large quantities, were they not what all users say they are, that is, a perfectly harmless and reliable cure for headache.

Do YOU use these tablets which so many people have chosen as best? If you do not, it is your next move. 25c at dealers

BARRIE'S LIMITED

HAS INJURED THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE

Extension of Local Option Brings About An Excess of Intoxication.

The primary object of the temperance movement is to do away, if possible, with intoxication and the offenses that grow out of intoxication. Any measure that helps to attain this end is good. On the other hand, any measure, however well intentioned, that does not have this result is a failure.

Has Local Option reduced the extent of intoxication, much less effaced it? After an impartial study of conditions in Local Option regions, the student is forced to admit that not only has it not succeeded in its promised aims, but it has intensified and aggravated the very evils which it professed to reform.

Of a number of Local Option places Owen Sound may be considered. Local Option went in force there in 1907. In 1905 there were only five commitments to the Owen Sound jail for drunkenness, and in 1906 there were six commitments. But with the adoption of Local Option the number of commitments for drunkenness began to increase, rising from ten in 1907 and 13 in 1908 to 15 in 1909 and to 41 in 1910. Last year 73 convictions for drunkenness were registered in the Owen Sound Police Court, and this year a still greater number.

Yet although Owen Sound's population increased somewhat in five years, the increase was nothing such as to justify the increase in the number of drunks. This year, in fact, by reason of the removal of 500 or so laborers and their families to Port McNicoll, the new Canadian Pacific terminal, the population of Owen Sound has decreased.

The number of drunks, however, is not to be judged by the police court records. Those arrested for drunkenness and sent to jail have invariably been laborers doing jobs for the time being on the docks and in the freight sheds. They have been men without local influence or connections. Residents and farmers, if not too boisterous have been allowed to go to their homes unmolested.

By closing out licenses, Local Option has wiped out the sale of light beverages such as beer which contains only three to four per cent. alcohol. Beer is too bulky to be concealed successfully, and nobody wants it when it is warm because of its unpalatability. The consequence has been that the liquor consumed has been almost entirely whiskey containing 50 per cent. or more of alcohol.

At least 1,500 bottles of whiskey have been shipped into Owen Sound every week by freight or express. Part of this shipment has gone to residents for home use, and part to "pocket peddlers" who retail it clandestinely, and carry it in large pockets made especially for the purpose. Another and great part of the whiskey goes to the "blind pigs" which sell it by the bottle or glass. There are fully 100 "blind pigs" in Owen Sound, many of them in homes.

If licenses prevailed, the licensed proprietor would be extremely careful to whom he sold liquor; otherwise his license would be taken away. But the "pocket peddler" and the "blind pigs" sell whiskey to anyone, even to boys and girls. For instance, there was the recent case of Robert Campbell convicted of selling whiskey from a bottle, on a side street to two boys, 16 and 17 years old, and sent to jail for a month in default of $50 fines. This is by no means an isolated case.

These shocking features are not confined to Owen Sound. Other Local Option places present the same results. If we are to judge a thing by its practical results, then Local Option has failed and failed disastrously. Under it drunkenness and crime have increased, boys and girls have been debauched, legitimate business has been injured, and a notorious element of hypocrisy, evasion of law and perjury has been introduced. When Local Option has these effects, as it has, it cannot be regarded as otherwise than a menace and hindrance to the real temperance movement. 1d20

ANTI LOCAL OPTION ITEMS

People may deny the divinity of Christ, or brand the story of the Cross as a myth, but none can deny the Christ Ideal, or question the power for Good; doubt cannot impair the power of Love, even if your scepticism were based upon facts.

The strength of the Christ Ideal depends not upon the question of His existence in the flesh two thousand years ago, but upon the inherent virtue of Love.

The idea of Brute Force has had many distinguished champions. For ages these held absolute sway over the destiny of the race. Darkness reigned. Rivers ran red with human blood. The graves of martyrs who perished in the struggle outnumbered the stars. In the course of time there appeared, fighting under the banner of Brute Force, Alexander, Caesar, Mohammed and Napoleon. Their imperial legions, beneath whose tread the earth trembled, have long been dust. The very day Alexander, Caesar and Napoleon died, their glory commenced to fade and wane. Time has almost effaced their record of blood and tears. They stood for cruelty, conquest, greed and glory that could only come by the triumph of Brute Force.

Jesus was the antithesis of Caesar. He refused to fight with the sword, and could not be conquered by the sword. Alexander won the world by Force and lost it in death. Brute Force put Jesus to death, but the Christ ideal has conquered and held the allegiance of more subjects each century since than ever acknowledged fealty to a Caesar, Alexander or a Napoleon. The Gospel of LOVE has multiplied His power, increased His fame, and placed nations, thrones and principalities at His feet. The glory and splendors won with the sword by the Gods of Brute Force perished with the victors. Every time the Church has seized the sword she has retarded the cause of Christ; Every time she has called upon the law to make men righteous or temperate she has discredited the Power of Love and injured the cause of righteousness and true temperance. Contrast Christ and Mohammed and you get a true conception of the antagonism existing between Force and Love.

Christ was Love incarnate. Mohammed was the embodiment of Brute Force.

Mohammed gave his victims their choice between his creed and death. The very existence, perpetuity and triumph of the Christian religion rests upon freedom of Choice and Love.

Jesus preached temperance. Mohammed made Local Option a fundamental principle in his religion. There is not a drop of liquor sold, made or consumed in any Mohammed country. Jesus drank wine and made it for others to drink. The Koran calls wine the "abomination of the works of the devil." Local Option is an instrument of Brute Force—the weapon of despotism. It means the opposite of self control—the Christian Ideal. All who foolishly imagine that you can promote true temperance by legislative enactment, by fines, prisons, or clubs in the hands of policemen, support the Brute Force idea, and are therefore on the question of Local Option, disciples of Mohammed, not Christ. They may pretend to speak His name, but they cannot, on this question, speak for Him.

True Christianity can go forward only when impelled by the Power of Love. Every effort to advance the cause of Christ or Love—by the sword, or by legislative coercion is doomed to failure, because it is a violation of the fundamental principles of the Christian religion. Wherever tried the result has been retrogression, not progress; hypocrisy, not righteousness.

Substitute the power of Law for the law of Love, in the Christian system, and it would not only perish from the earth, but the name of Jesus would soon mean no more to the human race than that of Alexander, Caesar, or Napoleon. Every victory in the moral world, not gained by the power of love, is a defeat.

For this reason alone the Local Option programme is opposed. It is not only unchristian in character, but has proved, wherever tried, outside of Turkey and the Penitentiary, powerless as a remedy for drunkeness. Even in these two exceptions it has utterly failed to promote Morality. Opposition to Local promote Morality. Opposition to Local Option rests upon the highest ground between earth and the stars. No true Christian can afford to support the Local Option crusade. It represents Mohammed, not Christ, Brute Force, not the Power of Love.

The Mohammedan idea, being unChristian, out of harmony with the age, contrary to truth and opposed to Liberty, is doomed to perish. The Christ ideal, being in accord with progress, truth, Liberty and Love, is bound to conquer in every realm where reason reigns. (Adv. 20)

Trawlers Return.

After sailing over 16,000 miles in nearly four months the two pioneer steam trawlers of the British Columbia Fisheries Co., have just arrived at Prince Rupert. They are the "Canada" and the "Triumph." It was only after a very exciting voyage that the former reached her destination in safety. Over 90 tons of coal were taken on at Union Bay on Vancouver Island, loading the boat down to the gunwales so that she became almost unmanageable in 40 miles of dirty weather between Banks Island and Skidegate. These forerunners of the extensive fleet which will play an important part in building up the prestige of Prince Rupert as a fishing port are of the most modern design and great interest will attach to the report of their first haul.

England Was Submerged.

At a recent meeting of the Birmingham and Midland Institute Scientific Society, A. W. Knapp gave a lecture on "The Earth's Record in the Rocks." The lecturer took each geological age in turn, and gave some idea of the life that existed at those times as shown in fossilized remains. He also showed how the geography of the world from age to age could be defined from the composition of the rocks. The limestone, he said, proved that the greater part of England was at one time under the sea, and by collecting evidence of this kind on was able to draw a map presenting all the various periods of the world's development. The lecturer went on to show how the land rose and luxuriant vegetation grew, to be covered in turn by other deposits, leading to the formation of the coalfields. The earliest remains of man were toward the end of the ice age. Would, he asked, the people of to-day leave any remains? There would be the churchyards and the great cities like London, while the deposits in the Black country, which looked so much like volcanic dust, might mislead the scientists of some future age.

The Home of a Genius.

Beethoven was born in a small house in Bonn. His father had inherited the vice of drinking, and often Beethoven and his younger brother were obliged to take their intoxicated father home. He was never known to utter an unkind word about the man who made his youth so unhappy, and he never failed to resent it when a third person spoke uncharitably of his father's frailty. Young Beethoven was thus taught many a severe lesson in the hard school of adversity, but his trials were not without advantage to him. They gave to his character that iron texture which upheld him under his heaviest burdens.

Elephants as Executioners.

Some idea of what Baroda, India, was in times past may be gathered from the following. A hundred elephants were kept at the expense of the state, and criminals were executed in a most horrible manner. The poor wretch, tied hand and foot, was fastened by a long rope round the waist to the elephant's hind leg. Then the animal was made to trot through the city, and the man, at almost every step rebounding against stones and obstacles, soon became a mass of bruises and wounds and a ghastly spectacle. If he survived this his head was placed on a block and the elephant crushed it with his foot.

USE OF INTOXICATING "TEMPERANCE" DRINKS

In Mr. Rowell's Home County of Oxford an Alcoholic Cider Factory is in Operation.

It is singular, to say the least, that while Mr. N. W. Rowell is engaged in a loud but futile effort to abolish the bar and bring about prohibition, there is in his own county of Oxford, and not far away from where he lives, a factory which is turning out a highly intoxicating quality of cider.

Mr. Rowell condemns a mild beverage such as beer which contains only three to four per cent. of alcohol, and he seems never to have studied the question even superficially enough to know the immense difference between beer, on the one hand, and hard intoxicants, on the other. Mr. Rowell, however, has never had a word to say on the subject of intoxicating ciders; and in the absence of any criticism from him it can be taken for granted that he favors their sale. Is this because he is innocent of knowledge, or because it is unpopular in rural districts to denounce the traditional farmer's drink, and thus alienate votes?

What has Mr. Rowell, who so vigorously denounces such a mild drink as beer, to say about his own county being the star county to turn out intoxicating ciders containing from four to seven per cent. of alcohol?

These are the facts as revealed in Bulletin No. 239, just issued by the Laboratory of the Dominion Inland Revenue Department. This bulletin deals exclusively with a chemical analysis of ciders. On page 13 of the Bulletin it will be seen that two brands of cider produced in the cider factory in question in Oxford County contains 3.98 per cent. of alcohol, and still another sample 6.94 per cent. of alcohol. Yet the law allows only 1½ per cent. of alcohol by volume in cider.

Although these ciders contain a much greater amount of alcohol than does beer, they are freely sold as "temperance drinks" in local option and prohibition places.

But they are not the only such "temperance drinks." A recent report of the Chief Analyst's Bureau of the Dominion Inland Revenue Department shows that certain so-called "unfermented grape-juice" contain almost as much alcohol as many brands of whiskey. One brand was found to contain 10.67 per cent. of alcohol; another brand 18.81 per cent. of alcohol; a third brand, 24.69 per cent. of alcohol; and a fourth brand labelled "warranted free from any alcohol" was found to contain 31.32 per cent. of proof spirit. A fifth brand marked "unfermented grape juice," revealed, upon analysis, the presence of 25.01 per cent. of alcohol.

The sale of these alcoholic drinks under the guise of "temperance drinks" is a gross fraud upon that part of the public which, deceived by their labels, consumes them upon the belief that they are non-alcoholic. But there is good evidence that much of the demand for these disguised alcoholic drinks comes from people in local option and prohibition districts who know just what those drinks are. Public morality would be much better served by laws for the granting of separate licenses for beer which contains only a slight proportion of alcohol and which has no such harmful and demoralizing effects as either these "temperance drinks" or hard intoxicants such as whiskey.

Women and children often innocently get a taste for hard liquors by imbibing these alleged "temperance drinks" and also certain alleged "patent medicines" containing a high percentage of alcohol. It is high time that this question should be settled upon rational grounds. Fanatacism, instead of settling it, only makes the situation worse.

PETES WERE HELPLESS THROUGH ICE CONDITIONS

The local seniors were practically helpless against St. Miques, at Toronto Arena, last night, and the Collegians had an easy time netting 17 tallies while the Petes were getting three.

Play was commenced immediately after the Peterborough team jumped on the ice, and the result was disasterous. Their first appearance on the artificial surface was also a big handicap and it only took about two minutes of play to get a line on the ultimate result.

The game had not proceeded ten minutes before St. Miques had five goals, all secured by Rankin, on shots from faceoffs near the Peterborough nets. Rankin was head and shoulders over any player on the ice and he did the bulk of the scoring.

Park took the first goal for his team on a rush from the face off in the second half. Kelly took the second on a side shot and Park got the third on a pass from Kelly.

Dwyer despite the high score against him, put up a splendid game, some of his stops gaining the united applause of the big crowd.

POINTS FOR THINKING PEOPLE

Money spent for liquor by local people in rival cities and sent to distant mail order houses, cannot be a good thing for local business men.

A policy which breeds sneaks, liars, hypocrites, perjurers and petty criminals cannot elevate the moral standard of any community.

Local Optionists have not a monopoly on all honor, integrity, temperance and Christian virtue.

No man has a right to tell his equal what he shall do with his money.

The advocates of Local Option assert that 80 per cent. poverty is due to liquor. They are mistaken about that, because if it were true all the Local Optionists would be rich.

Poverty is due to incapacity, poor judgment, bad luck and lack of opportunity to rise above it.

No Local Option town ever became a great city.

God will not damn men in one day and age of the world for doing what He told men in another day and age of the world they might do. (See Deuteronomy 14; 26.)

It cannot be un-Christian to do things which Christ Himself did. Jesus not only drank wine, Himself, (see St. Matthew 2;19,) but made wine for others to drink. (See St. John 2;1-11.)

Men cannot be made good by law, if St. Paul was telling the truth he said: "If righteousness come by the law then Christ is dead in vain." (See Galatians 2;21.)

Education and moral suasion, love, kindly acts, good friendship and good fellowship will do more to "rescue the perishing" than Local Option.

All who would promote temperance by law, or would rob man of his freedom of choice, antagonize the Divine order.

If Local Optionists are right in their contention, Jesus was wrong. If Jesus was right Local Optionists are wrong.

Local Optionists are disciples of Mohammed, who denounced wine as "an abomination of the works of Satan" (See the Koran, page 129) and not of Jesus Christ, who drank wine and made it for others to drink.

God has not authorized the advocates of Local Option to regulate the habits and tastes of mankind.

It cannot be immoral to take one's pocketbook—a thing of little value—and Christian to take his personal liberty—the thing of highest value.

It is not right or just to condemn all bar-room keepers, or preachers, because some are bad.

No man has a right to attend to his neighbor's business, unless he has been hired for the job, or appointed as his guardian by a court of record and placed under bond.

There is as much difference in drinking and getting drunk as there is between eating and becoming a glutton. It is right to eat, but wrong to become a glutton. While it is wrong to get drunk, it is not wrong to drink.

To argue that beer drinking makes a man poor, is just as foolish as it would be to argue that drinking champagne makes a man rich. Some millionaires never drink champagne. Lots of poor people despise beer.

There is a surprise awaiting some of our good Local Option friends who have the good fortune to safely make their way to heaven. (See St. Matthew 25; 29.)

If Local Option is good St. Paul's advice to Timothy was bad. (See 1 Timothy 5;23.)

Local Option advocates make themselves ridiculous by contending in one breath that laborers [illegible] spend their money for liquor in license towns and in the next breath that nobody will hire a man who drinks.

Oftener than otherwise, men who get arrested for drunkenness in License towns live in Local Option towns. The reason is obvious.

Nearly two thousand years have wept and smiled since Prejudice and Ignorance gave Barrabas, the incarnation of cruelty—a murderer, freedom and nailed Christ, the incarnation of gentleness, goodness, and love, to the Cross, but each generation has been compelled to decide in some form the identical question which Pilate put to the people. Not literally, but in reality. In every crisis and on all matters of principle it must be fairly and squarely met. From the very dawn of human life, two ideas, as antagonistic as light and darkness, as opposite in character as Christ and Barabbas have battled for the mastery of this world. They have waged war to determine which should dominate society, regulate religion, direct industry and control government.

On one of these banners Injustice with a pen of fire, dipped in blood emblazoned two words—Brute Force—and across its black folds glared the grim emblem of that idea—the Skull and Crossbones. The other banner, held at first in feeble hands for countless ages bore no inscription. White as the driven snow, it was often marked by the crimson tide which its defenders poured from their veins as they fought for justice, truth and liberty. They were the heroic martyrs of the race. When the prince of all martyrs was about to die on the cross, He not only refused to call legions of angels to His aid, but told Peter to put up his sword. Thus Jesus wrote in His own heart's blood across the billowy folds of that banner, one deathless word—Love.

The Orange Tree.

The orange is the longest lived fruit tree. It begins to bear the third year after budding, and for 100 years it will yield abundant crops. Orange trees have been known to attain the ripe age of 300 years. The orange requires less care and attention than any other fruit tree. Its early growth is rapid. In the first two years it grows more than it will in the next fifty. This refers, of course, to its height and breadth alone — its fruit stems and consequently its crops increase more rapidly after the first ten years.

Mayoralty Customs.

In many towns of England the election of the mayor is accompanied by much old-world ceremonial. The Mayor of Lincoln, for instance, is duly elected by having placed on his finger an ancient ring; at Chichester the mayor is armed with a gold-mounted malacca cane; at York his worship is presented with an oak stave which has been the mark of mayoral authority for centuries. The Mayor of Grantham is installed by a tap on the head with the town clerk's hammer; at Dunstable the time-honored custom of "bumping" is observed, and at both Bournemouth and Hanley the new chief magistrate has to submit to a kiss from the retiring mayor.

Not Much Progress.

A Montreal man was fined because he entered a house to protect a wife from assault by a drunken husband. Civilization has not progressed so very far since the experience of the Good Samaritan.—Ottawa Journal.

THE SECRET OF A GOOD COMPLEXION

This is the season for evening parties, social events, etc. Why not look your best? Why let your complexion suffer by contrast with other ladies? Why not ensure a good complexion? You can do this on sound, natural lines by using Zam-Buk, nature's herbal balm.

Zam-Buk is a skin-food; and complexion is purely a matter of skin health. Zam-Buk smeared lightly over the face each night acts as a skin tonic. It stimulates the cells beneath the cuticle to healthy action, makes the capillaries and blood vessels work, and the vigorous circulation thus started carries away secret impurities. Waxy, sallow deposits are thus removed. Hard, pimply growths are softened and disappear. That yellow tinge gives place to the pink of health and the white, velvty "look" and "feel" which healthy skin alone has.

Isn't this wiser than relying upon talcum powder and cosmetics? These only put on a "complexion" from the outside. It doesn't last. Zam-Buk helps nature to build up a complexion from blood and tissue. It lasts.

Zam-Buk also cures skin diseases, pimples, ulcers, abscesses, blood-poison, eruptions, cuts, burns, scalds, chapped places, scalp sores, piles, etc. 50c. box. All druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, but beware of harmful substitutes and imitations.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and are Unsuccessful Should Read This Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicine and mixtures Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt much better, the sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color, and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys, and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, in yellow boxes, 25c. per box, from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

RESULTS OF PROHIBITION IN NOVA SCOTIA

The Nova Scotia Temperance Act is as drastic a prohibition law as can be found on the statute books anywhere. If law could succeed in bringing about absolute prohibition, this law ought certainly to do it. Under this Act the Provincial Government has the power of enforcement in case the local officials fail. For years the prohibitionists demanded enforcement, and finally in 1910 they got the precise kind of law they wanted.

What have been its results? Perhaps the best answer to this question is to cite the official statistics. In the City of Sydney which has a population of 18,000, the number of arrests in 1911 totalled 709, as against 558 in 1910. In the latter year 327 drunks were arrested. In 1911 the number of arrested drunks was 446. This gives the enormous proportion of 259 per 10,000 population.

To a large extent, prohibition has driven the sale of liquor into the home. Of the 130 arrests in 1910-1911 for selling liquor, 16 were those of women. In 1910 a total of $4,033.90 in fines was collected for violation of the Act. But in 1911 the fines were even greater—$11,464.85—almost three times as much as in the preceding year.

In the prohibition town of Glace Bay there were 536 arrests of drunks in 1910. Counting intoxication and other offenses committed when drunk, the number of arrests in 1911 was 591. Inspector Philpott reports that there are at least 19 known "blind pigs" or "booze joints" in Glace Bay.

Rev. H. R. Grant, General Secretary of the Nova Scotia Temperance Alliance, places fifty as the number of liquor dens in Glace Bay. In New Waterford, he says, there are at least ten "blind pigs," and as for Sydney it is full of them, all selling hard liquor.

Such a state of affairs is not confined to Nova Scotia. It is characteristic of prohibition regions everywhere. Prohibition directly, although unwittingly, encourages the consumption of whiskey; the whiskey business never was in a more thriving condition than at present. Wherever prohibition is introduced whiskey follows, as for example in the Cobalt and Porcupine districts in Northern Ontario where nearly 10,000 bottles of whiskey a year are now being seized by the Provincial Police, and nobody knows how many more escape seizure.

These results produce drunks instead of promoting temperance. If beer licenses were granted, the consumption of intoxicating drinks would be discouraged. This is not a theory. It has been successfully tried in Europe with salutary results. 1d20

THE ANTI-LOCAL OPTION MEETING IT'S ARGUMENTS ANSWERED

The outstanding feature of the meeting in the Opera House last evening was the fact that no real effort was made to discuss the issue of Local Option on its merits. Mr. Durand admitted at the outset that he was not familiar with Ontario conditions and that he would, therefore, have to leave the merits of the question, as it affects Peterborough, to Mr. Wright to explain. He (Mr. Durrand) dealt with the general principles of prohibition. Mr. Wright, who followed, quoted a few figures relating to Owen Sound, but during the greater part of his 20-minute speech, confined to labor matters, immigration conditions and missions.

Although there are 312 municipalities in Ontario that are under Local Option, no attempt whatever was made to show that Local Option has not been a success in all of these. Neither was any effort made to show why, if Local Option is a failure in these municipalities, including Owen Sound, the citizens of these places have not repealed it long ago, as they have had the power to do. If any person went to the meeting expecting to hear a discussion on the point how Local Option is likely to effect Peterborough, they must have felt disappointed. The subject was not discussed. The main points made by the two speakers with brief answers to them as furnished by the Citizens' Local Option Committee are here given:

Statements made by Mr. Durand, of Ohio, with replies thereto were as follows: "I have no respect for the man who talks dry, but lives wet." No man is in as good a position to judge of the curse of the liquor traffic as a slave of the appetite for strong drink. Does not the law of self-preservation entitle such a man to vote for Local Option?

"I am inclined to think that as God did not make us perfect, he intended us to meet and overcome temptation as individuals and not by means of laws." If saloons help to strengthen the moral fibre of men and women, then the more saloons we have the stronger morally our men and women will be. Does anybody believe this?

"We are great as a people because we stand out against all laws that tend to restrict personal liberty." A woman or child has the the right to walk down the street without fear of being accosted by a drunken man. The preservation of the rights of the public is greater than the preservation of the rights of the individual. The individual has no right to demand the privilege of entering into a state of intoxication, which will make him a nuisance to the public. Only 15 people in Peterborough have the right to sell liquor. The rest of us have had our personal liberty interfered with, because we have not that tight. If we have not the right to sell liquor, are we not entitled to say that these 15 men also shall not sell it.

"We are capable of going to war and paying taxes, but not of deciding what shall go into our own stomachs." The government passes pure food laws for the protection of the public and is commended for so doing. Liquor is known to be poisonous in nature. We have as much right to prevent its sale as the sale of anything else that is injurious.

"Many passages of scripture commend wine drinking." The Bible also says: "Wherefore if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." 1 Cor., 8:13, and "No drunkard shall enter the Kingdom of Heaven."

"If prohibition is a good thing why is it not mentioned in the Bible?" Slavery is not a good thing. It is not mentioned in the Bible, but it has been abolished by law.

"The reason we have never tolved the liquor question, is because we have never gone about it right." The speaker did not offer a solution of the difficulty nor did he attempt to show that Local Option is not the best solution yet found. He knocked the proposed remedy but did not offer anything better in its place.

'When one man gets sick you do not give medicine to the whole town." When typhoid fever breaks out, the town's water supply is immediately regulated, in order that the source of contamination may be removed. The public has the same right to remove the open bar from its midst for it is the cause of the contamination of many of its citizens.

"Crime is hereditary and due to environment." If boys who start to drink are likely to transmit the appetite for liquor to their children then it is all the more important that we shall remove the open bar from our midst. If environment is a cause of liquor drinking, then we should remove the bar where people congregate, and thus, on account of the environment, are lead to drink.

"If you made a canvass of the members of your house of parliament you would find that not more than one or two of them do not drink." Possibly that may be true in the States, but it is not true in Canada. A very large percentage of our members of parliament are total abstainers.

"Drink is not the cause of crime, it is poverty." This is only a half truth. The whole truth is, poverty causes drink and drink causes poverty.

"Only a very small proportion of the crimes committed are due to drink." Anyone who reads the police court cases in Peterborough from day to day, will know that the great majority of these cases are directly due to the liquor traffic. Just watch the police court news for a little while and see.

"Drunkards are not like other people. Any person who will examine the drunkards in a prison will see that their skulls and general physical structure are different from those of the average individual." This is not true, for we all know that many of the brightest professional and business men of every community fall victims to the liquor traffic.

"Local Option is unfair to the poor man, because the rich man can still order his liquor and consume it within his home." If Local Option deprived the poor man of something that was for his benefit this argument would have some weight.

The license law is a law which the majority of the community has decided is the best method of regulating the liquor traffic." If a majority of a community has decided that Local Option is better than license, has it not got the same right to put Local Option into force as it has to grant licenses?

MR. WRIGHT'S ARGUMENTS

Mr. Wright spoke only briefly and advanoeh but few arguments. He admitted that he is not a resident of Owen Sound and has not been for some time. He quoted some figures relating to arrests in Owen Sound for disorderly conduct and violations of the License Act. These showed a slight increase in convictions under Local Option as compared with the former Licence system. The explanation of this was given recently by Mr. Fleming, of Owen Sound, when he spoke in the Opera House. Mr. Fleming stated that formerly under license drunks were not arrested unless they were disorderly, while under Local Option every drunk is arrested as soon as he is seen. Many of the drunks also come off the ships and off the trains from licensed districts.

Mr. Wright stated that he had been told by a Captain of a ship that he did not visit Owen Sound because he could not get away through inability to find his men in the blind pigs. This statement was directly contrary to that made by Mr. Flemming recently, who stated that captains of the vessels visiting Owen Sound do not have anything like the difficulty with their men that they used to under the license system.

Mr. Wright asserted that business conditions in Owen Sound are depressed, but did not contradict the statements made by Mr. Flemming that Owen Sound has never prospered so much as it has since the adoption of Local Option, and who quoted business man after business man to that effect, giving case after case of increase in real estate values.

Further reference to the arguments here mentioned will be made by Local Option speakers to-night at a meeting in the market hall at 8 o'clock. The speakers will include James Simpson, the well known labour leader of Toronto, and Ben. H. Spence, of Toronto, the Secretary of the Dominion Alliance. Similar meetings will be held to-morrow evening in the Market Hall at 8.15 and in the Opera House at 3.30. You are invited to attend them all.

THE WEATHER

The following date regarding the weather of the past year is furnish the Review by the local weather observer, and is officially correct for this particular locality:

The year 1912 opened with a light fall of snow. Though there was about 5 inches of snow on the ground, the sleighing was poor.

The first cold weather of the winter, and the first below zero, was on the 5th, with 10 degrees below. This cold snap continued until the 20th. On January 6th it was 23 below; 7th, 12 below; 8th, 14 below; 12th, 16 below; 13th, 29 below; 14th, 10 below.

Another cold wave arrived on the 24th and remained four days. January 26th had a record of 25 below.

ALARM SYSTEM WAS OUT OF ORDER

Yesterday's storm wrought havoc with the fire alarm system, telephone, and telegraph and electric wires. The switch board at the Fire Hall was burnt out about 2.30 in the afternoon with the result that the whole alarm system was out of commission. Telephone communication also suffered.

FIREMAN KILLED IN CAB WHEN TWO FREIGHTS MEET HEAD-ON East Bound Freight Ran Past Station Against Orders and Light Engine, Which Hurried in Pursuit, Failed to Reach or Draw the Attention of the Crew—Three of Four Men in the Engines Escaped Death by Jumping.

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—A midnight chase on a light engine to overtake a freight train, and thus prevent an impending head-on collision, took place from Burketon Jct. to Pontypool, on the C.P.R., shortly after 12 o'clock Sunday morning. The distance, nine miles, was too short for the light engine to catch up, and despite the frantic efforts made the collision occurred.

The fireman on the eastbound train, James Adams, 158 Fairview avenue, Toronto, was killed instantly. The other members of the crews of both trains jumped, but Adams apparently did not become aware of the danger in time to save himself.

The chase through the darkness on the light engine to avert the collision was most sensational, and that it failed was no fault of the engineer and fireman who manned it, as they fired up and pushed the engine on to its highest speed. They were urged on and helped by the conductor of the train ahead, who had been left on the platform at Burketon as his train moved out. The engineer seems to have been mislead by the fact that the operator had two sets of changes to give to the engineer and conductor. The engineer thinking there was only a batch of orders on getting his started his train off, leaving the conductor on the platform.

The operator and conductor, on realizing that the other train was approaching Pontypool, and that there would surely be a collision, thought of the only possible way to stop one of the trains.

This was by a chase with the light engine on a siding, and in a few minutes it was hard on the chase. Everything possible was done to try and signal the train ahead. The bell was rung, the whistle blown and red lights were swung, but none of the signals was observed. As the nine or more miles between Burketon Junction and Pontypool had been covered the crew of the light engine thought they would prevent the collision, but things turned out disastrously.

TRAIN DID NOT WAIT.

According to the instructions which were sent out the eastbound train, in charge of Engineer Bagnell and Conductor Curran, was ordered to wait at Burkton Junction until the oncoming freight extra should reach the station, and switch there to allow No. 902 to pass. The train ran past the station, however, without waiting, and shortly after the extra left Pontypool both met on the single track.

MET DEATH IN CAB.

Owing to the darkness of the early morning the trains were not seen until they were within a short distance of each other. Both engineers immediately applied the emergency brakes, but the speed could not be slackened in time to prevent a serious wreck. Seeing that a collision was unavoidable Engineer Burt, of the westbound, and his fireman leaped from the cab to safety, as did Engineer Begnall. Fireman Adams could not get away in time however, and was crushed to death in the cab.

The impact of the collision was so great that, although the trains were not running at a high rate of speed, both locomotives were slightly telescoped, while six cars were badly damaged.

AUXILIARIES CALLED.

Conductor Dickie, of the freight extra, at once notified the two stations of the wreck, and word was flashed to Havelock and Toronto. Auxiliaries were rushed to the scene from both terminals, but even with double wrecking crews it was impossible to clear the tracks until noon. Meanwhile the body of the dead fireman had been recovered from the cab, and was taken to Pontypool, where an inquest will be held.

During the time that the tracks were blocked it was necessary for all trains to make a detour of about 40 miles to pass the wreck.

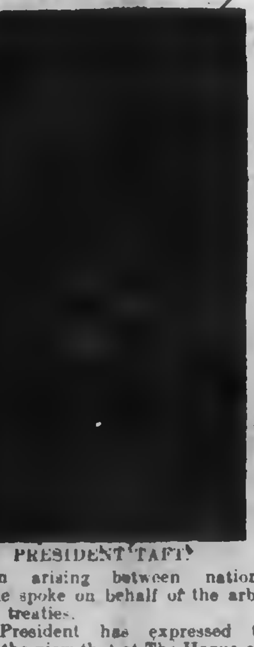
An investigation will be opened by the railway to-day to ascertain the reason for the eastbound freight over-running its orders.

TAFT WOULD HAVE UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN CONFER

He Thinks a Board Representing Both Sides Would Solve Difficulty of Panama Tolls

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—President Taft Saturday declared himself unequivocally in favor of arbitrating the dispute between the United States and Great Britain over the Panama Canal tolls, provided pending negotiations between the two countries failed to satisfactorily settle the matter.

He does not, however, favor arbitration at The Hague. A despatch received from Washington indicates as much. It says that although he has not yet given the matter of a tribunal much thought, the President probably would prefer a special board of arbitration composed of an equal number of citizens of the United States and Great Britain. Such as to be the composition of the arbitral court he proposed to settle any vital question arising between nations when he spoke on behalf of the arbitration treaties.



PRESIDENT TAFT.

The President has expressed to friends the view that at The Hague all Europe would be against the United States, and that the moral pressure on the court would be enormous, because all Europe is interested in Panama tolls, just as much as is England. Several Democratic Senators have voiced the opinion that a special tribunal be created to arbitrate this dispute.

This was the first public declaration of the President of his attitude toward the question. He was speaking at a luncheon given in his honor by the International Peace Forum.

"I am willing, and, indeed, I would be ashamed not to be willing," said the President, "to arbitrate any question with Great Britain in the construction of a treaty when we reach the exact issue which there is between the two nations. There need not be any public doubt on that subject so far as this administration is concerned. When there is a difference that cannot be reconciled by international negotiation and adjustment, then we are entirely willing to submit to an impartial tribunal.

"I am hopeful that we may get it either to a settlement or to submission before the administration in which I have the honor to be a dissolving view, shall cease, but it may not be, because these negotiations move slowly. But I am glad to take this opportunity in this presence to say that if the time comes, there will be no doubt about what I will do in response to the submission of that question as far as my power goes to all impartial tribunal for its settlement if that is necessary."

Elation In London.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The London morning paper are heartily pleased with President Taft's declaration of his intention to submit the Panama Canal controversy with Great Britain to arbitration if diplomatic negotiations should fail. The Daily Mail says:

"Any other than the honorable course which President Taft has taken would have been almost unthinkable on the part of a statesman who has devoted such efforts to furthering the cause of international peace throughout the world. If the Senate follows President Taft's lead the Panama question is as good as settled."

The Telegraph regards Mr. Taft's speech as altogether worthy of a statesman and a friend of peace throughout the world, but fails to see how any special tribunal could be erected which would not be open to the same objection as The Hague court. It remarks, in common with other papers, that there could be no better preparation for the celebration for the centenary of peace and earnestly hopes for the speedy reference of the question to an independent tribunal.

The Standard thinks that although President Taft may not have time to carry out an arrangement, there is no need to doubt that a satisfactory solution will be arrived at, and takes occasion to pay a tribute to the highly honorable part played by the greater portion of the American press in the Panama controversy.

THREE DIED IN GALE.

Reports of Storm Damage Also Come From Niagara.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—At least three deaths and approximately $500,000 property damage resulted from Friday night's 80-mile gale which swept New York and vicinity. Saturday morning at nine o'clock the wind had dropped to 60 miles an hour, but the mercury had crawled down to 32, and pedestrians suffered keenly.

The deaths reported were: Mrs. Mary Kline, Brooklyn, died of injuries after having been blown under a street car.

Robert Walker, a painter, fatally injured in a fall from a scaffold in Brooklyn.

Unidentified man blown into Newark Bay from a Central Railroad of New Jersey train.

Niagara Isolated Three Days.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 6.—After having been practically isolated since Friday afternoon, the twin cities of Niagara Falls are again in telegraphic communication. The severe storm of Friday wrecked telephone and telegraph lines and telegraph companies were unable to handle regular business until yesterday.

Press despatches left the Falls' telegraph offices last night for the first time since the great storm, which was the worst in a decade, when the power line went down near Lockport, resulting in the blowing out of the machines at the Ontario Power Co.'s transforming station here, causing a loss of about $20,000.

SIX MORE ARE SAVED

Loss of Life Luckenback Disaster is Fourteen

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Jan. 6.—Six members of the crew of the schooner Julia Luckenbach, which was cut in two and sunk by the British steamer Indrakuala early Friday morning in Chesapeake Bay, were rescued by the Indrakuala, according to a wireless message received here yesterday from the revenue cutter Apache, which went from Baltimore to the Indrakuala's assistance.

It was reported by eight survivors who were landed here Saturday by the steamer Pennsylvania that 20 persons lost their lives in the sinking of the Luckenbach, but news of the rescue of six others reduces the number to 14.

One man of the Luckenbach's crew died on board the Indrakuala. The names of the five rescued men were not given by the Apache.

The Indrakuala was reported by the Apache to be badly damaged forward and considerable water has entered the vessel's hold. The officers and crew of the Indrakuala, the Apache commander says, are deeply grieved over the loss of life as a result of the collision.

The Apache reported she would stand by the Indrakuala until the weather cleared, and then would attempt to tow the vessel here, where repairs can be made.

Heavy Gales on Coast.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 6.—The gale which swept this province Saturday, was the worst experience here in many years, the wind reaching a velocity of nearly 100 miles an hour.

All the small craft in the harbor kept well within the shelter of the port, only the liners venturing out. Last night word reached the city that the American three-masted schooner, Wm. T. Donnell, was a total wreck in Mace's Bay, about twenty miles below St. John. The crew was saved, but the vessel went to pieces and the men had a narrow escape.

The ninety-ton schooner, Eskimo, is also reported ashore at Musquash, with crew safe. She is owned by the C. T. White Lumber Co., of Apple River, N.S.

DR. SWIFT DEAD.

Celebrated American Astronomer Passes Away.

BINGHAMTON, N.Y., Jan. 6.—Dr. Lewis Swift, America's great astronomer, died at six o'clock Sunday morning at his home in Marathon, never recovering consciousness following a stroke of paralysis sustained New Year's Day. The body will be interred in the village cemetery.

Dr. Swift was a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society of England and also of Canada, received three gold medals from the Austrian Academy of Sciences at Vienna for discoveries, the greatest number ever given to any one man, and also received the Lalonde silver medal and 540 francs from France for the most rapid discovery of comets ever made.

Dr. Swift was born in Clarkston, Monroe County, N.Y., on Feb. 29, 1820, and Feb. 29, 1908, as he himself has written, "was my 21st birthday, not my 22nd, because there was no leap year in 1900, and I went eight years without a birthday."

COTTAGES PILLAGED.

Summer Resort Pirates Are Again Rampant on Georgian Bay.

PARRY SOUND, Jan. 6.—So serious in character is the situation which has arisen in connection with the perennial operations of thieves and vandals among the summer homes and cottages in the Georgian Bay district that the residents are threatening, in some cases, to take the law into their own hands. They claim that these depredations are permitted to go on with impunity, and that all efforts to secure action from the Attorney-General's Department have been unavailing.

For three years past now the raids of these miscreants have been regularly carried on. The scene of operations extends over the various islands and summer resorts along the east and north shores of the Georgian Bay. It is believed that the majority of the thefts occur in the early autumn, almost immediately after the summer guests have returned home. The cottages are forcibly broken open, and practically all of value, including furniture, has been stolen. Not content with the wholesale thefts the culprits have broken and destroyed property worth thousands of dollars.

LIBERAL PARLIAMENTARIAN PASSES AWAY AT TORONTO

After Twenty-Three Years in the Commons and Six in the Upper House Archibald Campbell, the Milling Man, Succumbs to an Illness of Three Weeks

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—Senator Archibald Campbell, Liberal member in the Dominion House of Commons for twenty-three years, and West York's representative in the Senate for the last six years, died in Weslesley Hospital last night after an illness of three weeks. Senator Campbell was 68 years old, but he looked much younger. He was robust of physique and his death comes as a shock to men in political circles as well as to his host of personal friends.

Ridgetown, Ont., was the birthplace of the dead Senator. He was of Scotch descent, his parents, Neil Campbell and Flora Johnson, coming from Argyleshire in 1830. He attended the Chatham Collegiate Institute, and after graduating gave his energies to the task of building up a milling business. Forty-two years ago he married Mirette Burke of Coloma, California, who survives him with six children. Senator Campbell was taken ill in Ottawa three weeks ago, and immediately returned to his home at West Toronto, to rest up. He had always had perfect health, and for forty-two years of married life had never required the services of a doctor.

Senator Campbell had lived in West Toronto for twenty-one years, and before that resided in Chatham, where he has a married daughter, Mrs. Spencer Stone. For twenty-three years he was a member of the House of Commons, representing Kent County from 1887 to 1900 and West York from 1901 to 1907. While representing Kent County in the House of Commons he was chairman of the banking and commerce committee and when he sat for West York was chairman of the railway and transportation committee. In 1907 he was called to the Senate where he represented West York until his death.

In business Senator Campbell was just as successful as in politics. While in Chatham he owned large flour mills, and on coming to Toronto he built the large Queen City Flour Mills. At the time of his death he was president of the Campbell Milling Co. of Canada, but three years ago was relieved from responsibility of the company by his three sons. He was also president of the Central Railway and of the Grand Construction Co.

TURKS MORE REASONABLE

Efforts of the Powers Appear Successful on Both Sides

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The general situation has ameliorated and the danger of a rupture of the peace negotiations to-day seems to be averted through Turkey making fresh concessions which will enable the allies to enjoy a holiday during the festivities in connection with the Orthodox Christmas.

Rechad Pasha seemed to have turned into a sphinx so full of mystery is he, but from authoritative sources it is stated that the powers, through their ambassadors here and at Constantinople having succeeded in mixing much water with both the allies and Turkey's wine. Strong pressure in favor of moderation has been exercised at Constantinople, while the Balkan representatives have been urged to be patient before breaking off the negotiations, especially as they can lose nothing by waiting, their position being better than that of Turkey.

The efforts of the powers appear to be successful on both sides. Thus, unless some sudden change occurs at the last moment, Rechad Pasha will present on Monday new terms, which will comprise another rectification of the Thracean frontier, bringing it further east than provided for in the terms presented Friday, perhaps to Dedeagatch, but not yet including Adrianople, and possibly the cession to Turkey's rights in Crete directly to the allies.

The impression is that Turkey will end by ceding Adrianople, and that would be done without any serious results.

CONSERVATIVES ARE IN POWER

LISBON, Jan. 6.—The President of the republic has accepted the resignation of the Cabinet and entrusted Antiono Jose Almeida, leader of the Conservatives, with the formation of a new Ministry.

Senor Almeida, whose policy of conciliation has been violently opposed by the Democrats under Dr. Alfonso Costa, leading to the recent disorderly scenes in the chamber, has outlined a program, which includes financial retrenchment, revision of the laws governing the separation of the church and state, more liberal treatment for ecclesiastics and amnesty for political prisoners.

SECOND THREAT AGAINST FOREMAN OF THE JURY

THREE MEN KILLED.

Premature Blast Resulted in Tragedy on C.P.R.'s New Line.

PERTH, Ont., Jan. 6.—Murdock's construction camp, on the new C.P.R. lake line from Ottawa to Belleville, near Christie's Lake, was the scene of an accident which resulted in the death of three workmen. It occurred about two o'clock in the morning. They were in the act of loading a hole when it exploded, killing an Englishman named Court instantly, and seriously injured three others, two of whom died after the doctors arrived. They were both Scotchmen, one Alex. McTavish, whose only relative is a sister in Auckland, New Zealand, while the other, Alex. Morrison, lived in Forrester's Falls, Ont., and leaves a wife and family. The fourth was still living, although he had a serious injury to his spine. An inquest is to be held to-day.

Letter in Same Handwriting as Letter of Few Days Ago.

NEWCASTLE, Ind., Jan. 6.—A second threat against the life of Frank Dare, foreman of the federal jury, which convicted the ironworkers in the dynamite conspiracy trial at Indianapolis, was received Saturday. The letter, which was mailed in Chicago and signed "State Street," is in the same handwriting as the one of a few days ago, which said he would be under the sod within three months.

The letter received Saturday reads: "Keep out of the newspapers with the letters you receive or else every friend of union labor in the country will know your address, and don't forget the sense of my last letter to you."

Both letters have been placed in the hands of federal authorities.

"There was a strange girl from the country in the freshman class today," said Ellen Brownlee, "and her name was Elnora."

"That was the girl," said Margaret.

"Are her people so very poor?" questioned Ellen.

"No, not poor at all, come to think of it," answered Margaret. "It's a peculiar case. Mrs. Comstock had a great trouble, and she let it change her whole life and make a different woman of her. She used to be lovely, but all she does now is droop all day and walk the edge of the swamp half the night and neglect Elnora. If you girls would make life just a little easier for her it would be the finest thing you ever did."

All of them promised they would.

"Now tell me about your hair," persisted Margaret Sinton.

So they took her to a toilet counter, and she bought the proper hair soap, also a nail file and cold cream for use after windy days. Then they left her with the experienced clerk, and when at last Wesley found her she was loaded with bundles, and the glint of other days was in her beautiful eyes. Wesley carried some packages also.

"Come on, now, let's get home," he said.

CHAPTER III.

Wherein Elnora Procures Her Books and Finds Means of Earning Money.

ALL the way home Wesley and Margaret Sinton discussed how they should give Elnora their purchases and what Mrs. Comstock would say.

"I am afraid she will be awful mad," said Margaret Sinton tremulously.

"She'll just rip," replied Wesley graphically. "But if she wants to leave the raising of her girl to the neighbors she needn't get fractious if they take some pride in doing a good job. From now on I calculate Elnora shall go to school, and she shall have all the clothes and books she needs, if I go around on the back of Kate Comstock's land and cut a tree or drive off a calf to pay for them. Why I know one tree she owns that would put Elnora in heaven for a year. Just think of it, Margaret! It's not fair. One-third of what is there belongs to Elnora by law, and if Kate Comstock raises a row I'll tell her so and see that the girl gets it. You go to see Kate in the morning, and I'll go with you. Tell her you want Elnora's pattern, that you are going to make her a dress for helping us. And sort of hint at a few more things. If Kate balks I'll take a hand and settle her. I'll go to law for Elnora's share of that and then she can take her share."

"Why, Wesley Sinton, you're perfectly wild."

"I'm not! Did you ever stop to think that such cases are so frequent there have been laws made to provide for them? I can bring it up in court and force Kate to educate Elnora and board and clothe her till she's of age, and then she can take her own share."

"Wesley, Kate would go crazy!"

"She's crazy now. The idea of any mother living with as sweet a girl as Elnora and letting her suffer till I find her crying like a funeral! It makes me fighting mad!"

When Wesley came from the barn Margaret had four pieces of crisp gingham, a pale blue, a pink, a gray with green stripes and a rich brown and blue plaid. On each of them lay a yard and a half of wide ribbon to match. There were handkerchiefs and a brown leather belt. In her hands she held a wide brimmed tan straw hat having a high crown banded with velvet strips, each of which fastened with a tiny gold buckle.

"It looks kind of bare now," she explained. "It had three quills on it here. The price was two and a half for the hat, and those things were a dollar and a dollar and a half apiece. I couldn't pay that."

"It does seem considerable," admitted Wesley, "but will it look right without them?"

"No, it won't!" said Margaret. "It's going to have quills on it. Do you remember those beautiful peacock wing feathers that Phoebe Simms gave me? Three of them go on just where those came off, and nobody will ever know the difference. They match the hat to a moral, and they are just a little longer and richer than the ones that I had taken off. I was wondering whether I better sew them on tonight while I remember how they set or wait till morning."

"Don't risk it!" exclaimed Wesley anxiously. "Don't you risk it! Sew them on right now!"

"Open your bundles, while I get the thread," said Margaret.

Wesley set out a pair of shoes. Margaret took them up and pinched the leather and stroked them.

"My, but they are pretty!" she cried. "What else did you get?"

"Well, sir," said Wesley. "I saw something today. You told me about Kate getting that tin pail for Elnora to carry to high school, and you said you told her it was a shame. So I just inquired around till I found this, and I think it's about the ticket. Decent looking and handy as you please. See here, now!"

Wesley opened the package and laid a brown leather lunch box on the table. Inside was a space for sandwiches, a little porcelain box for cold meat or fried chicken, another for salad, a glass with a lid which screwed on, held by a ring in a corner, for custard or jelly, a flask for tea or milk, a beautiful little knife, fork and spoon fastened in holders and a place for a napkin.

Margaret was almost crying over it.

"How I'd love to fill it!" she exclaimed.

"Do it the first time just to show Kate Comstock what love is!" said Wesley. "Get up early in the morning and make one of those dresses tomorrow. Can't you make a plain gingham dress in a day? I'll pick a chicken, and you fry it and fix a little custard for the cup, and do it up brown. Go on, Maggie, you do it!"

"I never can," said Margaret. "I am slow as the itch about sewing, and these are not going to be plain dresses when it comes to making them. There are going to be edgings of plain green, pink and brown to the bias strips and tucks and pleats about the hips, fancy belts and collars, and all of it takes time."

"Then Kate Comstock's got to help," said Wesley. "Can the two of you make one and get that lunch tomorrow?"

"Easy, but she'll never do it!"

"You see if she doesn't!" said Wesley. "You get up and cut it out, and soon as Elnora is gone I'll go after Kate myself. She'll take what I'll say better alone. But she'll come, and she'll help make the dress. These other things are our Christmas gifts to Elnora. She'll no doubt need them more now than she will then, and we can give them just as well. That's yours, and this is mine, or whichever way you choose."

Wesley untied a good brown umbrella and shook out the folds of a long brown raincoat. Margaret dropped the hat, arose and took the coat. She tried it on, felt it, cooed over it and matched it with the umbrella.

"Did it look anything like rain tonight?" she inquired so anxiously that Wesley laughed.

"And this last bundle?" she said, dropping back in her chair, the coat still over her shoulders.

"I couldn't buy this much stuff for any other woman and nothing for my own," said Wesley. "It's Christmas for you, too, Margaret!" He shook out fold after fold of soft gray satiny goods that would look lovely against Margaret's pink cheeks and whitening hair.

"Oh, you old darling!" she exclaimed and fled sobbing into his arms.

At 4 o'clock next morning Elnora was shelling beans. At 6 she fed chickens and pigs, swept two of the rooms of the cabin, built a fire and put on the kettle for breakfast. Then she climbed the narrow stairs to the attic she had occupied since a very small child and dressed in the hated shoes and brown calico, plastered down her crisp curls, ate what breakfast she could and, pinning on her hat, started for town.

"There is no sense in your going for an hour yet," said her mother.

"I must try to discover some way to earn those books," replied Elnora. "I am perfectly positive I shall not find them lying along the road wrapped in tissue paper and tagged with my name."

She went toward the city as on yesterday. Her perplexity as to where tuition and books were to come from was worse, but she did not feel quite so badly. She never again would have to face all of it for the first time. She had been through it once and was yet living. There had been times yesterday when she had prayed to be hidden or to drop dead, and neither had happened. "I guess the best way to get an answer to prayer is to work for it," muttered Elnora grimly.

In an Onabasha book store she asked the prices of the list of books that she needed and learned that $6 would not quite supply them. She anxiously inquired for second hand books, but was told that the only way to secure them was from the last year's freshmen.

"Do you wish these?" asked the clerk hurriedly, for the store was rapidly filling with school children wanting anything from a dictionary to a pen.

"Yes," gasped Elnora, "oh, yes! But I cannot pay for them just now. Please let me take them, and I will pay for them on Friday or return them as perfect as they are. Please trust me for them a few days."

The clerk looked at her doubtfully and took her name.

"I'll ask the proprietor," he said. When he came back Elnora knew the answer before he spoke.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but Mr. Hann doesn't recognise your name. You are not a customer of ours, and he feels that he can't take the risk. You'll have to bring the money."

Elnora clumped out of the store, the thump of her heavy shoes beating as a hammer on her brain. She tried two other houses with the same result and then in sick despair came into the street. What could she do? She was too frightened to think.

There it stood in a bank window in big black letters staring straight at her:

> Wanted.—Caterpillars, cocoons, chrysalides, pupae cases, butterflies, moths, Indian relics of all kinds. Highest scale of prices paid in cash.

Elnora caught the wicket at the cashier's desk with both hands to brace herself against disappointment.

"Who is it wants to buy cocoons, butterflies and moths?" she panted.

SOME VERY PECULIAR FUNERALS

Minister Tells of Strange Events In Connection With Burial Services.

One afternoon I was sitting in the vestry of the cemetery chapel when the superintendent rushed in.

"Come up to the South Walk at once, sir. T'other minister's fallen into t' grave and hurted 'isself," he gasped.

I flung on my surplice and hurried to the grave.

My colleague was still at the bottom of it—it was a new one, and 11 feet deep. He had a curious trick of closing his eyes when saying the prayers, and had swayed carelessly into the cavity. He was now making frantic efforts to extricate himself, but in vain, as he had slightly injured his knee. The gravediggers eventually procured a ladder and lifted him out, and I took the remainder of the service—he was too shaken to continue. Very fortunately the incident did not get into the newspapers.

I had a rather alarming experience in another Yorkshire cemetery. I was walking along a country road, taking a constitutional, when a mourning coach dashed up to me, full gallop.

"Are you a clergyman, sir?" shouted the driver. "The minister hasn't come, and thousands and thousands of people has been waiting in the cemetery for the last two hours."

The deceased, it appeared, was a well-known sporting publican. The clergyman who had promised to officiate had evidently forgotten all about it, and had gone somewhere else for the afternoon. But the awkward part, as far as I was concerned, began when I reached the chapel which was surrounded by a mob of angry colliers. To my amazement there was a yell of execration when I appeared. It suddenly dawned upon me that I was being mistaken for the missing clergyman. I tried to explain, but it was no use.

"'E ought to be chucked into t' grave!" they roared, and there was an ugly rush toward me.

But the undertaker was equal to the difficulty. He had a tremendous voice, and succeeded in convincing the mob that I was not the offending party. They then subsided and I took the funeral without interference.

But the absentminded clergyman found it expedient to look out for another sphere of work soon after this.

The very strangest event I ever experienced, out of all the thousands of funerals I have taken, was as follows: It was a dingy little church, and the afternoon was growing dark. The coffin was in front of me, upon low trestles. Suddenly, during a break in the service, I heard, most distinctly, coming from the direction of the coffin, sounds of prolonged scratching, then tap, tap, tap, like a finger-nail rapping upon wood. It gave me a shock, I can tell you. The undertaker heard it, too, and stepped forward, with his eyes bulging out of his head, and put his ear to the coffin. Then he suddenly glanced down at the floor, and came up to my prayer desk smiling behind his hand.

"It's only a rat or a mouse down the grating, sir," he whispered.

There was a grating, connected with the heating apparatus, immediately beneath the coffin, and it was from this that the sounds were emanating. There was nothing alive in the coffin, after all. But, all the same, I could hardly finish the service for nervousness.

May I add here that there is no class of the community more cheerful and jolly than undertakers, gravediggers, and cemetery employes generally. It is a part of their professional duty to look melancholy and sympathetic, and by a very natural reaction, when they are off duty, their minds turn towards cheerfulness.

Feasts of Victor Hugo.

Victor Hugo's powers of digestion were of no ordinary caliber. In some reminiscences contributed to the Paris Temps M. Edouard Lockroy relates that the poet when served with crayfish invariably ate them whole, swallowing the claws and shell with great gusto. Oranges were dealt with in the same way, the peel being eaten with as much relish as the fruit. A dinner party at Hugo's was a trying ordeal for people of normal appetites. "On occasions," writes M. Lockroy, "we were fed for three hours without intermission. And after forty minutes' respite in the drawing-room we were marched back to partake of pastry and sirups."

A PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE

In Obtaining a Plan For a Detective Story

By NATHAN JERNEGAN

I am a literary man—that is, if detective stories may be called literature. Of course my work involves the inventive faculty, and invention involves mental labor. I often thought that if I could obtain real cases, such as the sharp detective works out, I would be able to dispense with the hardest part of my work. I applied to the police for such cases, but all I got was the tracking of a thief, a burglar or a murderer by some slip made by the perpetrator or some one else. There was not enough in it to keep a reader in anxious expectation through several hundred closely printed pages.

One morning I had a real case come to me without any inquiry. I was sitting in my study racking my brain for material when a maid entered and told me there was an expressman at the door with a package for me. I went downstairs, receipted for it and, taking it to my den, removed the cover, opened the box and saw some jewels. Removing a tray, there lay twenty or thirty stones apparently of great value. I examined the address on the wrapper, thinking that I had receipted for something intended for another, but there were my name and address correctly written in every particular.

What did it mean? Instead of spending the rest of the morning trying to invent a detective story, I was occupied in endeavoring to explain why and from whom these jewels had been sent me. I found the job more difficult than producing a plot. At last I made up my mind that I must go about it methodically, just as a detective begins work in a criminal case.

First I went to the express office to see if I could learn there who sent the package, but no one knew anything about it. The expressmen don't keep records of the senders of miscellaneous packages. The next question was, "Are the jewels real or imitation?" This I might learn by submitting them to an expert. But until the mystery was explained I did not care to have any one but myself know that they were in my possession. They might be stolen property, and I had no mind to go to jail as the thief. However, I selected one of a few small stones I found in the tray and took it to a dealer in gems for inspection. He pronounced it genuine.

I returned to my study, threw myself into an easy chair and began to ponder. The jewelry had been sent me by some one whom I did not know, for I had never before seen the handwriting. There could have been no mistake as to the intention. But what was back of the intention?

Suddenly an explanation flashed on my brain like the flame of a gun at night. The jewels had been stolen, and whoever had stolen them, fearing to be caught with them in his possession, had sent them away. After all, was not that a good scheme? Infernal machines and poisoned food had been sent by express and the shipper was never discovered. The thief would doubtless open communication with me after the danger their possession would bring him had passed.

Then there was another flash in my brain, and another idea was born. I had a detective case before me that I might work out myself and make it the theme of a thrilling tale. How should I begin? Attempt to discover the owner of the gems? No; it would be better to my purpose that I should make that a separate problem. Should I take the police into my confidence? By no means—at least till the denouement, when the guilty party had been traced through the labyrinth of circumstance and the hero detective, pointing his finger at him, cries, "Thou art the man!" My plan would be to show up the ingenuity of my hero in contrast with the stupidity of the police.

Should I advertise the jewels in such a way that the thief would recognize that they were the property in which he was interested? Not till he had time to feel assured that those hunting the jewels were not on his track. But this would involve delay, and I was anxious to pull the thread of my investigations at once. So I advertised that if the party who had misdirected some property sent by express would address me at the office of the newspaper containing the ad. he would learn something to his advantage.

I received no reply to this, but very soon a note came through the mail stating that certain property had been addressed to me by mistake and if I would return it, asking no questions, half the value would be deducted. It was plain from this that my theory was correct. The jewels had been stolen, and the thief was inclined to bribe me to return them to him without giving him away. To ease my conscience he said the matter rested on a family affair that he was not at liberty to reveal.

I replied that it was true I had received by express a package that was unexpected, and I pretended to be deceived by the "family affair," writing that I was not in the habit of poking into other persons' business and could readily understand why it should be kept from me. I was ready to accept the terms offered. A reply came to this stating that if I were disposed to play fair and not attempt any "shenanigan" I would be paid $5,000 in currency for the jewels, but if I attempted to lead my correspondent into a trap I would fall into one myself.

My plot was rapidly working to a head, and I saw possibilities of expanding it into a novel that would send my name up among the great writers of detective stories. But I resolved to wait till the denouement before beginning, for experience had taught me that the easiest way to write a detective story is to begin at the end instead of the beginning.

After a lengthy correspondence it was arranged between me and the party attempting to recover the jewels that I should meet him in a house which was one of a row of stone fronts. At a certain hour on a certain day I was to ring the bell of an apartment on the third floor of the building. If I were alone it would be known; if I were followed it would be known. Indeed, unless I came by myself there would be no use of my coming at all. Should I throw up the agreement I would be denounced as having stolen the property.

I began to realize that I was getting into the business of practical detective story writing with a vengeance. It was time I should take some precautions against arrest for having stolen property in my possession. My letters to my correspondent alone would incriminate me. I determined to consult the police. Indeed, they were now necessary to me. I must devise some plan with them by which I should be protected and they should make the arrest. But, desiring to keep the matter in my own hands, I told them only that I was tracking a criminal and wished them to be on hand when the trap was sprung. The inspector was not well satisfied to take up a matter under some one else's lead, but when he found that I was obdurate he consented, and I was turned over to a sergeant to make the necessary arrangements.

Upon showing him the building where I was to meet my party he noticed that the roofs of all the houses in the block were of the same height. Thinking that if any one should wish to get away he would mount to the roof and go down through the scuttle of another house, the sergeant concluded to put men on the roofs to watch that means of egress. This would obviate the necessity of keeping on my trail in the street, which would be known to the criminal.

On the day and hour appointed I repaired with the jewels to the building, rang the bell of the third flat in the vestibule, the latch was drawn, and I went upstairs. A door stood ajar, and I passed through it into a room. A man advanced to meet me. He did not look at all like a jailbird or, indeed, a criminal of any kind.

"Ah," he said cordially. "I see you have brought the box. Permit me to explain verbally that these jewels are a legacy to my daughter. The will by which she inherited them was not properly drawn, and in law, though not in equity, they belong to another. To save them I captured them, though if what I have done were known it would subject me to a criminal prosecution. That is the reason I sent them to you and why I am willing to secure your silence by paying you so large an amount."

Here was a subcomplication for my work. I was very much interested and listened eagerly to the man's story of how he had saved his daughter's inheritance. I declined to accept any reward for the return of the jewels, but he declared that a bargain was a bargain and we must both stand by the one we had made. Since the police were behind me I thought it perfectly safe to accept temporarily anything he might offer.

He counted out fifty $100 bills, which I rolled in a wad and put in my pocket. It had been agreed between me and my supports that when on my return I reached the street door several policemen who had come after I had made my entrance should go upstairs, while those on the roof were stopping egress in that direction. I therefore said goodby to the man who had saved his daughter's fortune, resolving that I would attempt to persuade the policemen below to let the case drop. But they refused to be persuaded and went up. They rang the doorbell of the third floor flat, but, not receiving a response, were obliged to force an entrance. This took some time, as every door and window was barred. When it was effected the flat was found to be empty. A door had been cut into the adjoining building, through which any one might have passed out and away. At any rate, the man who had saved his daughter's fortune I never saw again. Nor did the police.

I went to the station and turned the bills I had received over to the sergeant. He sent them to a bank for inspection, and they were pronounced counterfeit.

I asked the inspector for a theory as to the meaning of the whole business. After some thought he said:

"There was a robbery of jewels recently of which we were notified and were hot on the robber's tracks. That the gems might not be found on him he sent them away by express. How he came to select you for the recipient I don't know. When he wanted the jewels he opened correspondence with you, though it is also possible that some one seeing your ad. did so. The result you know. Whoever he is, he has the jewels and you have $5,000 in worthless money. Next time you meet with such a case you'd better report it to us at once."

I had written detective stories based on the stupidity of the police and the ingenuity of my hero. I now felt that the former were revenged.

I went to my scribbling den and instead of writing a long detective story wrote a short one. The above tale is all I got out of my practical experience.

Mufflers For Aeroplanes.

Recent experiments with a muffling box on board an aeroplane, made near Paris, proved successful. The great noise of the motor ordinarily lessens the comfort in flying and fatigues the pilot as well as causes annoyance to passengers. In military work the noise prevents the officers from hearing sounds which come from the ground and these would often be a useful factor in observations. Pilots cannot use their voices to any extent. Another point is that were the motor silent running the observers could hear sound signals coming from the ground and could also return signals by using trumpets of different pitch or sirens as are used on vessels. The test took place before a military commission, and during the flights it is said that the noise of the motor was so much reduced as to allow the pilot, Labouret, to speak to the persons on the ground when he was flying at 300 feet. The muffler box does not overheat owing to the strong air cooling which it receives. The loss of power is below 2 per cent., as shown by measurements.

ANOTHER TREASURE.

British Museum Receives a Fine Theban "Book of the Dead."

The already well-endowed collection of Egyptian papyri in the British Museum has received an important addition in the gift by Mrs. Mary Greenfield of a magnificent Theban version of the Book of the Dead of the period of the New Empire, 1000 B.C. It contains several unknown literary compositions, hymns, litanies and services, and measures 123 feet in length and 18 inches in width.

It was discovered in the late '70's of the last century in the hiding place of the royal mummies at Deir-el-Bahari, and the writer was a woman named Mesi-ta-nebt Asheru — "She who belongs to the Lady of Asher," that is, the goddess Mut of Thebes. She was a princess, the daughter of the last priest king of the twenty-first dynasty, Painetchem II. by his niece, the grand priestess queen, Nesi-Khensu, a lady who held the highest sacred and secular offices. The mummified forms of the princess, her father and mother are still in the Cairo Museum.

The way in which the author has selected the chapters from the older Theban version of the Book of the Dead shows a thorough knowledge of the theology of the period, and the beauty of the hymns and litanies to Osiris, Atem and Harmachis shows the mind of a pious and highly educated person.

The whole of the huge papyrus is clearly in one handwriting, a rather small feminine hand, and we learn from it that the lady held the title of "Worker or Maker of the Rolls (books) of Amen-Ra, King of the Gods." She was also a musician, being called "Singer of the Quarter of Mut Lady of Asher." In addition, she was a priestess of Amen and "Chief Lady of the Ladies of Amen-Ra"—that is head of the female section of the confraternity of the great Theban god.

Reports have reached London of the discovery, near Luxor, Egypt, of a tomb, which contained one of the most valuable collections of predynastic implements and ornaments ever found. The tomb contained the dried-up remains of a man lying in the semi-embryonic position.

As the Neolithic Egyptians did not embalm their dead, the body was nearly crumbled up from the weight of a stone slab which had been dislodged from its position as the covering of the tomb. With the body were found a unique double-edged bronze sword in such an excellent state of preservation that the cutting edge remains sharp, several long arrow heads, also in bronze; two gold hair rings and a lot of the well-known pre-dynastic pottery.

The tomb was probably that of one of the warriors of the first dynasty, during which period the use of bronze was discovered in Upper Egypt. According to this theory the body is about six thousand years old.

FIGHT IN COMMONS

British Parliament Is Not a Stranger To Fisticuffs.

"How many more times," an M.P. persistently inquired in the lobby of the House of Commons recently, "is the Home Rule question going to make members lose their temper and dignity? And how many more 'traitors' and 'Judases' are we going to discover?"

"Judas," of course, was the word which led to the memorable uproar in the Chamber on July 27th, 1893, in comparison with which the affair of a few days ago was but mild outburst.

Chamberlain was sneering at Gladstone's Home Rule arguments, when Mr. T. P. O'Connor shouted "Judas!" and then the uproar began. Sir Edward Carson shouted something at the Irish members, upon which Mr. Logan came over and threw himself into the seat next to him. Mr. Hayes Fisher promptly seized him by the neck and flung him from the bench. Then the battle became general, and for three minutes the floor of the House was a mass of surging, struggling, and excited legislators, many of them hitting out right and left. The members were brought to their senses by the hisses, loud and sustained, from the astonished spectators in the galleries, and when they came to count their losses, one member discovered that the use of his eye had been temporarily interfered with, and another complained that a colleague had attempted to mar the beauty of his nose.

In 1881 no fewer than thirty-six Irish members, including Mr. Parnell and Mr. Justin McCarthy, were suspended after scenes of indescribable uproar, during a debate on Mr. Forster's Coercion Bill, and in the following year twenty-five members from the other side of St. George's Channel were relieved from attendance for wilful obstruction.

It was on this occasion that the Irish members refused to go into the lobbies for a division. They were named, their suspension was moved, and carried, but the Irishmen refused to budge an inch until a body of police walked into the House. Even then it was as much as the constables could do to move them on. As a matter of fact, the police and the Irish members had a regular fight before the former conquered, and carried the Irishmen out of the House.

The recent scene recalls that of July last year, when for the first time within living memory the Prime Minister was shouted down. The occasion was the discussion of the Veto Bill, when the Opposition refused, as they did the other day, to allow any speeches to be made. On that occasion, too, the word "Traitor" was hurled at the Prime Minister, and ultimately business had to be stopped and the House adjourned.

Fortunately for the dignity of the British Parliament, however much the passions of members may rise, they never forget the respect that is due to the Speaker, and he only has to rise to at once quieten the House. This is by no means the case, however, in other parliaments, and in September of last year, Mr. Willis the Speaker of the Sydney Parliament, was bombarded with books because he had ordered the removal of a certain member. The execution of the order was frustrated by the resistance offered by other members, and finally the police had to be sent for before the turbulent M.P.'s calmed down.

MONDAY, JAN. 6, 1913.

AN EXPLANATION

The Review owes its readers an apology, or explanation, for the large amount of space taken up in its issues of the past six or eight days with matter relating to the local option by-law. This matter was pure advertising, and was marked as such. On Saturday the pressure was so great that the management refused matter from both sides, in each case without looking at the copy, as Mr. H. B. Cowan, of the Citizens' committeee, and Mr. Chris. Graham, of the License Holders' Association, can testify. This meant the loss of a large amount of revenue but the Review did it so that news matter would not be sacrificed and we feel that our readers will appreciate this.

THE USELESS STRIKE

The strike is being condemned now as a means of obtaining industrial justice by even the Socialists. The strike is all right as a weapon when labor is very scarce, and the business of the concern so heavy that an interruption would cost more than the concessions asked by workers. But where the employer has little or no trouble replacing his help, if it goes out, the strike ought to be used with great care.

The big strikes in England, where the margin between the workers' resources and the necessity of employment is very small, have been very productive of additional pauperism. The transport workers' strike in England alone was responsible for a temporary increase in the number of London's legal poor, amounting to 60 per cent. The recent figures given by the London Times as to the steady development of pauperism in London, notwithstanding the supposed great boom in British trade, seem to indicate that even when there are no strikes to force a large number of workers onto public relief, there is little reduction in the number of those obtaining charity.

For many weeks past, England has been rejoicing with a great boom in trade. Trade union non-employment came down to 1.6 per cent., the lowest recorded in many years. Employers everywhere were asking for men, yet in London during December 29,000 men applied to the labor exchanges, and 20,000 were left on the register at the end of that month. In Glasgow and Liverpool the number left was only 1500. When without strikes conditions are like this, with a big strike on there is a great intensifying of pauperism. In Canada strikes are as a rule not so large or so serious, because the earnings of the large industries and transportation companies are so large that they can afford to pay their employes reasonably good money. In fact, the scarcity of labor makes it compulsory for them to do so. But there is a huge economic waste in the strike after all, and the brunt of the losses is almost every time borne by the workers.

TAX REFORM

It is not the intention or desire of the Review to put in a word of defence for Premier Whitney against the attacks of the tax reformers. Sir James has enough stubbornness to defend himself. But we think that the agitation for tax reform as it is carried on by the Liberal opposition, and by a few faddist Conservatives, is not to be taken nearly as seriously as the loud noise warrants. For instance, the Toronto Globe published in big type on the front page, a screed from a local newspaper, which when examined was found to be void of any real argument on the question. It was merely a wild declaimer on the personal characteristics of the premier. The Review has very little sympathy with any bull-dozing, autocratic attitude. It is quite true, as Premier Whitney states, that the Legislative Committee on Assessment Reform was not interferred with, but there is no excuse for the unpleasant manner adopted by the premier in so many instances when he deals with those who oppose his ideas. The Ottawa citizen was quite right when it stated that no man in the party was bigger than it, and that in a contest between the party and Sir James James Whitney, the man must be sacrificed. But here again, the question must be considered: Is there any widespread desire for tax reform except by the faddists and agitators who use the press and every other channel to make believe they are the public. The Ottawa Citizen may have jumped the Whitney traces, but we have not traced any great stampede of Conservatives generally. The suggestion of a Toronto paper that Sir James Whitney was to become Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario because peace could not be patched up between him and the Ottawa Citizen, put the newspaper in a supremely ridiculous position. The real crux of the taxation question is in the manner of assessing, as Premier Whitney states, but at the same time we fail to see the logic of his objections to specifying in the statute that any land may be assessed less than land. As a matter of fact, assessing as is now done is very slipshod work, and ought to be made more expeditious and accurate. If in addition to the education of assessors, there were some provision allowing a differentiation in the proportion of taxation the Government would go about as far as the public wants, no matter what the single-tax theorists advocate.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In election fights a man's enemies keep him on his guard—his friends throw him off.

"Man," according to a woman writer, "contributes nothing to the home but money." Then who furnishes the power for the ash sifter?"

It was suggested to Woodrow Wilson that he choose a woman for office of Secretary of War. If there is a place in a Cabinet for a woman it should be the war portfolio, for it is in war that the women pay the piper and should be able to call the tune—Hamilton Spectator.

The superstitious fear that the present may prove an unlucky year because of the number 13. But if we go back a little in history, we find that the British empire, at least had nothing of which to complain in 1713 and 1813. In 1713, the peace of Utrecht marked the collapse of Louis XIV., and England gained possession of Gibraltar, Minorca, Newfoundland, St. Kitts and Hudson Bay. The year 1812 witnessed the disaster of Napoleon in Russia and in 1813 he was driven out of the Spanish peninsula. Usually it is the people without religion who most easily fall a prey to superstition.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any cause that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

DANCING DERVISHES.

Weird Rites and Ceremonies That Prevail In Turkey.

The religion of the Ottoman empire is typical of its people—barbarous and fantastic. The Dervishes, the regular religious order in Turkey, recognize no authority but that of Allah, and, in consequence, have been persecuted not a little by the jealous Sultans. Although the laymen who profess this faith have but to repeat one or two short prayers and wear the sacred cap for a few minutes every day, those who take the vows of poverty, abstinence from wine, and celibacy, from time to time perform strange rites in their worship of Allah.

The Whirling Dervishes, after a few preliminaries, begin to chant the Koran to weird music played on flutes and tarboukas, which seems to intoxicate them. One by one they close their eyes, stretch their arms horizontally, and begin to twist, slowly at first, but gain speed until they seem, like a sleeping top, to be motionless. All the time they never touch, although there may be a score or more whirling at the same time in the centre of the floor, never leave the spot where they stand, and never get out of time, always moving to the music. This they continue until they fall exhausted, and are covered with a cloak until they have recovered.

The ceremonies performed by the Howling Dervishes, another sect, are quite as strange, and a great deal more barbarous even than those just mentioned, but in neither case are the rites performed secretly; for, unlike other Mohammedans, the Dervishes do not object to the "Christian dog" attending their places of worship, so long as he removes his shoes before he enters the "tekieh," or temple.

Round the walls of the hall used by the Howling Dervishes hang all sorts of cruel-looking implements — sharp darts, nippers, chains, pincers, and other weapons. These the devotees use to mortify their flesh when they have worked themselves up to a state of religious ecstasy and delirium. This they do by nodding their heads backwards and forwards, keeping time to a strange, monotonous chant. Faster and faster they move their heads, higher and higher rises the music, one by one the Dervishes leave their place and begin to leap high in the air, nodding all the time. Kettledrums are beaten, the chanting becomes louder. The Dervishes form a chain, placing their hands on each other's shoulders, then step one pace backward and one forward with a terrific simultaneous lurch, emitting a long-drawn howl, like the cry of some wounded animal.

The excitement is intense, and the Dervishes, foaming at the mouth, begin to wound themselves with various implements from the walls. They handle red-hot irons, fill their mouths with burning charcoal, drive a spit right through one cheek and out the other side, and leave it there while they continue to nod and howl. They perform a sort of wild dance with a pointed dart in each hand, throwing themselves upon them, until, worn out, they roll over, covered with blood and foam.

Forel Ameer Plays Golf.

The Ameer of Afghanistan has taken up golf keenly and has had good links laid out in the neighborhood of Kabul.

The natives were much puzzled by the well-kept greens; but, recognizing the game as a royal one, they put the holes to a practical purpose. They got into the habit of placing petitions into the holes at night in the hope that they would reach the ameer when he was putting next day.

But his majesty's temper apparently was not improved by the royal game. He resented this attempt to take advantage of his recreations and ordered that all such petitions be burned unread.

BOTH SIDES IN CAMPAIGN CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Capacity Crowd Heard Anti-Local Option Speakers in Opera House.

Advocates of a Dry City Had the Crowd With Them Too.

Peterborough will make history to-day. Should the local option by-law receive a three-fifths majority, it will be the first success of the temperance party, in a city. Both the liquor and temperance people are looking towards the Electric City to-day. The result means much to both. Victory is expected by both organizations.

The struggle so far as the meetings were concerned came to a close last night. Both sides of the story have been heard and it is now up to the voter.

THREE BIG MEETINGS

The advocates of local option held a big meeting in the market hall Saturday night, in the Opera House Sunday afternoon, and in the market hall in the evening, the speakers including Messrs. Ben H. Spence and James Simpson of Toronto and Mayor Frost of Orillia. Each meeting was very largely attended and the speakers were enthusiastically received and applauded.

ANTI-LOCAL OPTION

In the Opera House last night. Rev. Thos. B. Wadleigh and Mr. James Livingston spoke against local option, before an audience that filled the theatre.

Mr. Wadleigh replied to personal charges made against him, by reading several letters. He said they would appear in the paper. Asked by one in the audience to read the date, he did so.

"They are the finest bunch of men under God Almighty's footstool," said the speaker as he mentioned the ministers. His opinion however was that the boy knew more real facts about the liquor traffic than the ministers. The ministers did not have the "signs" as did the boy. He claimed that local option was not a success and used many arguments. He was given an attentive hearing throughout.

Mr. Livingston used much of his time in telling of incidents in Grimsby and other dry towns, where he held local option to be a failure. He was interrupted several times, by persons in the audience asking questions. In every case he replied.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS MARCHED

The feature event of the day was the parade of the Sunday school scholars in the afternoon. The Salvation Army lead, and altogether the parade over streets in the centre of the city was a big success.

APPOINTMENT CRITICIZED.

Some Say Prince Louis Is More German Than English.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Voices are beginning to make themselves heard criticizing the promotion of Prince Louis of Battenberg to the responsible position of a British Sea Lord.

Nobody has anything to say against the prince personally. He is a most democratic fellow, a navigator end naval tactician of the highest ability, and be is equally popular among the officers and men of the navy. His one great irremediable fault is that he is a foreigner, and worse still a German. Blood is thicker than water, his critics say, however, and while the sea ties him to Britain, his blood ties him to Germany. Would he, in case of a war with Germany, be able to resist the call of blood? Would not his first duty be to the country that gave him birth? And is it proper that he is in possession of Great Britain's innermost naval secrets?

WANT STEEL COMPANIES.

Big Syndicate Said To Have Approached J. H. Plummer.

MONTREAL, Jan. 6.—An American syndicate, backed by a billion dollars and headed by C. H. Schwab, is after the Canadian Steel Companies.

It is known that influential capitalists have been approached in the matter and that a handsome offer has been made to J. H. Plummer for control of the Dominion Steel Corporation.

The proposed combination comprises the Bethlehem Steel Co., the Midland Steel Co., the Pennsylvania Co., the Cambria Steel Co., and Labelle Iron Works, the Dominion Steel Corporation and the Steel Company of Canada.

There is no doubt whatever about the offer to Mr. Plummer, but it is also said that he declines to recommend a sale.

Binks—I hope this Balkan war will cut those Turkish atrocities.

Jinks—Ditto here. I never could smoke the blamed things.—New York American.

EXPLORER A SUICIDE.

Capt. Johansen Who Was With Capt. Amundsen Kills Himself.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, Jan. 6.—Captain Hjalmar Johansen, a famous Arctic explorer, who had achieved much success in polar research, committed suicide here Saturday night. He was a member of Captain Roald Amundsen's recent Antarctic expedition, but was left at the base of supplies when Amundsen and four companions pushed their way to the South Pole. The fact that he was not among the leading party preyed on his mind, and he brooded over it since his return to Norway.

Captain Johansen was best known through being Nansen's sole companion during a fourteen months' journey over desert ice on the Greenland coast after leaving the Arctic steamer Fram in 1895. He was the author of "Nansen and I at 86 degrees 14 minutes."

After Nansen's return from Greenland, Johansen was a member of several expeditions, including those headed by the Prince of Monaco and William S. Bruce.

Fridtjof Nansen, speaking of Johansen's work, yesterday paid him a high tribute, characterizing him as an enterprising and brave explorer.

"A BUTTERFLY ON THE WHEEL"

"A Butterfly on the Wheel," which has been played in London and New York, will be shown to local theatregoers at the Grand theatre next Friday evening. The Messrs. Shubert and Louis Waller, the producers, are responsible for having brought "A Butterfly on the Wheel" to New York last season and to them, and of course the authors of the piece, should go the credit for having brought out the most dramatic play of the year. The story concerns itself with a foolish little wife whose husband, a member of the British Parliament, while he trusts her, devotes most of his time to politics. The wife is given full freedom which she abuses, but without evil intent. A former suitor, Roderick Collingwood, is still in love with her and as she finds much pleasure in his company they jointly arrange many secret meetings.

The husband, back in London, has been notified in an anonymous letter that Collingwood plans just such a thing. He calls up his wife over the telephone and Collingwood takes up the receiver. This sets the husband on his way to Paris where he arrives the next morning and spurns his wife. Then follows the suit for divorce. The trial, which occurs in the third act, is wonderfully depicted. In the end, however, she collapses, her little body falling over the rail of the witness stand.

Paris modists have revived the bolero.

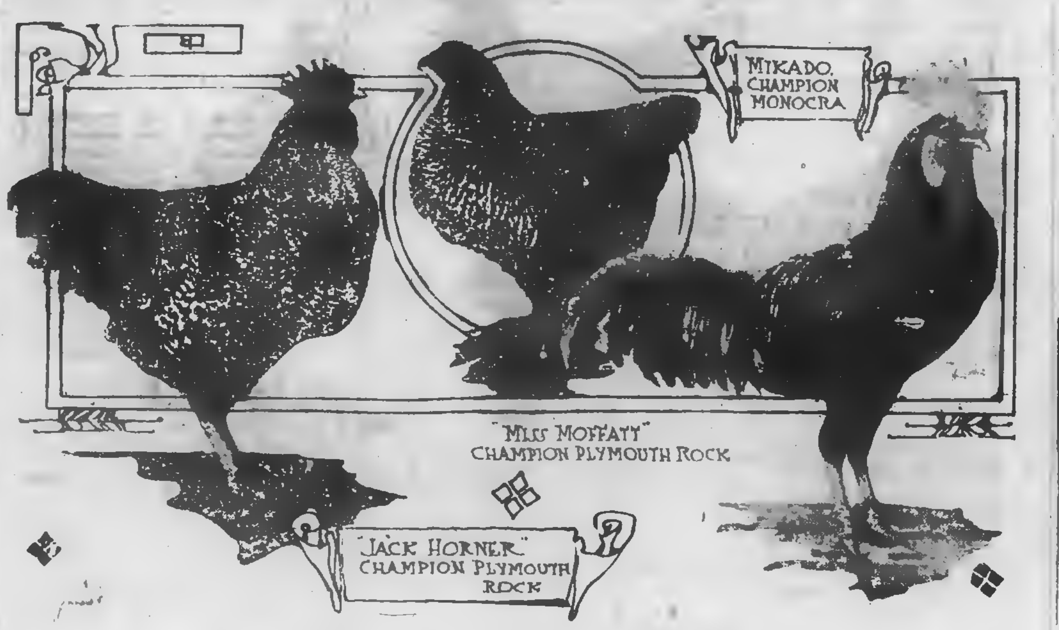
LONDON, Jan. 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—With the arrival of the Ascania at Plymouth on Tuesday, the Cunard Company inaugurated a new arrangement in connection with the Canadian service. All steamers will in future call at Plymouth on east-bound trips, proceeding thence to London direct.

It will be remembered the experiment was successfully tried in summer and resulted in saving nearly a day and a half in the journey to London.

SOME REAL ROYALTY IN FEATHER AT THE N.Y. POULTRY SHOW



MIKADO, CHAMPION MONOCRA
"MISS MOFFATT" CHAMPION PLYMOUTH ROCK
"JACK HORNER" CHAMPION PLYMOUTH ROCK

CHAMPION BIRDS OF THE YAMA FARM.

American amateur poultry fanciers as a rule are specialists in one strain of fowls, but the present tendency as the entries manifest for the show of the New York Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association in Madison Square Garden, is to follow in the footsteps of the English fanciers and to specialize in two or more varieties.

There will be 1,039 classes in the exhibition and a record entry of each breed. Special cash prizes totalling $1,000 are offered by the management for the best displays of sixty-five different varieties of poultry, pigeons and pet stock in addition to the regular cash prizes, besides prizes of cash, cups and ribbons offered by clubs and individuals.

Among the amateurs who are branching out and will be seen in new varieties is Frank Seaman, of Yama Farm, Naponack, N. Y., who has been the leading amateur in Minorcas.

Municipal Power Pays.

KINGSTON, Jan. 6.—The report of the civic utilities committee, which will be issued in a few weeks, will be most gratifying. It will show that advances over last year for the output of electricity and gas have been 27 per cent. and 12 per cent. respectively. Taking this as a basis, it will mean that in three years' time the plant will have doubled the output of electricity in 1911.

Rubbing It In.

A speaker at an insurance men's banquet told an insurance story.

"A septuagenarian," he began, "said one night at dinner to his young wife:

"'My darling, I have just insured my life in your favor for $100,000.'

"'Oh, you duck!' the beautiful girl cried, and, rising and passing round the table, she kissed her husband lightly on his bald head.

"'Darling,' he said, taking her slim white hand, 'is there anything else I can do for you?'

"'Nothing on earth,' she answered, and then, with a little silvery laugh, she added, 'Nothing in this world—nothing under heaven'."

Just Doing Nothing.

Two boys were fighting hard on the school playground, the bigger boys standing near, encouraging now one, now the other, with cries of "That's a good one!" "Good enough, Jamesy!" and "Well done!"

"Oh, yes," presently panted the lad who was getting the worst of the conflict, "you're all glib enough to say 'Well done!' and 'Go it,' but I don't see any of you pulling us apart!"

Modern Science.

A physician in a distant office, if he has the proper electrical devices, can count pulse and also hear the systole and diastole of the heart in its beating. A stethoscope can be connected with a transmitting telephone and sounds in the chest magnified and transmitted. Air rushing in the lungs can then be heard by the distant physician.

Guy Curtis, Farmer.

The name of "Guy Curtis" is embalmed in the records of Canadian intercollegiate sport with an individuality all its own. Guy Curtis quit the game about six years ago to manage a farm inherited from his father. Fifteen years had he spent at Queen's University, Kingston, registering in "Arts," session after session, without attempting to make an academic progress. His devotion to rugby and hockey finally won him a national reputation, and when about forty-five years old, he reluctantly quit the university halls and became a "retired farmer" in Eastern Ontario.

The other day he returned to Kingston to renew old acquaintances. One of his boon companions was Dr. Jock Harty, now a wealthy young citizen, acting as an official of the Canadian Locomotive Co., and a well-known amateur sportsman. Guy paid him a visit at his office and listened seriously to the doctor's description of how heavily the cares of a large business weighed upon him since the old days at college. When he had completed the tale, Curtis nodded with sympathetic gravity and observed dryly:—

$100 PER MONTH FROM THE ALERTS FOR DENISON

According to inforamtion gathered by the O.H.A. the players of the Hamilton Alerts were not short of the large greens.

The Torontos, when they first tried to secure Marchand, were told by that player that he was indebted to Dr. Carr for $500, and that he was entitled to $500 more by April and $200 more in August.

Jus.in, who accompanied Marchand from Cleveland to Hamilton, has also received $?00 and has a contract calling for $100 a month.

Franchette, the Oshawa player, has received $409 and a contract for $100 a month.

Hunt, the ex-Queen's and Kingston Frontenac centre, while being the best man of the tourists, has only received $100 and a contract for $25 a week.

Denison and Boyer have each salted away $500 of Dr. Carr's money and have contracts calling for $100 and $90 a month. Mohan has pulled down $375, and has documents to show he was to receive $75 a month. This makes the tidy sum of $2,875 advanced to the amateurs."

Canada's Black Rice.

Along the shores of Rice Lake, which separates the counties of Peterboro and Northumberland, Ontario, there is much life when the black rice harvesting time arrives. It is the signal for Indians to move out among the rice beds of the Hiawatha Reserve, the Alderville and Hiawatha Indians usually muster forces about the middle of September and repair to the mouth of the Keene river.

Peterboro county, which has been the scene of rice harvesting operations for a number of years, is practically the headquarters for the band during the harvest season, and it is in close proximity to several of the largest beds on the adjacent waters.

The sole right to gather the rice is vested in the tribes, whose Indian parentage is unquestioned, and the primitive custom is one of the few that have withstood the changes of time. A visit to the scene of action on a soft September day is worth while and is the means by which one can see the Indian as he existed in the more primeval age. The twentieth century has robbed the old-time custom of much of its charm; this is especially noticeable in the present-day garb of the redmen, but the old-time picturesqueness is still much in evidence at the annual gathering of the rice harvest.

Simplicity and primitiveness characterize the preparation of the rice for market.

An Old Chinese Banknote.

Banknotes have been current in Europe only within the last three centuries, but the Chinese have used them for over 4,000 years. The Asiatic museum at St. Petersburg has acquired a banknote issued in Peking in the year 2,800 B.C., in many respects similar to those now in use. It is of thick white paper, inscribed in blue ink with the number of the note, the name of the bank and date of issue, the cashier's signature and the value in words as well as figures. "In addition," according to The London Chronicle, "the following sage counsel is engraved around the border: 'However much you may possess, strive to be thrifty'."

Beards and Trousers In France.

In France it is permissible for women to wear male attire provided that they are bearded. This information has been given to an inquirer at the prefecture of police.

"But when was the last application of this kind made?" the official who gave the information was asked.

"Not in my lifetime," was the answer. "But the rule holds still. It was one of the regulations of the prefecture. Any woman who can grow a beard has the right to wear the culotte."

It seems that the regulation dates back to the reign of terror.

Hetty—But do you think he has any intention of marrying you?

Betty—Not the least in the world, dear. That's why I feel so sure of getting him.—Bystander.

A bursting charge, a battered wall.

A BIT DIFFERENT

Widely familiar as the Chateau Laurier has become already in its short career, the recent publication issued by the Grand Trunk dealing with its salient features, has served to win for it a host of new friends. One of these is a prominent business man from New England, whose experience of hotel conditions has been both wide and varied, who has written to one of the company's representatives as follows:

"I have just received the Chateau Laurier booklet, which you kindly sent to us as promised, and I am very glad indeed to hand it along to some friends of mine who are thinking of a trip to Canada. My wife and I went to Ottawa for no other reason at all, but to stay a few days at the new hotel, about which we had heard so much, and it may interest you to know that we were delighted with the house, the efficiency of its service and the cordiality of its management. The hotel is indeed beautiful, and I have no doubt will quickly become a Mecca for tourists who are 'looking for something "a bit different."'"

TRIAL LASTED THREE MINUTES.

Summary Dismissal of Cases In Early Victorian Days.

In these days of criminal trials long drawn out it may be not uninteresting to glance back at a time when, in England at least, complaint ran in the opposite directions. Such were the earlier years of Queen Victoria, when the old criminal code still survived in much of its archaic barbarity, and the picturesqueness of legal procedure inadequately compensated for its cruelty.

The late Lord Brampton, better known as Sir Henry Hawkins, refers in his reminiscences to the scandals of what he calls the "after-dinner" trials of that period. It was then a custom for the court to adjourn for dinner at five o'clock, at which meal there was no lack of conviviality, so that, when bench and bar returned to their duties, they were in no mood for protracted toil. In Lord Brampton's own words, "Judges and counsel were exhilarated, and business was proportionately accelerated." In confirmation of this he notes that these "after-dinner' trials "did not occupy, on an average, more than four minutes apiece," and, in illustration, cites an actual case, the paltry nature of which, contrasted with the enormity of the punishment involved, throws a lurid light on the inhumanity of the times.

The case was that of a pickpocket, in which the prisoner had, inconsiderately, pleaded "not guilty," and, therefore, had a right to be heard. We may quote Lord Brampton's account, beginning with the examination of the witness for the prosecution by the prosecuting counsel:

"I think you were walking up Ludgate Hill on Thursday, the 25th, about 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon and suddenly felt a tug at your pocket and missed your handkerchief, which the constable now produces?"

"Yes, sir."

"I suppose you have nothing to ask him?" says the judge. "Next witness." Constable stands up.

"Were you following the prosecutor on the occasion when he was robbed on Ludgate Hill, and did you see the prisoner put his hand into the prosecutor's pocket and take his handkerchief out of it?"

"Yes, sir."

Judge to prisoner: "Nothing to say, I suppose?" Then to the jury: "Gentlemen, I suppose you have no doubt? I have none."

Jury: "Guilty, my lord."

Judge to prisoner: 'Jones, we have met before. We shall not meet again for some time. Seven years' transportation. Next case."

Time: Two minutes, 53 seconds. As this seems to be a "record," it is only fair to add that the judge's name was Muirhouse. Verily "nous avons change tout cela."

Fifteen thousand miles of motion picture films were exported from the United States in the year ending with June, and nearly 3,000 miles were imported.

RECORD VOTE IS BEING POLLED

When the polls close at five o'clock to-night, it is expected that one of the largest votes ever piled up will be reported from all of the polling divisions. This prediction is based upon the reports which were received at various times throughout the day from returning officers. Enthusiasm was strikingly in evidence all day, and the more central voting centres were always busy. Just how the voting was going, of course was not ascertainable.

The result of the local option contest will be awaited with the most intense interest. Both parties are working hard and they are exerting themselves specially in bringing out the vote. The question is undoubtedly one that notwithstanding whatever the result is, may be quite safely prophesied to leave a very slim margin of votes either way.

Considerable comment was aroused throughout the day by the number of strangers in the city.

The headquarters of the local option committee which is located at the Y.M.C.A. building reported at noon to-day an excellent vote. The morning operations were ordinary and they expected the biggest rush to the polls after the noon hour. At twelve p.m., eighty-six had been registered at J. R. Lillico's store, and seventy-five at N. Routley's, in the West ard.

LADIES FED THE WORKERS.

The campaign workers had the wants of the inner man catered to by a capable staff of ladies at George Street Methodist Church. Nearly every available vehicle has been in operation during the day rushing the voters to the polls, and when the clock strikes five the result of the count will be awaited with the greatest eagerness.

The results will be promptly bulletined at the Review office, as soon as received.

PROTECTION AT CROSSINGS

King Street Gates in Charge of "Tom" Christie

The new G.T.R. gates on King street crossings are in operation to-day. Gates at Sherbrooke street crossing will be completed later on. Mr. Tom Christie, of Millbrook, will handle the King street gates, and Mr. Jack Horner, who is now at the Reid street crossing, will have charge of those on Sherbrooke street. These men will operate the gates in the day time, and others will be appointed for night duty.

CANON DAVIDSON URGES PAYMENT OF ACCOUNTS

It is One of the Duties of the New Year He Says.

Before his sermon at St. John's yesterday evening Canon Davidson urged, as he had done in former years, that among the duties which belong to the beginning of the year was that of paying our accounts and straightening our financial obligations. The action of each individual was most important in this respect, owing to common inter-dependence. Procrastination and carelessness were productive of many embarrassments and anxieties which would otherwise be avoided. The business welfare of the community depended largely on honesty and promptness in small transactions. The speaker expressed warm sympathy for those who straightened circumstances would not allow them to fully perform their financial duties and said that great allowance should be made but such persons might, at least face the situation as far as possible and reduce their expenditures to allow them to meet obligations. Members of churches should particularly realize their responsibilities in this respect and give a healthy lead to public opinion in particular.

FIVE YEAR OLD BOY DIED AFTER DRINKING PORTER

Was Given Him By Father Who Was Intoxicated

Toronto, Jan. 6.—Wilfred Peters, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Peters, who live in the rear of 115 Dundas street, died in his grandmother's arms on Saturday while the latter was searching for a doctor. The remains were taken to the Morgue, where an inquest will be opened to-night. William Peters, the step-father, was arrested Saturday night on a charge of intoxication and will be detained pending the result of the inquiry.

According to the police, William Peters is alleged to have given the boy a glass of porter while at the dinner table. The child, it is said, almost emptied the glass. On Friday evening the lad complained of suffering from pains in the stomach. His mother gave him a tonic, which offered some relief.

At noon Saturday the boy was seized with a violent attack of convulsions. His grandmother became frantic. Picking up the child she rushed to the street and called at the offices of several doctors, only to find that they were all out. The boy expired a few minutes after she left the house, but she did not discover this until a man stopped her and asked her if he could help her.

OBITUARY

The Late Mrs. Hammond

Rosabel McGregor, wife of Mr. J. J. Hammond, of Atwood, Ont., passed away Friday night at the home of her brother, Mr. Alex. McGregor, Smith, aged 39 years.

The late Mrs. Hammond was born in Smith, where she lived until the time of her marriage, 10 years ago, when she moved to Atwood. She had been ill for some time and was endeavoring to recuperate at the home of her brother in Smith. She is survived by two sons, one brother, Alex., of Smith, and a sister, Mrs. Dr. Kidd, of Atwood.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery.

The Late Mrs. McGillen

Peter McGillen passed away last night at the home of his son, Mr. Peter McGillen, 573 Rogers street, at the age of 80 years.

The late Mr. McGillen lived most of his long and useful life in the township of Percy and came to spend his remaining years with his son in the East City. He is survived by his sons, Patrick, of Saginaw, Mich.; Peter, of East City, and John Philip, of Percy Township; Thomas, of Medicine Hat; Frank, James and Charles, of the North-West. His daughters are Mrs. Patrick Flynn, of Seymour, Ont.; Mrs. Patrick Doherty, of Asphodel; Mrs. Con. Heffernan, of East City, and Miss Clara, of Seymour.

WEDDING BELLS

CAMPBELL—BOTHWELL.

Mr. James Corbett Campbell, formerly of Peterborough, and now of Bailieboro, and Miss Bertha Amelia Bothwell, of Springville, were united in marriage on New Year's Day, by the Rev. J. N. Clarry, at St. James' Methodist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will reside in Bailieboro.

MILBURN—EDWARDS.

The following from the Calgary Herald, refers to an old Peterborough boy, who is a son of Mr. Jos. Milburn of Smith.:

A quiet, but pretty house wedding took place on the afternoon of Christmas day at 4 o'clock, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Edwards, 1120 Seventh avenue, west, when their daughter, Frances Chalmers, became the wife of Dr. Henry Hall Milburn, of Vancouver. The only attendant was the ring bearer, Master Harry Gibson, son of Dr. and Mrs. Gibson, of Calgary, and a nephew of the bride. The wedding march was played by Miss Harriet Redman. Only the intimate friends of the bride and groom were present.

The bride's gown was of white charmeuse with real val lace overdress and she wore a bridal veil with orange blossoms in Juliet cap effect, and carried white roses and lilies of the valley with fern. The house was prettily decorated with palms and roses.

Dr. and Mrs. Milburn went west on the evening train, the bride wearing a very becoming travelling dress of blue broadcloth trimmed with black mirror velvet and hat of purple velour with ostrich mount and cerise tips. Mrs. Milburn is widely known as one of the sweet singers of Calgary, having been soprano soloist of Wesley Methodist church for some time and prior to that, of Central Methodist church; the good wishes of her many friends here will accompany her to her new home.

Waists that fasten in the front are coming to the front in the fashion world.

To understand the art of good dressing does not show vanity, but wisdom.

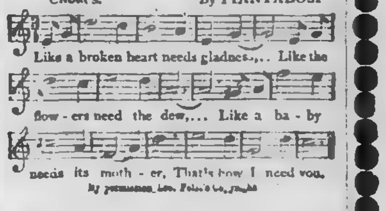
THIS LOVE SONG BROUGHT $10,000

Fancy Price Paid for Copyright of "That's How I Need You."

Fancy prices for the copyrights of popular music reached a climax yesterday when a music man, Leo Feist paid the fantastic figure of $10,000 for the copyright of a song scarcely dry from the press, called "That's How I need You." And yet Feist claims he will make a fortune on it at only a dime per copy, wholesale. Here is a portion of the chorus clipped from a copy just received:

That's How I Need You

Chorus. By PIANTADOSI



Like a broken heart needs gladness,... Like the flow - ers need the dew,... Like a ba - by needs its moth - er, That's how I need you.

The song is no better than a thousand others, except that it contains a number of odd harmonies aimed evidently to develop women's voices. The song bids fair to become a fad in Peterborough soon.

THEATRICAL

Strong in both ethics and interpretation, the four-act comedy drama by W. A. Tremayne "A Cup of Life" with Miss Blossom Baird taking the title role, was presented Saturday afternoon and evening at the Grand Opera house. The drama abounded with human interest and its reception at both performances was extremely gratifying. The company is not large, but every member is a skilled player. The extreme versatility of Miss Baird was also demonstrated in two fifteen minute curtain raisers in which she portrays characters taken from the underworld. Both were extremely well extremely well presented previous to the main performance, one at the matinee and the other at the evening show.

PEOPLE VOTE TO GO INTO THE POWER BUSINESS AND REAP THE BENEFITS

Decisive Victory for the Hydro Electric, the Majority Being 1500---Local Option 134 Short of the Three Fifths Majority---Hope and Incinerator By-laws Approved---Wm. Langford and Malcolm McIntyre Elected as Aldermen---Vincent Eastwood, J. J. Turner Jr., Dr. Morrison, and B. F. Ackerman for Board of Education.

It was easy sailing for the Hydro-Electric By-law in the voting of yesterday, an overwhelming decision being registered in favor of dealing with the Hydro-Electric Commission, in the important undertaking of a supply of power for Peterborough.

The majority was 1536 and in no sub-division was there what might be termed hostility. The vote showed indisputably that the users of electricity have awakened to the fact that with development of power at their own doors, the prices should be lower than is the case.

LOCAL OPTION

The result of the local option vote was a hard blow to the temperance party, who were confident earlier in the day, that the bars would be voted out. They were, however, 134 votes behind the three-fifths majority. The by-law was defeated by straight majorities in five polling sub-divisions and tied in one.

TWO MONEY BY-LAWS

There was practically no opposition to the Henry Hope & Sons by-law, by which the Council is empowered to aid the company in locating in Peterborough. Opposition to the incinerator was pronounced but at that every polling subdivision gave a handsome majority.

ALDERMANIC CONTEST

The two north ward candidates had a merry contest. Mr. W. Langford, jr., had a majority over Mr. R. G. Kidd in two sub-divisions. At Braund's, Hooper's and Lees, Mr. Kidd was a winner. The majority for Mr. Langford was 7.

Ald. Morgan was defeated in the east ward by Mr. Malcolm Mc-Intyre who had a majority of 35. It will be noted in the summary that the Hydro by-law encountered its strongest opposition in the East Ward despite the fact of Ald. Morgan's efforts to support it in the Council. The local option vote was a tie.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Three of the four members of the 1912 Board of Education, Messrs. Vincent Eastwood, B. F. Ackerman, and Dr. Morrison were returned. The defeat of Mr. Fair was somewhat of a surprise. Mr. Fair has served over 20 years as a school trustee. Mr. J. J. Turner, jr., a new member of the Board polled a very large vote. Mr. R. Ruddy, K. C., made a good showing in his first contest.

NEW REEVES AND COUNCILS

IN ENNISMORE.

In the closest contest in years Mr. D. Killen was elected reeve of Ennismore with a majority of 13 over Mr. J. Young. Con O'Reilly, Daniel Holland and Jas. Guiry were elected Councillors. The other candidate, Mr. John Geary, was only 5 votes behind the fourth candidate elected.

Keene, Jan. 7.—The only contest for Otonabee was the reeveship in which Mr. Anderson was victorious over Major Johnston, his majority being 17.

SMITH.

J. H. Garbutt and Fred McKee were elected reeve and deputy reeve, respectively, by acclamation. Messrs. Fred Cann, Wm. Davis and Robert Telford were returned to the Council. The voting stood: Cann 232, Davis 203, Telford 242, McKibbon 160.

AT LAKEFIELD.

Lakefield, Jan. 7.—In the elections here, Mr. Fitzgerald was returned as reeve, and Messrs. Spence, Midill, Payne and Richardson to the Council.

AT DOURO.

Reeve B Leahy was re-elected by a majority of 73, his opponent being Mr. Frank Leahy. Councillors elected were M. D. Kennedy, A. Coughlin, M. Coughlin and George Hamilton. Other candidates were Jas. Condin, T. Jory and Robert Cox.

Omemee, Jan. 7.—R. J. Mulligan had a majority of 23 over J. S. Beatty for the Reeveship. Councillors elected were Messrs. Lamb, Sanderson, Magee and Dancy.

The Council of Emily was elected by acclamation as follows;—Reeve, Isaac Fee; Councillors Carew, Carroll, Herlihey and Wilson.

LARGER PLACES RETAIN THE BAR, BUT SMALLER PLACES VOTE AGAINST

Twenty-four go Dry and Fails in Twenty-three Places—Sixty four Bars are Affected—Repeal in Owen Sound Fails and Town Remains Dry—Lindsay and Fenelon Defeat the By-law.

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—The local option campaign in Ontario yesterday was a bitter one and resulted in a victory for abolition of licenses in 24 municipalities in the province. Sixty-four licenses must go as a result. In 23 contests the bylaws failed to carry by the required three-fifths majority and the places will therefore stay "wet." In 11 places there was a straight majority against the bylaw. In nineteen cases efforts to repeal local prohibition failed and the "dry" system remains in force another year. In only one place—Acton—did the effort to repeal the bylaw succeed.

The Hamilton bylaws to reduce tavern licenses from 57 to 30 and shop licenses by five were defeated by large majorities.

At Cornwall a bylaw to increase liquor licenses from $400 to $600 per annum was carried by a majority of 233. In Cornwall township there was a small majority to increase licenses from $120 to $350.

Keenest interest centred around the Galt fight, where the bylaw was upheld by a small majority after a strenuous battle. Owen Sound, the classical battlefield of the liquor and prohibition forces, upheld the "dry" town propaganda by an increased plurality. Ingersoll swung into the "dry belt" with a majority over three-fifths of 37, but Sarnia and Peterboro refused while St. Thomas was unwilling to reduce her licenses. Seventeen places remain to be heard from.

The net result was as follows:

Carried for local option	24
Failed to get three-fifths	23
Defeated by majority	11
Repeals failed	19
Repeal succeeded	1
To be heard from	4

There are 828 municipalities in Ontario, of which 463 are now dry.

GENERAL DRURY DEAD.

Well-Known Military Man Passes at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—The death took place here yesterday morning of Brigadier-General Charles W. Drury, C.B., A.D.C., a well-known Maritime Province soldier, the officer commanding the sixth division, and a Fenian Raid and South African veteran.

Brigadier-General Drury was on a visit to friends here.

The late brigadier was the son of W. C. Drury, Newlands, and St. John, N.B., was born in 1856, and was educated at St. John. He became a lieutenant of the local militia in 1874, captain in 1881, major in 1889, lieutenant-colonel in 1890, colonel in 1901, and commandant of the R.S.A., Kingston, in 1893.

Brantford Rioter Fined.

BRANTFORD, July 7.—Charles Walley, charged with participating in the recent riot against the police here, pleaded guilty before Judge Hardy yesterday and was fined $50, with the option of two months. He admitted being drunk and said he had secured his liquor in Paris.

The judge characterized the action of the rioters on the night in question as reprehensible and stated his belief that Walley had been unfortunately led with the crowd of law-breakers and that he was not a ringleader. It was his release for which the crowd battered the police station to pieces.

Some seven others alleged to have taken part in the riot are out on $2,000 bail.

Johnson Case Adjourned.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Eight indictments charging Jack Johnson with alleged violations of the Mann white slave act, were called before Federal Judge Carpenter yesterday for disposition of demurrers filed by the negro's attorney, but the hearing of arguments was indefinitely deferred, because the constitutionality of the act is pending before the Supreme Court of the United States.

"China Group" In London.

LONDON. Jan. 7.—A "China group" is to be formed in London consisting of members of Parliament, writers, scientists and other distinguished people, whose object will be to watch and conserve the interests of the new Republic of China. The foundation of the group was decided on at a meeting of members of the House of Commons last evening.

HYDRO CONTINUES IN POPULARITY

By-laws Carry in Every Contest Yet Heard From.

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—That the Hydro-electric power is popular in Ontario was forcibly demonstrated yesterday. In every municipality heard from up till an early hour this morning, in which Hydro-electric bylaws were voted on, they were carried by large majorities.

The following is the list of municipalities in which the Hydro-electric bylaw was voted on, and the results of the polling:

Beaverton—Carried 168 to 3.
Markham—Carried 149 to 8.
Peterboro—Carried 1,500 majority.
Waterboro—Carried 141 to 5.
Stouffville—Carried 187 to 25.
Goderich—Carried, large majority.
Uxbridge—Carried 176 to 5.
Elmira—Carried, large majority.
Sarnia—Carried 1,395 to 285.
Stayner—Carried.
North Bay—Carried, large majority.

Railways Score Win.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 7.—Railroads and express companies yesterday won a revolutionary decision in the Supreme Court, when it was held that contracts which limited to small sums their liability for loss of shipments were not subject to state laws, but to interstate laws.

It was further held that contracts limiting liability to a small sum, in return for a low rate, were not in violation of the interstate commerce laws, particularly the Carmack amendment.

Scores upon scores of such contracts have been held void under state laws.

Rose To Testify Again.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—"Bald Jack" Rose, whose testimony helped send Police Lieut. Becker to the Sing Sing deathhouse, may be a witness before the extraordinary grand jury, which is investigating charges of police graft here. The former gambler came from Philadelphia yesterday and conferred with District Attorney Whitman. Mr. Whitman did not deny that Rose might testify before the grand jury.

POWERS MAY STEP IN AND FORCE TURKEY TO YIELD

Ottoman Government is However Not in a Position to Continue the War.

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Jan. 7— Ambassadors of the powers held a long conference at the Foreign Office yesterday. It is felt in diplomatic circles that, in the end, they will force Turkey to accept conditions that make for peace. Papers this morning call on the powers to prevent a resumption of war. The Standard voices the consensus of the British press opinion in saying; "we look forward to united action by the Powers which will have an effect of removing the present block and affording the Ottoman government the necessary excuse for yielding to the inevitable."

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The first stage of the peace negotiations, which is regarded by diplomatists largely as one of pretence on Turkey's part to avoid the appearance of yielding to the demands of the allies without pressure from the powers, is over now. It is expected that the second stage will soon begin, with the powers acting behind the scenes and pulling the strings which will compel Turkey to concede the bulk of the allies' demands.

Without money, her army inadequate and demoralized, her statesmen realize that Turkey is in no condition to resume hostilities with the slightest chance of success.

At yesterday's sitting of the conference Turkey renounced in favor of the allies her rights in the island of Crete, and promised further rectification of the Thracean frontier, but insisted upon the retention of Adrianople. The allies declare that this was not satisfactory, and suspended the conference.

That does not mean a rupture of the negotiations. The conference may be resumed either by Turkey giving notification that she has fresh proposals to submit, or by the allies, on the ground that they have communications to make to the Turks. It is generally expected that the work of the conference will be taken up again at the end of the week, when the festivities in connection with the Orthodox Christmas are ended.

Some people seem to have made a life-long study of that woe-begone expression.

POLICE HELD BACK STRIKERS.

Garment Workers Tried To Attack Women Filling Their Places.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—In their efforts to intercept 350 young women employed in the wholesale clothing manufacturing concern of J. L. Taylor & Co., as they were leaving work last evening, 500 striking garment workers, the majority of them women, attacked the police on guard in front of the building. Automobiles were waiting to take the young women to their homes, and the police had formed a cordon on either side of the doorway across the sidewalk to the curb. The police used their clubs on the outstretched arms of the strikers, who reached under their arms to seize the coats and dresses of the girls. The automobiles were quickly filled and rushed away.

McNamara To Be Extradited.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 7.—The Supreme Court yesterday declined to interfere with the removal by extradition of John McNamara, from New York to New Westminster, B.C., to answer to a charge of the larceny of an automobile.

An attempt was first made to extradite McNamara on a charge of stealing the money.

CZAREVITCH NOW AT NICE

PARIS, Jan. 7.—The Nice correspondents of the Paris morning papers insist, in spite of all denials, that the Russian crown prince is now at a Cap Martin hotel, the grounds of which are swarming with detectives. The hotel employes have been instructed to deny the presence there of Crown Prince Alexis.

M. Orssati, head of the special police at Nice, who is now in Paris, has been summoned by telegraph to return immediately.

THE BEST YEAR FOR ADVOCATES OF LOCAL OPTION

Statement Made by Secretary of Dominion Alliance

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Jan. 7— Local Option results at one o'clock stand as follows: an attempt was made to put the Act in operation in 78 places. Twenty of these are still to be heard from. In the remaining 58, the temperance people have carried the day in 24 and have failed in 21 others through the operation of the three-fifths clause. In ten, the liquor people have obtained a clear majority. In 22 places repeal was attempted and in 21 of these the act was sustained. "The result viewed from the standpoint of the Dominion Alliance," said secretary B. H. Spence, "can only be described as magnificent; it is the best year we ever had."

TO HELP FARMERS.

Alberta Will Guarantee Bonds of Big Elevator Company.

EDMONTON, Alta., Jan. 7.—In order that more perfect protection may be made for the handling of the farmers' grain in this province, the Government of Alberta will guarantee the bonds of the Grain Growers' Grain Co., whose headquarters are in Winnipeg, to the extent of at least one million dollars.

The company, in return, will build 60 elevators in the province during the year and will be in condition to handle a large proportion of the crop of this year.

At the present time the company is doing a large business in Manitoba and the extension of the operations of the company to Alberta will make it one of the large firms of the continent.

The Government of Alberta has had under consideration for some months the problem of dealing with the produce of the farm so as to secure for the producer a larger return for his labor. The two projects before the members of the Government were the co-operative plan of Saskatchewan and the scheme which has been worked out by the farmers of Manitoba under adverse conditions.

MOTHER IS DEAD

Canadian Press Despatch.

Wolseley, Sask., Jan. 7— An asphyxiation tragedy occurred at the home of Thomas Taylor, twelve miles south of here last night. Mrs. Taylor was found dead and Mr. Taylor and two sons and a servant, named Mrs. Fox, unconscious. Later Mrs. Fox was pronounced out of danger. Mr. Taylor and the eldest boy rallied somewhat but the youngest boy has not regained consciousness.

Castro Fighting Hard.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. Cipriano Castro took personal charge yesterday of his fight against deportation. He called a lawyer to his room where he is detained at Ellis Island, and prepared a new petition asking for a superceding writ of habeas corpus. Later in the day this writ was granted by Judge Holt in the federal district court.

FIRST PHOTOGRAPH TO SHOW HOW ENGLAND PAID HONOR TO MR. WHITELAW REID AT HIS FUNERAL IN LONDON

FUNERAL CORTEGE OF MR. WHITELAW REID IN LONDON

Herewith is presented a photograph showing the dual honors paid to Mr. Whitelaw Reid in London. The coffin, resting on an English gun carriage and escorted by England's bravest troops, was borne from Dorchester House to Victoria station, many thousands of persons with bared heads lining the route. As the procession started from Dorchester House on its way to Victoria station it was led by a squadron of the Horse Guards, in bright breastplates, helmets with long plumes and great scarlet cloaks enveloping horse and man. The band of the Scots Guards followed and behind them came the pipers of the regiment, who alternated with the other musicians in playing dirges. Then came the coffin, which was followed by a battalion of Scots Guards wearing their bearskin headdresses and carrying their rifles reversed. At the same time a battery of horse artillery stationed on the parade ground in St. James' Park fired a salute of nineteen guns. The route of the procession was kept clear by lines of mounted police.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST
BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Company.

"The Bird Woman," answered the cashier. "Have you some for sale?"

"I have some, but I do not know if they are what she would want."

"Well, you had better see her," said the cashier. "Do you know where she lives?"

"Yes," said Elnora. "Would you tell me the time?"

"Twenty-one after 8," was the answer.

She had nine minutes to reach the auditorium or be late. Should she go to school or to the Bird Woman? Several girls passed her walking swiftly and she remembered their faces. They were hurrying to school. Elnora caught the infection. She would see the Bird Woman at noon. Algebra came first and that professor was kind. Perhaps she could slip to the superintendent and ask him for a book for the next lesson.

As she went down the long hall she noticed the professor of mathematics standing in the door of his recitation room. When she came up to him he smiled and spoke to her.

"I have been watching for you," he said, and Elnora stopped, bewildered.

"For me?" she questioned.

"Yes," said Professor Henley. "Step inside."

Elnora followed him into the room, and he swung the door behind them.

"At teachers' meeting last evening one of the professors mentioned that a pupil had betrayed in class that she had expected her books to be furnished by the city. I thought possibly it was you. Was it?"

"Yes," breathed Elnora.

"That being the case," said Professor Henley, "it just occurred to me as you had expected that you might require a little time to secure them, until you are too fine a mathematician to fall behind for want of supplies. So I telephoned one of our sophomores to bring her last year's books this morning. I am sorry to say they are somewhat abused, but the text is all here. You can have them for $2 and pay when you get ready. Would you care to take them?"

Elnora sat suddenly, because she could not stand another instant. She reached both hands for the books and said never a word. The professor was silent also.

At last Elnora arose, hugging those books to her heart as a mother grasps a lost baby.

"One thing more," said the professor. "You can pay your tuition quarterly. You need not bother about the first installment this month. Any time in October will do."

So Elnora entered the auditorium a second time. Her face was like the brightest dawn that ever broke over the Limberlost. No matter about the lumbering shoes and skimpy dress just now—no matter about anything, she had the books. She could take them home. In her garret she could commit them to memory if need be. She could show that clothes were not all. If the Bird Woman did not want any of the many different kinds of specimens she had collected she was quite sure now she could sell ferns, nuts and a great many things. Then, too, some one moved over this morning, and several girls smiled and bowed. Elnora forgot everything save her books and that she was where she could use them intelligently—everything except one little thing away back in her head. Her mother had known about the books and the tuition and had not told her when she agreed to her coming.

CHAPTER IV.

Wherein Elnora Meets the Bird Woman and the Sirfone Are Disappointed.

AT noon Elnora took her little parcel of lunch and started to the home of the Bird Woman. She must know about the specimens first, and then she would go out to the suburbs somewhere and eat a few bites. She dropped the heavy iron knocker on the door of the big red log cabin, and her heart thumped at the resounding stroke.

"Is the Bird Woman at home?" she asked of the maid.

"She is at lunch," was the answer.

"Please ask her if she will see a girl from the Limberlost about some moths?" inquired Elnora.

"I never need ask if it's moths," laughed the girl. "Orders are to bring any one with specimens right in. Come this way."

Elnora followed down the hall and entered a long room with high paneled wainscoting, old English fireplace with an overmantel and closets of peculiar china filling the corners. At a bare table of oak, yellow as gold, sat a woman Elnora often had watched and followed covertly around the Limberlost. The Bird Woman was holding out a hand of welcome.

"I heard!" she laughed. "A little pasteboard box or just the bare word 'specimen' passes you at my door. If it is moths I hope you have hundreds. I've been very busy all summer and unable to collect, and I need so many. Sit down and lunch with me while we talk it over. From the Limberlost, did you say?"

"I live near the swamp," replied Elnora. "Since it's so cleared I dare go around the edge in daytime, though we are still afraid at night."

"What have you collected?" asked the Bird Woman as she helped Elnora to luncheon.

"I am afraid I am bothering you for nothing and imposing on you," Elnora said. "That 'collected' frightens me. I've only gathered. I always loved everything outdoors, and so I made friends and playmates of them. When I learned that the moths die so soon, I saved them especially, because there seemed no wickedness in it."

"I have thought the same thing," said the Bird Woman encouragingly. Then because the girl could not eat until she learned about the moths the Bird Woman asked Elnora if she knew what kinds she had.

"Not all of them," answered Elnora. "Before Mr. Duncan moved away he often saw me near the edge of the swamp, and he showed me the box he had fixed for Freckles and gave me the key. There were some books and things, so from that time on I studied and tried to take moths right, but I am afraid they are not what you want."

"Are they the big ones that fly mostly June nights?" asked the Bird Woman.

"Yes," said Elnora. "Great gray ones with reddish markings, pale blue, green, yellow with lavender and red and yellow."

"What do you mean by 'red and yellow?'" asked the Bird Woman so quickly that the girl almost jumped.

"Not exactly red," explained Elnora, with tremulous voice. "A reddish, yellowish brown, with canary colored spots and gray lines on their wings."

"How many of them?" It was the same quick question.

"Well, I had over 200 eggs," said Elnora, "but some of them didn't hatch, and some of the caterpillars died, but there must be at least a hundred perfect ones."

"Perfect! How, perfect?" cried the Bird Woman.

"I mean whole wings, no down gone and all their legs and antennae," faltered Elnora.

"Young woman, that's the rarest moth in America," said the Bird Woman solemnly. "If you have 100 of them they are worth $100, according to my list. I can use all that are whole."

"What if they are not pinned right?" quavered Elnora.

"If they are perfect that does not make the slightest difference. I know how to soften them so that I can put them into any shape I choose. Where are they? When may I see them?"

"They are in Freckles' old case in the Limberlost," said Elnora. "I could not carry many for fear of breaking them, but I could bring a few after school."

"You come here at 4," said the Bird Woman, "and we will drive out with some specimen boxes and a price list and see what you have to sell."

"Oh, I do need the money!" said Elnora.

"Do you live in that beautiful cabin at the northwest end of the swamp?" asked the Bird Woman.

"Yes," said Elnora.

"I remember the place and a story about it now. You entered the high school yesterday?"

"Yes."

"It was pretty bad?"

"Pretty bad," echoed Elnora.

The Bird Woman laughed.

"You can't tell me anything about that," she said. "I once entered a city school straight from the country. My dress was brown calico and my shoes were quite heavy. What is your name, my girl?"

"Elnora Comstock," answered Elnora. "Yesterday on the board it changed to Cornstock, and for a minute I thought I'd die, but I can laugh over that already."

The Bird Woman arose and kissed her. "Finish your lunch," she said, "and I will get my price lists and take down a memorandum of what you think you have, so I will know how many boxes to prepare. Never mind the calico dress and the coarse shoes. Dig into the books, and before long you will hear yesterday's tormentors boasting that they were once classmates of yours!"

JUST GLADNESS.

OH, gladness is a splendid thing
  For bards to write about
When they are very sorely pressed
  And subjects have run out!
Their souls may not be soaked in joy
  To match the gentle strain,
And they may have a grouch so large
  That it would block a train.

But still they write of cheerfulness
  As though it were a part
Of their existence and it gushed
  In torrents from their heart.
They put aside their aching tooth,
  The bill they cannot pay,
The rent that's always overdue,
  And then they work away.

Great gobs of gladness is their theme,
  The first that comes to hand.
They tell the people they should use
  This one and only brand,
But do they use a bit themselves—
  I mean outside their rime—
With which to make a brighter world?
  I fear they haven't time.

O gladsome gladness, you're the goods
  For use in daily life,
Far better than the grim old grouch
  Which leads to care and strife!
And if the poet does not feel
  The impulse of his song
You'll find that the advice is good Enough to take along!

The Growing West.

"It takes a good man to be a cowboy now," said One Eyed Jake, cutting off a chunk of plug tobacco as large as a paving brick and ramming it into one corner of his mouth, reserving the other corner for conversation.

"Have to know all about how to ride a pony, I suppose," said the unsophisticated newcomer, who wished to leave the impression that he knew all about it.

"Ride a pony, nothing. He doesn't have to know how to curry one. If he can't fix anything about an automobile with his bare hands he might as well look for another job."

Buttons Barred.

"Our collection today, my dear brethren," said the rector, "is for the clothing fund. At the same time, may I earnestly impress upon you that, though the collection is for the clothing fund, it is not necessary to contribute buttons?"

DEVIL'S ASSISTANTS.

Bishop Perrin Thus Characterizes Some British Immigrants.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—"Nobody would do the devil's work in Canada better than a certain class of people who are being sent to the Dominion from Great Britain," said Bishop Parrin, formerly of Canada, addressing the United Kingdom Band of Hope Union Saturday.

Men were being sent there who had been miserable failures at home, and who in 99 cases out of 100 went from bad to worse, but temperance reformers had cause to be thankful for many things.

"In Canada you'll never see a woman in a public house," he said. "Such a thing as a barmaid wouldn't be tolerated in this country. Reformers had to face the grocers' license, but a great movement on foot there for local option might result in a law which the homeland would do well to emulate.

"In England," he concluded, "magistrates looked after the publicans, and what was now wanted was that people should look after the magistrates."

An Eccentric Chemist.

The Cavendish House estate, Clapham, takes its name from the home of the eccentric chemist, the Hon. Henry Cavendish, whose famous experiment for the determination of the earth's density, made in his Clapham garden, gained him the title of "the man who weighed the earth." Cavendish, who left over a million sterling on his death, in 1810, lived all alone at Cavendish House, carrying his craze for solitude to such an extent that, as Lord Brougham tells us, he refused to let himself be seen even by his servants and "used to order his dinner daily by a note left on the hall table, whence the housekeeper might take it."—London Mail.

A Historian's Joke.

Macaulay is not usually regarded as a humorous writer, but in his "History of England" he perpetrates the following in relating the death of Charles II.: "Several of the prescriptions have been preserved. One of them is signed by fourteen doctors. He recovered his senses, but he was evidently in a situation of extreme danger."

An Idea.

The word idea formerly meant a completed performance.

"We are only little ones, but we know Zam-Buk eased our pain and cured our sores. Perhaps it would cure you, too, if you tried it?"

Isn't this sound advice from "babes and sucklings?" Take it! The speakers are the children of Mrs. L. Webster, of Seymour St., Montreal, and the mother adds weight to their appeal. She says: "My little girl contracted scalp disease at school. Bad gatherings formed all over her head, and not only caused the child acute pain but made her very ill. The sores discharged, and occurring on the scalp we feared she would lose all her hair. She was in a pitiable plight when we tried Zam-Buk, but a few days' treatment with this balm gave her ease. Then the sores began to heal, and we continued the Zam-Buk treatment. In a short time she was quite healed.

"My little boy sustained a serious scald on the neck. It set up a bad sore, and quite a few things we tried failed to heal it or give him ease. Once more we turned to Zam-Buk, and we were not disappointed. It acted like a charm in drawing away the pain, and soon healed the wound."

Zam-Buk is "something different" in the way of balms. It contains powerful healing herbal essences, which, as soon as applied to skin diseases, kill off the germs and end the painful smarting. Other essences contained there so stimulate the cells that new healthy tissue is speedily formed. Eczema, itch, ulcers, cold sores, abscesses, festering sores, blood poisoning, chronic wounds, cold cracks, etc., are healed and cured in this way. Use it for all skin injuries and diseases. It is also of great service for piles. All druggists and stores at 50 cents box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

It Led to Complications and a Fiasco

By JULIA D. EDMONDS

The autumn season when the tourist hegira is southerly was opening, and the resorts of the border states were well stocked with guests. The rocking chair brigade—as those ladies who daily occupy the porch of the Vieudelean hotel, each and all plying some kind of needle as an accompaniment to their melodious gossiping voices—was in session. Two ladies sitting somewhat apart from the rest were engaged in earnest conversation in a low tone.

"I sympathize with you, Mrs. Harper," said the one, "but I don't see how I can help you. My son is actively engaged in business and can't be away from it at this season more than a few days at a time. Could he be here with us, say, for a fortnight I would be glad to lend him to you for the purpose of drawing your daughter's attention from this young Ruggles, who you fear will win her. There is another course I will suggest. A young man has just arrived who has entered his name on the hotel register as Edward Caton. Being the only young fellow of prepossessing appearance (Ruggles excepted) in the hotel, he will soon be besieged by the girls. If you like I will make his acquaintance, introduce him to your daughter (telling him she is the belle of the place), and she will naturally be interested in taking him away from the others. This will serve to divert her mind from Ruggles and make a breach between them. But why do you object to Ruggles? He is said to have an income of $5,000."

"My dear Mrs. Crawford, what would $5,000 a year be for Gwen?"

"What you wish I presume is simply to break off her affair with Ruggles, that she may be free to marry a fortune."

"Precisely. If you can accomplish this break by introducing any one—no matter who he is—I will consider myself under a lasting obligation to you."

The same evening the introduction was accomplished. Gwendolen Harper and Edward Caton were introduced, and before the guests left the dancing hall in the evening Mrs. Crawford said to Mrs. Harper:

"Did you ever see such a remarkable case of love at first sight?"

All the parties to this scheme were pleased except Sam Ruggles, who went off to the far end of the veranda and scowled and smoked and smoked and scowled, keeping by himself where he could not see his rival's success lest he should make a scene.

But on the third day after the break had been made effective, when Mr. Ruggles was reading a northern newspaper, he saw something that thrilled him. It was an advertisement of Mrs. Edward L. Caton for information concerning her husband, who had deserted her and their three children. Ruggles immediately cut the ad. out of the newspaper that he alone of those at the hotel might possess this information and that he might consider a plan by which he could get the greatest satisfaction out of it.

The same evening an anonymous letter went to the advertiser that a gentleman had appeared at the Vieudeleau hotel at —— answering to the name mentioned in the advertisement. Ruggles, who mailed the letter, could not refrain from adding that "the fellow was evidently bent on committing bigamy."

From the time the discarded lover saw the evidence that his rival was sailing under false colors he changed his bearing toward Miss Harper. Where before he had made his jealousy evident he now assumed an air of superiority mingled with pity. Mr. Caton had become aware that his attentions to Miss Harper had made Mr. Ruggles his enemy and had noticed the antagonism of the latter's bearing toward him whenever they met. One evening while Mr. Caton was dancing with Miss Harper he unintentionally ran against Ruggles, who was also dancing. The look Ruggles gave him was ominous. Later, when both went out on the veranda for a whiff at a cigarette, Caton stepped up to Ruggles and apologized for running against him in the dance.

"One who is sailing under false colors is beneath my notice for any insult," was the reply.

"How did you get onto that?" asked Caton with surprising imperturbability.

"I saw it in the newspapers."

"I wish the newspapers would let me alone," was the only rejoinder, and Caton went back into the dancing hall, where Ruggles soon saw him whirling with Miss Harper.

Now, the only real attachment in this triangular affair was between Sam Ruggles and Gwen Harper, and from the time Ruggles began to assume that air of superiority Gwen began to be troubled. She was too proud to call him back, but she looked as if she would be willing to take him back if he would apply for reinstatement. One day when they met in the garden of the hotel she remarked that it was a pleasant day.

"I think it will storm tomorrow or next day," was the reply.

"Why, I see no indications of it."

"Perhaps if you watch the incoming trains you'll see a thunder cloud coming."

"You speak in riddles."

He could not longer keep his secret. It came out in spite of him—that is, a part of it.

"When the storm breaks it will strike this man whom you have honored with your favorable consideration."

"How? When? Where?"

"You shall see."

"Won't you tell me?"

"Nothing is to be gained by my telling you. I prefer that you should see for yourself."

And Mr. Ruggles with cold politeness lifted his hat and passed on.

Miss Harper went straight to her mother with the information or, rather, the insinuation. Mrs. Harper had been a bit worried lest she had lifted her daughter out of the frying pan to drop her into the fire. Her object now was to take advantage of what Ruggles had said to discredit both the rivals.

"My dear," she said, "in the first place, it is very mean of Sam to cast a slur upon this Mr. Caton. It shows a very contemptible disposition on Sam's part. But we must remember that we know nothing about Caton. He may be a gentleman and he may not be. Likely he is some young man who has got hold of a little money and is spending it in the only outing of his life."

"That can't be, mamma. He has the manner of one accustomed to the very best society. As for Sam, if he knows anything about Mr. Caton it would be very wicked of him not to warn me."

"Then why doesn't he tell you the whole story and have done with it?"

Mrs. Harper was not considering the inexperience of youth or the deflection of judgment occasioned by jealousy. It was enough for her to get her daughter out of the toils of a man worth only $5,000 a year and make sure that Gwen should not become too far interested in one who, for all that was known about him was not worth a cent.

It was a few days after this conversation between mother and daughter, at which Gwen promised to drop Mr. Caton at once, that the storm Ruggles had predicted broke. A woman with angular features was driven from the railroad station to the hotel, who, instead of placing her name on the register, held a private conference with the landlord and was excused from doing so. She arrived in the morning about an hour after a party of gentlemen, including Caton, had gone out on the water for a day's fishing. It was not long after the lady arrived before there began to be whispers about her among the hotel guests. Then it leaked out that she had come after a fugitive husband, and lastly Mrs. Harper was filled with consternation by a report that Edward Caton had been contemplating bigamy with her daughter.

When the fishing party returned the guests of the hotel were drawn up on the veranda to see the fun between Mr. and Mrs. Caton. The gentleman came up with the others entirely unconscious of what was in store for him. The woman was ready to pounce on him. But the storm didn't break. Caton went up to his room to make his toilet for dinner, and the woman who had come after him said that her husband was not among the men who entered. She was very wroth with her anonymous informant and vowed that if she could discover him she would give him a piece of her mind.

The clouds of the storm that had passed without striking were still whirling about when a young man drove up to the hotel from the station and, seeing Caton on the porch, cried out:

"Hello, Bob! Where did you come from?"

"Bob!" exclaimed several guests sitting about, in a breath. "I thought his name was Ned."

"Who's your friend?" asked one of these persons, following the newly arrived man into the house.

"That? Why, that's Bob Carrington."

When Mrs. Harper was informed that the supposed Edward Caton was none other than Robert Carrington, the multimillionaire, and her daughter not two days ago had given him the cold shoulder she was not only dumfounded, but chagrined. She had lost the opportunity of a lifetime. With some $10,000,000 a year at her command Gwen might have gone to London and taken a position in society there. But the luck had been against her and she was inconsolable.

Since his identity had been given away Mr. Robert Carrington did not attempt to pass further under a name that he had assumed in order to secure temporary immunity from a notoriety brought upon him by his immense wealth. However, he rejoiced at having enjoyed a week of freedom from curiosity and especially from society reporters who telegraphed his presence wherever he went.

After the sensation was over Sam Ruggles and Gwen Harper met in the drawing room of the hotel.

"Well," said Sam, "you just missed snaring a multimillionaire. I'm sorry for you."

"And you missed seeing the multimillionaire captured by a deserted wife."

"Funny, isn't it?"

Their eyes met, and they smiled.

"Mother's frantic," Gwen remarked.

"I suppose so. Well, what are you going to do?"

"Why, I'm not going to do anything."

She held a rose in her hand and, going up to him, fixed it in his button hole. He cast a quick glance about him. There was no one besides themselves in the room. He kissed her.

"What a pity, Mrs. Harper," said Mrs. Crawford, "that we couldn't have got an inkling as to the identity of young Carrington."

"It's just too disgusting for anything."

Wouldn't Stand For It.

Lady Duff-Gordon, who is regarded by English women as an authority on fashions, hasn't much use for the new gown that is slashed at the knee nor for the woman who wears that kind of a gown.

"That departure from convention is too much—too much even for this 20th century," she said, at a tea recently given in her honor. "I'll tell you a story about these gowns:

"An Englishwoman bought one in Paris and, while she was shooting in Scotland, her maid wore the gown to a dance in the Queen's road.

"Somebody betrayed the maid and her mistress, on her return from the Highlands, said to her severely:

"'Smithson, you wore my new slashed gown to one of your low dances! You bold brazen creature, aren't you ashamed of yourself?'

"Smithson burst into tears and, her handkerchief to her eyes, she sobbed:

"'Indeed I am ashamed of myself, madam. Ive lost my young man who I've been walking out with these four years. When I sat down in that gown and my knees showed through the slash, my young man gave me one look, and he said, said he, that I could consider it all off between us, for any one that would wear a gown like that in public, says he, was too bold and brazen ever to be his wife. Boo hoo.'"

PEOPLE WHO ARE TO CARRY TESTAMENTS

Thirty-One Thousand Canadians Are Pledged To Do So.

Two years ago there were comparatively few men and women in Canada who made a practice of carrying with them wherever they went a Bible or a New Testament. To-day there are over 31,000 who are pledged to do so, and every day sees the number grow, despite the dismal prophecies of those of little faith, who looked to see the effort die a natural death.

Canada was the first country to take up this work in a thoroughly systematic way, and to-day leads the world in every particular as far as the league is concerned.

A unique feature of the work in Canada is found in the fact that there are no fees of any kind attached, nor is there any cost to any church taking up the work. Special attention is paid to the Sunday school work, and so simple is the league's plan of operation, that it can operate through a Sunday school or any other department of a church without creating any extra machinery, or in any way adding to the burden of those interested.

The success of the league in Canada is nothing short of remarkable. There are over 31,000 members enrolled, and over 500 local branches. These branches are at work in every province of the Dominion, and almost every large city is represented. It is interesting to note that 56 per cent. of the members are young ladies under twenty-five years of age; that 70 per cent. are Sunday school scholars, and that Ontario has slightly over 200 of the branches mentioned.

When the founders wanted a man to promote the league they picked Mr. Waite, a young man just finishing his education. That their choice was a wise one no one can doubt after reading of the league's success. As Canada was the first country systematically to take up this work, Mr. Waite had to work out a system of promotion that would be wide enough to embrace a country and yet be applicable to the individual branch, no matter how small.

Mr. Waite brought to this task an organizing ability that one hardly expects to find in one so young, and a gift of public speaking that has stamped him as one of the best young men speakers in Ontario to-day.

Asked as to the prospects for the work in Canada, Mr. Waite said: "I want to say first of all that the league has come to stand, it will be a permanent movement. Judging by our success to date, and keeping in mind the kindly attitude of all denominations towards our work, I have no hesitancy in saying that within five years the league will have a total membership running close to the 300,000 mark, with branches at work in every part of Canada. When the conditions of membership in the league are remembered, some idea of the value such a movement will be to the religious and national life of our country can be realized."

BATTLE OF THE BALLOTS

Yesterday's battle of the ballots in Peterborough is one that will not soon be forgot by those who took an active part in it, particularly those who were prominent in the Local Option contest. While opinion seemed to be pretty evenly divided on this question, the Review is pleased that the ratepayers who cast their ballots were almost unanimous in regard to the Hydro-Electric by-law, which was carried by practically the Bryan ratio—16 to 1. This decisive move on the part of the people, we believe, is the beginning of a new era in the history of Peterborough. With cheaper power for the manufacturer and lower lighting rates for the householder and storekeeper, Peterborough should make greater progress in the next five years. In this connection it may not be out of place to say that the Review is the one paper in Peterborough that has advocated for the Hydro-electric system for the city.

Harry Morgan, alderman, and Robt. Fair, school trustee, were the only servants of the people who sought re-election and were unsuccessful. In the case of the latter the defeat was due, no doubt, to the fact that he didn't personally canvas, relying on his 22 years' service to the people. However, the electorate everywhere occasionally demand new blood. In J. J. Turner, jr., the Board has received new blood of no mean quality.

Malcolm McIntyre, the new alderman, is a contractor of wide experience and should make a good city father.

The passing of the incinerator by-law and the by-law in regard to the grant of land to Henry Hope & Sons by large majorities show that the ratepayers had confidence in the recommendations of the 1912 Council in these matters.

TO THE HAGUE

President Taft has expressed his willingness to refer the Panama canal tolls question to the Hague tribunal. This indication of his attitude was given to the Peace Forum society in New York, and he said that what accentuated his willingness was the fact that perhaps the United States might lose its case. The action of President Taft now is somewhat at variance with the attitude he took in his Presidential message to Congress at the time the bill, exempting United States coastwise shipping from tolls was passed. He recommended that a clause be inserted in the bill giving any foreign citizen a locus standi in the United States, to appeal to the United States Supreme Court upon the constitutionality of any such bill, as there is a grave constitutional question involved. The United States constitution lays down that the diplomatic treaty engagements of the country shall be the first binding law of the country, taking precedence over domestic made laws. That is, the United States may not legally make any domestic law that would nullify or abrogate any of its international obligations as made by treaty. The Hay-Paunceforte treaty states specifically that the Canal shall be free and open to the ships of all nations observing the rules of the Canal, upon a perfect equality. The discrimination in favor of the United States coastwise shipping, because foreign shipping is not a competing factor, is none the less a grave and unqualified breach of the treaty, because the United States is as much one of the nations contemplaed in the phrase "all nations" as Britain or Germany. That President Taft signed the bill giving it the effect of law was perhaps due to his political straits, but that he, one of the strongest advocates of a complete international arbitration treaty, should have at any time put himself in a position to deserve the imputation of deprecating a reference of the Canal dispute to the Hague tribune was rather queer.

Means "hidden eye." The "near" lens is actually hidden in the "distance" lens making a solid piece of glass.

No "lines" no cement, and perfect sight with the discomfort and unsightliness left out.

They cost more than the regular "cement" bifocal, ("Bifocal" means two lenses in one—far and near) but if you are particular of comfort and appearance they are worth the difference. We recommend and sell them.

OVER INDULGENCE IN WATER

In view of all that has been said from the public platform and printed in the local press in the past ten days in regard to over indulgence in liquor, or intemperance, the following in regard to the over-drinking of water may be read with interest by some.

Speaking before the American Psychological society at the annual convention in Atlantic City, Dr. Chas. C. Hill, of Baltimore, said; "Fabulous quantities of water are consumed in excess of physiological demands or requirements. There are numberless hypochondriacs who are tempted to gorge themselves with water, just because some 'beauty doctor' or 'health restorer' advises the use, or excessive use of water. He brands 'water intemperance' as a real peril. 'Water is not so innocent an article as is generally considered. When taken in excess it remains in the stomach, being absorbed from it in very small quantities. That which remains causes various ills. Any fluid containing alcohol, however, is readily absorbed. Men drink beer, light wine or diluted alcohol by the quart, but it would be inconvenient and very highly dangerous to take aboard such large quantities of water in the same period."

Ye gods, what next!

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Sir Joseph Lawrence Has Solution of Tariff Problem.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—An important speech, pregnant with constructive suggestions for a way out of the imperial preference difficulty, was made by Sir Joseph Lawrence on Saturday. As a solution Sir Joseph proposes that the preference on wheat to be given Canada should take the form of a bounty on colonial wheat instead of a tax on foreign wheat, such a bounty to be paid out of the customs duties collected on foreign manufactures. Further he would extend the principle after negotiations with the dominion to meat, butter, cheese and foodstuffs, utilizing the taxes levied upon the foreigner for the use of home markets for encouragement to the dominions to grow corn for British consumption. Foreign wheat would come in free.

Several states have similar laws.

ORGANIST'S WORK WAS APPRECIATED

Presentation to Mrs. E. A. Carveth of Warsaw

At a social gathering at the home of Mrs. John Powell, of Glenogan, on New Year's, her daughter, Mrs. Ernest A. Carveth, who has been organist at Trinity church for some time was surprised by friends, and presented with two handsome chairs and a table.

Mrs. Carveth was recently married and is residing in Warsaw, her husband being the well known driver of the stage.

During the course of a very pleasant evening the presentation was made and the following address was read;

Mrs. Ernest A. Carveth;

Dear Madam,—We, the members of Trinity church and choir, wish to avail ourselves of this opportunity to express our appreciation of your most valuable services as organist and co-worker. We present these slight tokens as evidences of the high esteem in which you are held among us. We ask you to accept these gifts that they may serve as gentle reminders of pleasant associations in the past.

Although distance may intervene we wish we may long remain fresh in your memory. We all join in wishing you and your husband a long, happy and prosperous journey through life and may God's richest blessings be the crowning success of your lives.

Yours in loving rememberance,
Signed on behalf of themselves of Trinity church,
MILDRED M. WOOD,
MRS. W. D. KINSMAN,

STATEMENT FROM THE CITIZENS' COMMITTEE

Local Option Vote Was Between 400 and 500 Less than Was Expected it Would be—Will Keep Organization Intact—Ultimate Victory is Certain

The following statement was given out to-day on behalf of the Citizens' Local Option Committee;

The temperance people entered into the local option campaign primarily because it was essentially a great moral issue. The fact that we lost yesterday does not alter the situation. The liquor interests in Peterborough have obtained a short reprieve; that is all. The fight will still go on. More than this; it will be conducted with greater vigor, more confidence and keener enthusiasm than ever before.

The fact—pointed out during the campaign—that whereas at one time Peterborough county had 114 public places for the sale of liquor, whereas to-day there are only 17, means only one thing. It is only a matter of time— and we believe short time —before the remaining 17 licenses will vanish as the other 97 have. The loss of yesterday's vote was only an incident. Preparations for the next campaign are already under way.

Had the vote been registered one week earlier, we believe that we would have won. We lost simply because influences over which we had no control entered into the campaign during the last few days of the struggle. These influences had nothing to do with the meetings held by our opponents. We saw their effect when the first returns were received, those from the South Ward.

While I have not had an opportunity as yet of discussing it with them I feel that the officers of the Citizens' Committee have nothing to regret except the result. We put up a good fight, the best we knew how. So far, we see nothing about our method of conducting the campaign that we would change were a new campaign before us. Our organization yesterday was practically perfect. Every poll was fully and well manned, we had ample facilities for getting out our vote and we recorded our vote early. Our opposition polled only a few more votes than we expected they would. Our vote was between 400 and 500 less than we expected it would be, As the vote we had been given reason to count on was taken to the polls it means apparently that many people who voted on other matters did not vote on local option. We will know more definitely about this when we receive the reports of our scrutineers

I would like to say a word about the so-called three-fifths handicap. The term three-fifths is a misnomer. It might more properly be called the 50 per cent handicap, in as much as in order to win we must record 50 per cent more votes than our opponents do. This is shown by the fact that supposing in a local option campaign, the liquor interests cast 500 votes, the temperance people would have to cast 750 votes in order to win. This is 50 per cent more than the liquor interests have to cast, making the handicap. We feel strongly that this handicap is too great, and that it is a hardship that after winning two campaigns, with an average majority for each of practically 500, the temperance sentiment of the city should still be deprived of the fruits of victory.

We expect to keep our organization intact. It is probable, also that we will unite with other districts in petitioning the Government to amend the law that it will no be possible to add names to the voters list on an income basis under the conditions that now prevail. This provision of the law has been flagrantly abused in the past and needs revision.

I would like to express the thanks of our Committee to all those who worked so faithfully, especially to our canvassers, as well as to the members of the clergy for their whole-souled, unremitting efforts on behalf of the cause.

H. B. COWAN,
President Citizens' Local Option Committee.

PLAY BY AMATEURS

Home talent will be put on at the Grand under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A. Two hundred and fifty children and grown ups will take part in the home talent production of "Alice in Wonderland," to be given at The Grand opera house under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Col. John F. Bragg, of New York, was in the city to-day and concluded arrangements for the presentation, the work of selecting the talent to begin at once. Some pretty little ten-year old miss will be selected to play the part of Alice, the girl who wandered through the wonderland in Lewis Carroll's delightful book. Then there will be 250 other children all in pretty costume, the leading parts being Alice, King Ruler of Wonderland, Queen of Hearts, Duchess, Cook Queen of the Fairies, Mad Hatter and others, March Hare, Dormouse, and Knave of Hearts, to say nothing of Fairies. Assistants will arrive in a few days to begin the work of training the participants. 24

FAIRVIEW CHURCH ANNUAL CONCERT

Special Correspondence.

Fairview, Smith, Jan. 6.—An exceptionally pleasant and profitable time was spent in Fairview church on Christmas eve, the occasion being the annual Sunday school entergiven in connection with the Methodist Sunday school. With few exceptions the entire program, which consisted of readings, recitations, dialogues and choruses by the school and solos by different members, was rendered by the scholars in a most efficient manner.

This was followed by the S.S. report which was most satisfactory, showing an increase in numbers as well as a good financial standing. No admission fee was charged, but a silver collection taken up amounted to $6.50. As the last number on the program was being rendered "Three cheers for Old Santa," up the aisle walked a real live Santa Claus in fur coat, peaked cap and strings of sleigh bells. He was a most agile old fellow and judging from his movements, must have had steel springs in his heels. With the help of a few of the gentlemen Santa soon dismantled a most beautiful Christmas tree laden with gifts for every scholar as well as for many of the adults and varying from a fine "Jersey cow" to a one cent sugar cane. Rev. Mr. Ireland, who acted as chairman, closed the evening enjoyment by a few timely comments, followed by "God Save the King."

The colonel is the new chief secretary to Commissioner D. M. Rees, for the Dominion of Canada.

POLICE COURT

To give him an opportunity to make good, judgment was reserved on Timothy Burke, a stranger, in police court to-day, after his remand for one week to undergo the sobering up process. He is a moulder by trade, capable of earning his $2.75 per day, and with only himself to keep.

Burke promised to secure work and cultivate a liking for sobriety.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Jan. 6.—There continues to be a fairly good demand for Manitoba spring wheat from foreign buyers, but, as the prices bid were not satisfactory, the volume of business done was small. A fair trade is passing in flour and millfeed for local account, but the export trade is dull. This being partly a holiday, the demand for dairy products was very quiet.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 6.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ended Jan. 4 were 1400 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 3190 hogs and 150 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1250 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 125 calves.

A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for cattle, and prices, as compared with a week ago, show a decline of 25c per 100 pounds, which may be attributed to the increased offerings of all grades. The gathering of buyers was large, and, as they were all pretty well cleaned out of stocks of beef, the demand was good. Sales of full loads of choice steers were made at $6.55 and $6.85, and picked lots at $7 to $7.25, while full loads of good cattle changed hands at $6.25 to $6.50. There was a good demand from packers for canning stock, of which the supply was fair, and sales were made at $2.75 to $3.25 per 100 pounds.

HOW TREES LIVE AND DIE.

Like Human Beings They Breathe, Eat, Sleep and Are Ill.

Trees literally breathe, inhaling oxygen and exhaling carbonic acid gas. The leaves are the lungs of the tree. On the lower surface of the leaf are vast multitudes of minute mouths or openings (100,000 to the square inch, it is estimated) which admit the air and expel the carbon.

There are other openings, called lenticels, in the bark dots and lines which can be easily seen on the twigs and smooth branches, which help the leaves just as the pores of the skin help the lungs. The perspiration of plants is technically known as transpiration.

The exhalation of water from the leaves is very great. That from a large oak is estimated at 150 gallons a day during the summer. The evaporation of water from the forests is fully as important as that from the ocean, if not more so. The ocean alone could not produce rain enough to sustain vegetation.

The tip ends of the tree roots absorb moisture from the ground, even in zero weather, but the passage of water from the roots up the trunk is retarded until winter relaxes its hold. The largest roots anchor the tree to the soil and do but little else. The slender rootlets and the tips of the large roots collect all that part of the tree's food which comes from the ground.

Trees eat and drink through the leaves and the rootlets. While they breathe all the time, day and night, rain or shine, as steadily as we do, they feed only part of the time. They sleep in the night, during rainy weather and throughout the winter. The growing season is very short, ending by midsummer. The summer drouths cut off or diminish the supply of water. The leaves are battered and eaten by insects.

A long period of rest is essential that twigs may harden and the wood ripen. Careful preparation for winter takes the place of further thickening of the trunk or lengthening of the limbs. The twigs and stems and roots must be stocked with food. The trees strives to take in all the nutritious parts of each leaf before it casts it off. When winter comes it generally finds the tree ready. The lenticels are sealed during the winter to prevent the breathing away of the tree's moisture.

Each leaf is a laboratory, where minerals and gases, water and sunshine are made into nourishment for the living issue, from which comes wood, cork, flower, fruit and a large number of gums, oils, essences and perfumes which have become indispensable in art, manufacture and medicine.

The leaves take charge of the nourishment of the tree as soon as they open. They prepare food only in the daytime and in the presence of the sunlight; the more warmth the more work. They make a complex substance known as starch, containing carbon, oxygen and hydrogen. The tree finds its growing season inaugurated when it is supplied with foliage. Each leaf is a builder. A large sugar maple is estimated to have 432,000 leaves, presenting to the sunlight an area of half an acre.

The wood of the tree is not alive, neither is the bark. But between the bark and the wood is a peculiar cellular substance known as cambium, which is the living part of the tree, from which new tissues are developed. This ministry, by the leaves, is what lengthens the branches and roots and adds to the tree's diameter. The upward mounting of the sap remains one of the unexplored mysteries of plant life. If a tree is girdled it usually dies because the descending sap cannot reach the roots, which soon perish of starvation from lack of the food sent them by the leaves.

A tree does not die of old age. It accumulates infirmities with the years and has many diseases. It may starve or die of thirst; caterpillars may eat its foliage, scale bugs suck its juices, beetles tunnel under the bark, scab, rust, moulds, rot, blight, may prey upon it. The wind is also an enemy

The Distome and the Pearl.

In the opinion of many experts pearls are the product of decay. The free pearls found in the common pearl bearing mollusk are little tombs surrounding the bodies of the marine worms known as distomes. In the month of August certain mollusks are found that have numerous small reddish yellow points in the spot where pearls usually form. Then begins the imprisonment of the creature. In the first stages the surface of the distome is sprinkled with tiny grains of carbonate of lime. These granulations grow and take the form of crystals, which end by forming a calcareous deposit around the creature's body.

Europe's Oldest Hospital.

The Hotel Dieu in Paris is believed to be the oldest hospital in Europe. It is said to have been founded in 660. Not only the sick, but also pilgrims and mendicants, regardless of age, sex, condition, creed or nationality were admitted at all hours of the day and night; no regulations controlled their admission or departure. It was the most important of the forty-eight hospitals which existed in Paris in 1786 and in which during that year 35,000 sick and poor were cared for.

The Mikado.

The "mikado" is really an obsolete title. The Japanese never use that appellation themselves, and they do not like others to do so. Educated Japanese speak of their sovereign as "Shnojo-sama, and the ordinary folk term him "Tenshi-sama." "Tanno" is the title used in all official documents, and for the foreigner the most correct form is "Kotei" — that is, emperor.

An Inch or So Below.

"It's funny," began the long-winded bore, "but nobody ever seems glad to see me."

"Well, and have you never found out the cause of your unpopularity?"

"No; I can't discover it."

"That's strange, because it's right under your very nose."

"My trouble was extreme Nervousness, brought on by Indigestion or Dyspepsia, from which I suffered in its worst form.

I asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, about "Fruit-a-tives" and he advised me to try them.

I took several boxes and am pleased to say I am now enjoying fine health.

I honestly believe I owe my health to "Fruit-a-tives" and strongly advise anyone suffering from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Nervousness or Sleeplessness, to commence using "Fruit-a-tives" and continue this remedy until a cure is accomplished".

HOCKEY CHAMPIONS OF CANADA LIKELY TO WIN TITLE AGAIN

McGILL UNIVERSITY HOCKEY SQUAD

The McGill University hockey team, the intercollegiate champions of Canada, is regarded as one of the finest of college hockey teams. Last year McGill captured the title after one of the hardest fought battles in the history of the sport in the Dominion. The Ottawa University team figured in the final contest last year and is likely to again this season, but judges of the sport predict another championship for the McGill players.

JUNIORS LOSE THEIR FIRST CONTEST OF THE O. H. A. SEASON

But They Look Like a Good Team and One That Will Show Big Improvement.

TIE AT HALF TIME

Cobourg Took Three in a Row and Game Ended with Visitors Ahead 6-4.

The doings at the ice works last night did not turnout just exactly as hoped for, as the O.H.A. Cubs of 1913 failed to follow in the footsteps of their illustrious predecessors, the Bear Cats and win their first game.

The score of 6-4 saw the other fellows from the lakeside burg on the big end. At half time it had been an even break—each team with three goals. It wasn't because the local youngsters did not try hard enough. They were in the fray all the time and were game to the end, in fact they increased their efforts to even things up and forged ahead in the last few minutes of play. But it was not to be.

MANY SHOTS WERE MADE OFF THE NETS.

Well directed shots were turned aside by the Cobourg net guardian and others passed on by missing the posts, on several occasions by a very close margin. Others were more distant as was the case throughout the contest. Greater accuracy in shooting would have given them the honors earlier in the battle. Once Morrow, the big point player waded through and had nothing to beat but the empty space but he shot wide. Another time with almost the same opportunity, Halpin, the featherweight rover, failed to connect. This, with all conditions considered was not surprising. It was the first performance in a bigger show and the youngsters were more or less excited. In the next game a repitition is unlikely.

PLAY WITH WHITBY ON FRIDAY NIGHT

The soft ice bothered both teams but nevertheless the exhibition was an interesting one for the 800 spectators, who will be back on the job when the blue and white sweaters appear again. The next engagement is scheduled for Friday night, when Whitby will be here. Cobourg was represented by a formidable line-up. Freeman, who played rover last season and also helped out the intermediates, woreкd at point, and he with Gray at cover and Taylor in goal, proved to be a hard defence. Leonard and Cavanah, new men in centre ice, were both good, while Hinman and Cunningham of the old guard, and particularly the latter, were something extra. The team had plenty of speed.

TEAM WILL IMPROVE WITH MORE EXPERIENCE

It was an inexperienced team with the exception of Dwyer nad Kenneally that faced the visitors. Next time they will do better. While some rather easy shots got passed Dwyer, he stooped in faultless style numerous hard ones. In front of him were Morrow and Cavanah, the latter a fifteen year old player, and a brother of the famous William who used to pull off a few interesting stunts in the same position. Morrow puts one in mind of Murphy of St. Miques. He is big and strong and last night he made a number of lone and effective rushes when the occasion demanded. He like Cavanah will greatly improve with more experience. The four forwards are all good. Long, at right wing, has a deadly shot and Halpin does a lot of nice stickhandling. When he gets better acquainted with Rose, look out for scores from both. Kenneally had a busy night watching Cunningham, who was a close contender for first honors on the visitors side.

HOW THE GOALS WERE COUNTED

Cobourg scored the first goal of the game, Cunningham landing the rubber in the nets. The honor of notching the first counter for the locals fell to Rose and a mighty cheer went up when he placed his teammates on an even footing. Cunningham came back with another and again the locals tied up the struggle when Long tallied, and following up the good work Rose pulled the string by which the team went ahead. Hinman however, got it back and the half ended with Taylor getting a hard shot from Long.

After the rest, the visitors scored three in a row, Leonard getting the first and Cunningham the next two. Captain Kenneally's boys did not give up a bit but kept plugging away. Scores which should have been theirs did not materialize on account of wild shooting. Taylor drew a penalty for going down on his knees and on a faceoff in front of the nets Long slammed the rubber in for the last tally of the game. Harvey Sproule handled the game.

The teams were—

NOTORIOUS BETRAYALS

TREACHERY WAS THE DEATH OF THE MERRY ROBIN HOOD.

The Daring Greenwood Bandit was Taken, Sick at a Nunnery—Highland Annals Are Full of Such Stories—Nana Sahib Will Always Stand Out as an Execrable Figure in British History.

Ever since the days when Judas received the thirty pieces of silver as the price of his Master's betrayal, a peculiar stigma has always attached to the man or woman who gives another up to an enemy, or who induces that other, by a show of friendly intention, to lay aside his armour of defence. The betrayer! The taker of blood-money! There is no term more approbrious no character so despised of all honest men. And it makes but little difference to the scorn in which the informer's trade is held, whether the betrayed be some exiled prince or political refugee, or an ordinary dangerous criminal whose capture is eminently desirable in itself.

It seems a fairly well-established historical fact that the famous outlaw, Robin Hood, died by treachery in the Priory of Kirklees, in Yorkshire, as is stated both in an early ballad called "A Lyttel Geste of Robin Hood," and in a latter poem on the same subject. The Harleian M.S. states that "it happened he fell sick at a nunnery in Yorkshire called Birkleys (Kirkleys), and desiring there to let blood, he was betrayed and made bleed to death," and so, too, says the old ballad:

Yet he was beguild, I wys,
Through a wycked woman,
The pryoresse of Kyrkesly,
That nye was of his kynne.

The more modern ballad tells how "Robin is to fair Kirkley gone, as fast as he can win," and how "none was so ready as his cousin herself for to let bold Robin in."

"Will you please sit down, Cousin Robin," she said,
"And drink some beer with me?"
"No I will neither eat nor drink,
Till I am blooded by thee."
She blooded him in the vein of the arm
And locked him up in the room;
There did he bleed all the livelong day,
Until the next day at noon.

Such was the end of bold Robin Hood, chief of the outlaws, and prince of good fellows!

Another popular hero who met his death by treachery was the Scottish leader, Sir William Wallace who after seven years of outlawry was taken prisoner at Robroyston, near Glasgow. The signal for his capture it is said, was given by turning a loaf flat side uppermost on the tables and since it was under the roof of Sir John Menteith that he was betrayed, it was for long considered a mark of ill-breeding to turn a loaf thus in the company of a Menteith, since one by doing so recalled the fact that a bearer of that name was the betrayer of the great Wallace.

Prince Charles Edward Stuart was singularly fortunate in the loyalty and fidelity of his fellows, for with the exception of the perfidious young Glengarry, the only instance of anyone seeking to betray the royal wanderer was that of a ragged and half-starved lad, to whom the Prince gave food during his time of hiding in South Uist. This kindness the traitor repaid by going with his valuable information to a party of militia in the neighborhood, who, however, flatly refused to attach any importance to so disreputable a witness!

It was not always the case, however, that a Highland refuge was a safe one; and a very heartless betrayal was that of the great Marquis of Montrose, after the failure of his rising. After the defeat of Invercarron, Montrose and Kinnoul wandered up the river Kyle the whole of the following night, and the next two days, with practically no food, and came at last into the Assynt country. There Kinnoul was unable to travel any further and is supposed to have died among the mountains. "Not even the iron frame of Montrose," says the historian, "could endure a prolonged existence under such circumstances. He gave himself up to Macleod of Assynt, a former adherent, from whom he had reason to expect assistance in consideration of that circumstance, and indeed from the dictates of honorable feeling and common humanity. The Highlander rendered his name infamous by selling the hero of the Covenanters, for which "duty to the public" he was rewarded with 400 bolls of meal."

One of the most terrible acts of treachery in the world's history is of comparatively recent date; namely, the betrayal and massacre of the garrison of Cawnpore by Nana Sahib. This cold-blooded and traitorous prince not only made terms with General Wheeler who was in command of the besieged garrison, but also offered to provide boats to convey the women and children first, and then the combatants, the latter unarmed, across the river. No sooner had the process of embarkation commenced than Nana's troops fell upon the defenceless Europeans, and there followed a ghastly scene of carnage which thrilled England with horror, and brought down a terrible vengeance upon the perpetrators of the atrocious outrage. The women and children were imprisoned for a few hours in the Residency, but Nana ordered all to be slain, and their bodies thrown down a well: thus was added one of the most terrible pages to India's blood-stained history.

Truly the record of betrayals is one of the most sordid aspects of the chronicles of the past, for treachery is a quality no less base and detestable than fidelity is honorable and ennobling. And since every medal has its obverse and its reverse side, it must always be remembered that for every act of desertion and betrayal there are, on the whole a far greater number of deeds of loyalty and self-denying faithfulness.

BRIGHTENS MAN'S HABIT.

Tailor Anticipates Pendulous Swing To Brilliant Hues.

A movement has been initiated which has for its object the brightening of the clothes which men wear. From the tailors' point of view this is a dull age. Men wear only sombre colors, a reflection of the grey things of life, with none of its beauties.

The women, say the tailors, tread the right path. Their dress to-day is as beautiful as ever it was, and just as expensive. But the men, say the tailors, are depressing, and in no way worthy their title of the "lords of creation." So a revolution is coming. In the van of this movement is Mr. H. Dennis Bradley, of the West-end tailoring house of Pope and Bradley. He has every hope of seeing a Merry England in which men will not be ashamed to wear colors, and when the black or dark coat will be neglected to strictly gloomy functions.

"The only way for us to begin," said Mr. Bradley, "is by encouraging a taste for brighter colors. It is no good talking of changing the form until brighter ideas are accepted; once men are accustomed to seeing colors on their fellows they will be prepared to see radical changes of form, and such changes would certainly follow in time on the adoption of more cheerful colors. If men once accept pink as a color, for instance, they will in time see that trousers are not a suitable garment for the employment of pink, and will therefore adopt some other form of nether covering.

"I think that there is no doubt that within the next few years our dress will undergo considerable changes in style, color, and material. The manufacturers are sympathetic to the idea, and already produce materials in beautiful colors whose only fault is that they are a little in advance of the courage of men. What we want is pioneers, individuals with a little courage who will not shrink at the idea of wearingy a green waistcoat simply because it is green. Pioneers are always hard to find, of course, but they are coming. There has been an enormous change towards brightness in the last ten or fifteen years if you only think of it. Take such things as socks and underclothing, the garments that are hidden. Ten years ago they were all of the "all-wool" variety, without color of any kind. Now look at socks and undergarments—they are produced in the most beautiful colors. Go into the chambers of any well-to-do bachelor, and you will find that his bath gowns and dressing gowns are of the most delightful color schemes. Men are fond of color just as much as women, but they do not like to show it to the world.

"And, above all," concluded Mr. Bradley, "let it be understood that this is not a plea for what we used to call the 'masher' and what is now called the 'nut.' We want color and brightness, but we want it all in harmony and taste."

So now for the pioneers of the new movement.

LUNG TROUBLE

Mrs. Biny Brown, of Tenecape, N.S., Was Cured by Catarrhozone of Lung Trouble and Catarrh, After Hundreds of Other Remedies Failed

If your lungs are weak; if there is consumption in your family; if Colds, Catarrh, and Bronchitis bother you, be sure to use Catarrhozone. It is especially adapted for these diseases and cures every time.

Mrs. Brown took cough mixtures, but they made her sick. Then she used an atomizer, but, after resorting without benefit to poultices, she tried Catarrhozone.

"I used Catarrhozone Inhaler," writes Mrs. Brown, "five minutes every hour, and soon recognized that it was going to cure me. I could feel the soothing medicated air spreading through the air passages of the throat, and it touched the sore spots in the lungs that other remedies failed to reach. Catarrhozone seemed to go just where it was needed most, and soon put a stop to my cough. It restored me to perfect health, and I am convinced that no cough, cold, or catarrh can exist if Catarrhozone is used."

No treatment is so clean, so pleasant, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone. By means of the Inhaler, the local symptoms, such as coughing, inflammation and congestion are speedily corrected. Ferrozone tablets, which are taken after each meal, purify and cleanse the blood of all poisons, and build up and strengthen the system.

This local and constitutional treatment is always effective, and cures cases that have been given up as hopeless. Money can't buy or produce anything better, and to get cured it is absolutely necessary to use Catarrhozone.

Formal nosegays with paper frills made of fruits, nuts and raisins, instead of flowers are novelties at New York dinner parties.

THE MAYOR IS PLEASED

With the Result of the Vote on By-laws

"I am delighted with the sweeping in which the ratepayers evidenced their approval of the by-laws," replied His Worship Mayor Bradburn to-day, when asked for his opinion. "The result is perfectly satisfactory" he added "and I wish to heartily thank the ratepayers, who by their ballots, assisted the Council in their proposed undertakings for civic betterment. I am sure that the new members of the Council will endeavor to do their best to assist in carrying on the good work which is in view."

There are many questions you cannot answer, but if you have been diligent in seeking useful knowledge you can make a better guess than the man who has not. There are many things you cannot do, but if you have trained yourself in industry and studied the simple laws of efficiency you can make a better stagger at them than the idler.

GOOD ATTENDANCE AT MEETINGS

Evangelistic Services at Bethany Tabernacle Continue Till Friday

In spite of the fact that so many have been occupied with various duties and conditions of the New Year season, the meetings in Bethany Tabernacle have been well attended, and those who have heard the Rev. Mr. Murphy have felt well repaid for coming. The speaker has sought to deal with the failures of the Christian life, their causes and remedy, and has urged upon all the necessity of being "Right with God" in order to help others to get saved, rather than hinder men and women coming to Christ and getting saved.

The meetings will continue each day at 2.30 and 7.45 p.m., until Friday evening. All welcome.

Jumpers of the Sea.

Many of the inhabitants of the sea are good jumpers, and some have become famous. Among them should be mentioned the tarpon or silver king, a huge fish with scales that gleam like silver. In the Pacific waters the tuna, an ally of the horse mackerel, is noted for its leaps. Sometimes a school sweeps up the coast, and the powerful fish, often weighing 800 pounds, are seen in the air in every direction. They dart like an arrow, turn gracefully five or six feet in the air and come down, keeping the water for acres in a foam, and, if not the greatest, they are certainly the most graceful of the jumpers of the sea.

PICTURES OF AFRICAN TRAVEL

As Seen at the Grand are Educative and Interesting

For over two hours last evening a large audience followed with the closest and most flattering attention, the wonderful adventures of Paul J. Rainey during his recent African hunt, a most faithful record of which was preserved through a triumph of motion photography.

It is not exaggerating to class the pictures as marvellous. They have added much towards securing a true idea of the life and habits of the members of the African animal kingdom, and of showing how they disport themselves in the jungle fastnesses.

The pictures were made decidedly educative as well as interesting by the verbal explanation which accompanied them as they were reflected on the canvas. This latter task was most ably fulfilled by Mr. Henry Warwick, the custodian of the films, introduced a considerable amount of humor into his descriptions.

The pictures come direct from the Bijou and Lyceum threaters in New York, where Mr. Warwick says they were shown to packed houses.

They were divided into six reels, each one showing a different phase of African animal life. It would be profitable for all to see these pictures which will be shown again to-night.

The medici collar rivals the Robespierre, but is less universally becoming.

COMING OF A GREAT DRAMA

The story unfolded in "A Butterfly on the Wheel," teaches one of the greatest lessons against divorce that has ever been revealed to the public through the medium of the stage. In the third act, which shows a court-room scene, perfect in every detail, Peggy Admaston, the wife of the Rt. Hon. Geo. Admaston, a prominent member of politics, is on the stand fighting to hold her husband's love and name. Through an unfortunate indiscretion she is accused by her husband of infidelity, who files a suit for divorce. During the trial she fights the prosecuting attorney through his cross examinations full of insinuations, and finally cries out that now she understands why so many women suffer a divorce by default rather than be subjected and humiliated by a trial. At last having exhausted mind and body, she collapses. The husband is finally convinced of his wife's innocence and he once more takes her into his arms and the curtain falls, leaving the audience bewildered and altogether pleased at the wonderfully realistic drama it has witnessed.

"A Butterfly on The Wheel," staged by Messrs. Shubert and Lewis Waller will be the attraction at the Grand Theatre next Friday, January 10th, with an All-English Company. 1d24

Fire and Water.

Why does water put out fire? Water reduces the temperature of the flame below the point of ignition; therefore it cannot burn. Water does not smother the flames even when the burning brand is completely immersed in a tank of water, because the first contact puts out the fire—that is, reduces the temperature of the flame below the point of ignition.

"I should say not. He's working his way through college as a waiter and sends me his tips. I've paid off the mortgage, and now I'm starting a fund to build a new barn."

"HOODOO" SHIP GOES DOWN THIRTY TWO ARE DROWNED

Oil-Tank Steamship Rosecrans Runs on Sand Bar During a Gale—Only Three of Her Crew Survive After Desperate Struggle—Ill-Fated Craft Was One of the Most Notoriously Unlucky Vessels on the Seas

ASTORIA, Ore., Jan. 8.—The oil tank steamship Rosecrans, Capt. L. F. Johnson, from Monterey, Cal., for Portland, Ore., ran aground early yesterday on Peacock Spit, while crossing into the Columbia River during a 55-mile gale. and was lost with 31 members of her crew of 35.

One survivor of the wreck was reported last night to have reached shore at Tioga, Wash., six miles from the scene of the disaster, and the Point Adams life-saving crew which, with the life crew from Fort Canby, had been at work since early morning, rescued three other men late yesterday. The latter had taken refuge in the rigging of one of the masts when the ship went down. For many hours they clung there, the waves breaking over them repeatedly. Late yesterday the wind died down somewhat and the life-savers were enabled to reach them. Two of the men were taken from their perch, while the third, who had leaped into the sea when the lifeboat neared the spot, was taken from the water.

Craft of Ill-Omen.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—Trouble perched on the forefoot of the Rosecrans when she was launched as the Methven Castle in Glasgow 29 years ago, and never left her. Captain Johnson, her master, and 30 sailors went down with her yesterday after three wrecks within a year, for none of which he was responsible.

On an early voyage, Carey, one of the Phoenix Park murderers, who betrayed his confederates in the assassination at Dublin of Lord Charles Frederick Cavendish and Thomas Burke, was tracked half round the world to Cape Town, South Africa, and shot down on her decks by O'Donnell.

For a time she did duty as an American army transport, but the Government was dissatisfied with her and sold her. Scooped out and converted into a tanker, she became more actively unfortunate.

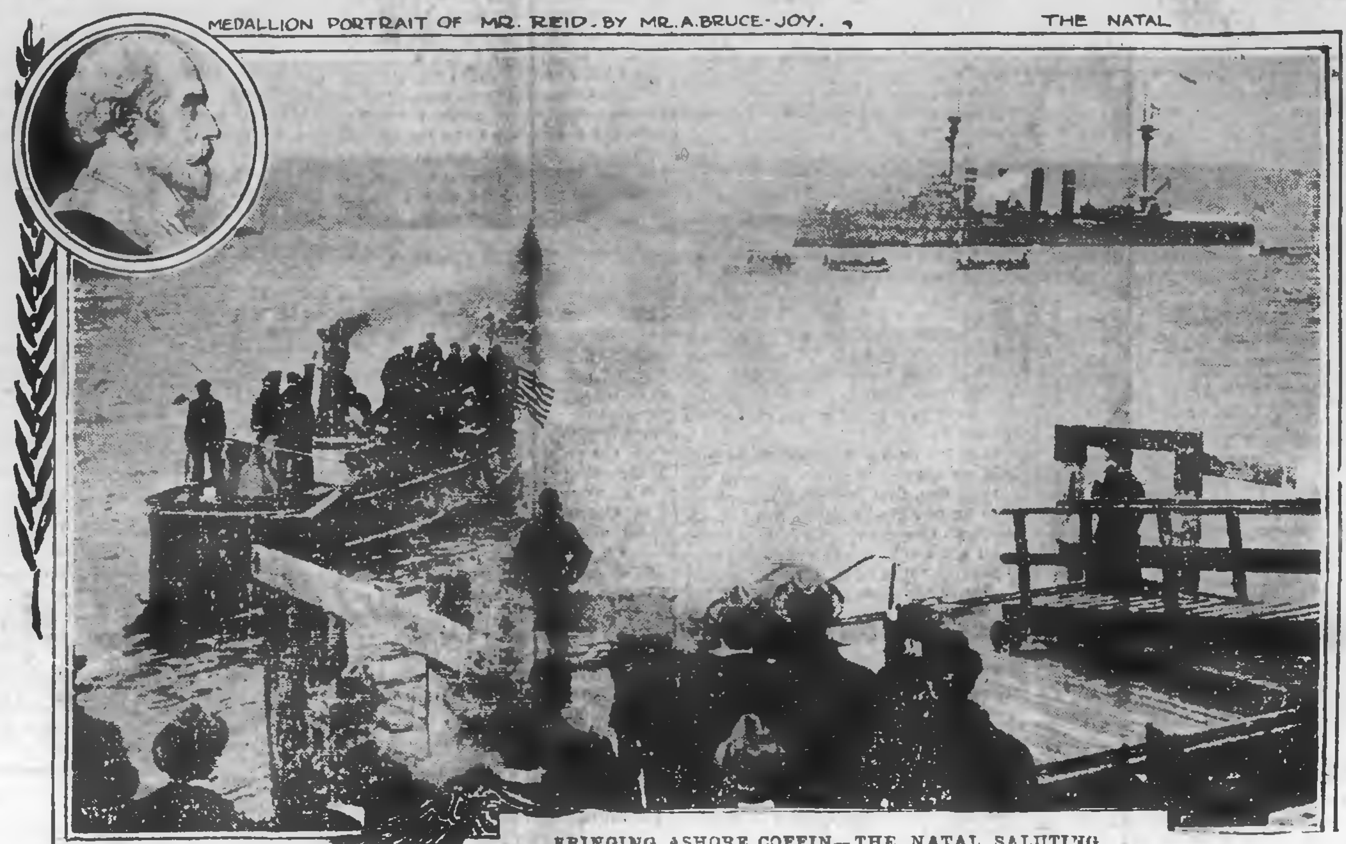
On March 12, 1912, after fighting a terrible gale all night, she grew unmanageable and was tossed broadside on the rocks 20 miles north of Santa Barbara. The ship's carpenter and a quartermaster were washed overboard and drowned.

With a hole 25 feet wide in her plates and spiked firmly on the rocks the Rosecarns was given up for lost, but the weather moderated, and it was seen she could be saved. Patched up and put to work again, the steamer caught fire five months later while taking on oil at Gaviota and burned to the water's edge.

The owners put another handful of thousands into her in repairs and sent her to sea again. This time she made a complete job of it on the rocks of Peacock Spit, taking her stout-hearted master and more than thirty men to death with her.

The names of the sailors may never be made known.

SCENE ON ARRIVAL OF FUNERAL SHIP BEARING AMBASSADOR REID'S BODY



BRINGING ASHORE COFFIN—THE NATAL SALUTING.

Seldom, if ever, in the history of America has there been witnessed such an impressive scene as the arrival at New York of the funeral ship, the British cruiser Natal, bearing the body of Whitelaw Reid, United States Ambassador to England.

Followed by the United States battle ships Florida and North Dakota and four destroyers, the funeral ship entered the Hudson and anchored off West Ninety-ninth street. As the coffin was lowered nineteen gun salutes were fired by the British cruiser.

On shore, at a nearby pier, there awaited a black draped caisson, on which the late Ambassador's body was borne to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, where a most impressive service was held the following day.

ROWELL SPEAKS AT CHATHAM

Urges Participation in the Imperial Burdens.

CHATHAM, Jan. 8.—"Is it in our interests or in the interests of the Empire as a whole that Canada should insist at the present time of participating in the management of this great trust. This is a matter of vital moment to which we must give most serious consideration."

Such was one of the problems discussed by N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., at the Canadian Club here last night.

Mr. Rowell emphasized the vast extent of the British Empire, and the fact that only 60,000,000 of its total population of 400,000,000 were of European stock. This greatly increased the difficulties in government.

"Among these 340,000,000 of people," he said, "law and order must be maintained, justice freely and impartially administered, educational systems established and maintained; and these peoples gradually educated to the point of participating in the government of their own countries. Surely a very large share of the white man's burden has been assumed by Great Britain—a burden with which we in Canada are entirely unfamiliar."

Mr. Rowell made a passing reference to the naval questions. "Each nation," he said, "maintained its own defences, but Great Britain provides in the main for the naval defence of the whole Empire. Australia has already undertaken the responsibility for the naval defence of her own shores and the protection of the trade routes and commerce of the Empire in Australian waters. Canada must not do less."

Good Farming Pays Says F. W. Goble at Guelph.

GUELPH, Jan. 8.—Massey Hall, at the Ontario Agricultural College, was filled when the 3[illegible]th annual meeting of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union opened its session. Delegates to the number of about 150 were present.

F. W. Goble, of Woodstock, president of the association, delivered his address. He first of all welcomed the delegates and ex-students to the meeting, and hoped that the session would be both pleasant and profitable. He referred to the growth of the experimental idea, and pointed out that in 1912 there had been 5,0[illegible]7 experiments in different grains, grasses, etc., throughout Ontario. He stated the lands which were properly drained had yielded twenty dollars per acre more than that which was undrained. Reference was made to the possibility of the uses of electricity on the farm and the consequent reduction in the cost of labor.

A short discussion followed the president's address, after which Prof. Zavitz delivered his annual address. He sounded a note of warning regarding the quality of seed being supplied to the farmers of the Province of Ontario by certain seed houses. "I believe that many farmers are obtaining seed from some seedsmen which is not the true seed of the variety it is intended to produce," said Prof. Zavitz. "Now I do not wish to say anything detrimental to the interests of the different seed houses, but I am speaking plainly, because I believe that plain speaking is what we need at the present stage of our agricultural work."

In the course of his report on the widespread experiments of the past season Prof. Zavitz discussed those strains in each seed crop which showed themselves to be particularly prolific and suited our climatic and soil conditions. The marvellous popularity of the O.A.C. No. 21 barley was commented upon, and it was recommended as the best possible to procure. The report noted the great increase in the area devoted to buckwheat, and also dealt with the qualities of different varieties of rye and peas. Timely reference was also made to the fact that far too many varieties of potato are annually produced in Ontario.

Stand by Evangelist.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 8.—At an informal gathering of London "Old Boys" the arrest of Sam Grigg on a charge of bigamy was discussed, and steps taken to see that he would have a fair trial. It is understood that Grigg will be provided with sufficient funds to secure able counsel.

There are hundreds of Londoners and residents of Western Ontario now in Winnipeg and the west who remember the kindly hospitality dispensed at the Grigg house in London for over a quarter of a century.

UNNECESSARY TO GO BEFORE PEOPLE

The attempt of the opposition to scare the Government into going to the country on the navy contribution will be in vain.

While the permanent policy which will be announced within the next year or so will indisputably be a cause for going before the electors, it is not so with the thirty-five millions which is only a contribution. The present opposition fought hard against going to the country on reciprocity and absolutely refused to go on the G.T.P., so there is no reason for them to complain.

It would be wholly unwarrantable to go to the country on the proposition to buy three ships, since the difference between the Laurier policy and the Borden policy is that Mr. Borden intends to make it part of an Empire fleet.

The latter question is one of course for the electors to decide upon, but, the former is therefor most assuredly not.

CALLS ON WOMEN.

Col. Sam Hughes Summons Them To Militia Conclave.

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—Col. Sam Hughes purposed introducing a new element into military movements. Col. Hughes has expressed his desire that at the coming militia conference in February, representatives of various women's associations shall be present to give their opinions as to various phases of military work. To this end, the Minister of Militia has issued invitations to branches of the W. G. C. A., the Daughters of the Empire and several other women's organizations, to send representatives to the conference.

Col Hughes specially desires that the fair sex will be heard with regard to the question of the Cartier Memorial and more especially with regard to the cadet movement, for the success of which the Minister realizes, that Canada's mothers, sisters and daughters hold a somewhat strong and influential voice.

It is expected, therefore, that the presence of several representatives of such organizations as have been mentioned, will add a new featunre to the coming militia conference, and will supply a new note in the military deliberations.

MANY CHINESE ARE COMING

College Students on Their Way to America

REGINA, Jan. 8.—Fifteen hundred Chinese students left Hong Kong two weeks ago, and are now on their way to North America to enter schools in Canada and the United States. Of the total number about 700 will come directly to this country, according to Mr. Get Yee, Chinese agent here, and will take up courses of study at the big schools in Toronto and other educational centres.

This migration of students is the result of a promise made by the officials of the new Government of China to the fathers of families prior to the recent war of [illegible] man who enlisted and who had children, was promised that if he was killed on the battlefield his children would be educated at the expense of the Government, and his wife given an allowance until her death or remarriage.

The boys are to be maintained in good schools until they reach the age of 18 years, and if the girls wish to attend school they will be maintained there until they are 20 years old. Although practically all the money is furnished in contributions by wealthy Chinese, the Government has kept its promise, and the present seekers for knowledge is presumably made up of those whose fathers were killed in the war against the old regime.

PREMIER ASQUITH SEES NO URGENCY

LONDON, Jan. 8.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Premier Borden's statement to the effect that the Imperial Government and leaders of the Opposition had accepted the principle that the overseas dominions should be entitled to a share in the direction of the Imperial policy, was raised by Duncan Pirrie in the Commons yesterday, when he asked Premier Asquith whether, in view of the desirability of obtaining a settlement by the consent of constitutional changes involved by the home rule bill, the Government would summon a conference. Premier Asquith feared that the proposal made by his honorable friends would not be practicable.

Pirrie asked further whether he was aware Premier Borden had said that this was a question which most closely affected the future destiny of the Empire, and that, however difficult the task might be, it was not the part of wisdom or statesmanship to evade it?

Premier Asquith: "I entirely agree with that."

Pirrie: "Is it not then the clear duty of the Government to undertake this step?"

"Not this particular step, at this particular moment," replied the Premier. "No question requires more careful consideration."

Will Make Sacrifices in the Interests of General Peace

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Jan. 8— The Servian government to-day reached the most important decision to withdraw from the Adriatic Sea. This act is regarded in all quarters as a notable step in the direction of peace. European powers were officially informed of this decision this morning, Servia announcing as proof her willingness to make sacrifices in the interest of general peace, that she has decided to remove her troops from the Adriatic coast immediately after peace had been concluded. The Servian government hopes Europe will take this evidence and its moderation into account, and not ask other sacrifices which possibly would be beyond the power of Servia to make.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, made this statement in the House of Commons yesterday regarding the possibility of intervention by the powers should the peace plenipotentiaries fail to reach an agreement.

"This subject is, of course, receiving the attention of the powers, but I cannot make any public statement as to their views or decisions, except such as may be made by common consent."

The Balkan delegates were unofficially informed yesterday that the ambassadors at Constantinople were continuing to exert pressure on the Porte in order to find the best way to come to terms with the Balkan states. Some difficulties are being met with at the ambassadorial conference in London, and the question of Albania has been abandoned for the moment, as it has been found impossible to reconcile the desires of Austria for an extended Albania with the suggestions of Russia for narrowing the boundaries of the new state.

The ambassadors yesterdays began the discussion of the Aegean Islands. They examined a long detailed memorandum presented by the Greek Premier, M. Venizelos. In the memorandum he expressed the belief that the principal reason why the islands should be annexed to Greece lay in the fact that by this means it would be impossible to conclude with Turkey a peace that was really permanent, and would not be disturbed by further Greek aspirations.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST
BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Company.

She laughingly left the room and Elnora sat thinking, until she remembered how hungry she was, so she ate the food, drank the hot chocolate and began the process of getting a grip on herself.

Then the Bird Woman came back and showed Elnora a long printed slip giving a list of graduated prices for moths, butterflies and dragon flies.

"Oh, do you want them?" exulted Elnora. "I have a few and I can get more by the thousand, with every color in the world on their wings."

"Yes," said the Bird Woman, "I will buy them, also the big moth caterpillars that are creeping everywhere now, and the cocoons that they will spin just about this time. I have a sneaking impression that the mystery, wonder and the urge of their pure beauty are going to force me to picture and paint our moths and put them into a book for all the world to see and know. We Limberlost people must not be selfish with the wonders God has given to us. I will pay good prices for all the moths you can find, because, you see, I exchange them with foreign collectors. The banker will buy stone axes, arrow points and Indian pipes. There was a teacher from the city grade schools here today for specimens. There is a fund to supply the ward buildings. I'll help you get in touch with that. They want leaves of different trees, flowers, grasses, moths, insects, birds' nests and anything about birds."

Elnora's eyes were blazing. "Had I best go back to school or open a bank account and begin being a millionaire? Uncle Wesley and I have a bushel of arrow points gathered, a stack of axes, pipes, skin dressing tools, tubes and mortars. I don't know how I ever will wait three hours."

"You must go, or you will be late," said the Bird Woman. "I will be ready at 4."

After school closed Elnora, seated by the Bird Woman, drove to Freckles' old room in the Limberlost. One at a time the beautiful big moths were taken from the interior of the old black case. Not a fourth of them could be moved that night, and it was almost dark when the last box was closed, the list figured and into Elnora's trembling fingers were paid $59.16. Elnora clasped the money closely.

"Oh, you beautiful stuff!" she cried. "You are going to buy the books, pay the tuition and take me to high school!"

Then because she was a woman she sat on a log and looked at her shoes. Long after the Bird Woman drove away Elnora remained. She had her problem, and it was a big one. If she told her mother would she take the money to pay the taxes? If she did not tell her how could she account for the books and things for which she would spend it? At last she counted out what she needed for the next day, placed the rest in the farthest corner of the case and locked the door. She then filled the front of her skirt from a heap of arrow points beneath the case and started home.

* * * * * * *

With the first streak of red above the Limberlost Margaret Sinton was busy with the gingham and the intricate paper pattern she had purchased. Wesley cooked the breakfast and worked until he thought Elnora would be gone, then he started to bring her mother.

"Now you be mighty careful," cautioned Margaret. "I don't know how she will take it."

"I don't either," said Wesley philosophically, "but she's got to take it some way. That dress has to be finished by school time in the morning."

Wesley had not slept well that night. By the time he reached the front gate and started down the walk between the rows of asters and lady slippers he was perspiring, and every plausible and convincing speech had fled his brain. Mrs. Comstock helped him. She met him at the door.

"Good morning," she said. "Did Margaret send you for something?"

"Yes," said Wesley. "She sent me for you. She's got a job that's too big for her, and she wants you to help."

"Of course I will," said Mrs. Comstock. It was no one's affair how lonely the previous day had been, or how the endless hours of the present would drag. "What is she doing in such a rush?"

Now was his chance.

"She's making a dress for Elnora," answered Wesley. He saw Mrs. Comstock's form straighten, and her face harden, so he continued hastily. "You see Elnora has been helping us at harvest time, butchering, and with unexpected visitors for years. We've made out that she's saved us a considerable sum, and as she wouldn't ever touch any pay for anything we just went to town and got a few clothes we thought would fix her up a little for the high school. We want to get a dress done today mighty bad, but Margaret is slow about sewing, and she never can finish alone, so I came for you."

"And it's such a simple little matter, so dead easy; and all so between old friends like, that you can't look above your boots while you explain it," sneered Mrs. Comstock. "Wesley Sinton, what put the idea into your head that Elnora would take things bought with money when she wouldn't take the money?"

Then Sinton's eyes came up straightly.

"Finding her on the trail last night sobbing as hard as I ever saw any one at a funeral. She wasn't complaining at all, but she's come to me all her life with her little hurts, and she couldn't hide how she'd been laughed at, twitted and run face to face against the fact that there was books and tuition unexpected, and nothing will ever make me believe you didn't know that, Kate Comstock."

"If any doubts are troubling you on that subject, sure I knew it! She was so anxious to try the world I thought I'd just let her take a few knocks and see how she liked it."

"As if she'd ever taken anything but knocks all her life!" cried Wesley Sinton. "Kate Comstock, you are a heartless, selfish woman. You've never allowed Elnora any real love in her life. If ever she finds out that thing you'll lose her, and it will serve you right."

"She knows it now," said Mrs. Comstock icily, "and she'll be home tonight just as usual."

"Well, you are a brave woman if you dared put a girl of Elnora's make through what she suffered yesterday and will suffer again today and let her know you did it on purpose. I admire your nerve. But I've watched this since Elnora was born, and I got enough. Things have come to a pass where they go better for her or I interfere."

"As if you'd ever done anything but interfere all her life! Think I haven't watched you? Think I, with my heart raw in my breast and too numb to resent it openly, haven't seen you and Mag Sinton trying to turn Elnora against me day after day? When did you ever tell her what her father meant to me? When did you ever try to make her see the wreck of my life and what I've suffered? No, indeed!"

"Kate Comstock, that's unjust!" cried Sinton. "Only last night I tried to show her the picture I saw the day she was born. I begged her to come to you and tell you pleasant what she needed and ask you for what I happen to know you can well afford to give her."

"I can't!" cried Mrs. Comstock. "You know I can't!"

"Then get so you can!" said Wesley Sinton. "Any day you say the word you can sell $6,000 worth of rare timber off this place easy. I'll see to clearing and working the fields cheap as dirt, for Elnora's sake. I'll buy you more cattle to fatten. All you've got to do is sign a lease to pull thousands from the ground in oil, as the rest of us are doing all around you."

"Cut down Robert's trees!" shrieked Mrs. Comstock. "Tear up his land! Cover everything with horrid, greasy oil! I'll die first!"

"You mean you'll let Elnora go like a beggar and hurt and mortify her past bearing. I've got to the place where I tell you plain what I am going to do. Maggie and I went to town last night, and we got what things Elnora needs most urgent to make her look a little like the rest of the high school girls. Now here it is in plain English. You can help get these things ready and let us give them to her as we want"—

"She won't touch them!" cried Mrs. Comstock.

"Then you can pay us, and she can take them as her right"—

"I won't!"

"Then I will tell Elnora just what you are worth, what you can afford and how much of this she owns. I'll loan her the money to buy books and decent clothes, and when she is of age she can sell her share and pay me."

Mrs. Comstock gripped a chair back and opened her lips, but no words came.

"And," Sinton continued, "if she is so much like you that she won't do that I'll go to the county seat and lay complaint against you as her guardian before the judge. I'll swear to what you are worth and how you are raising her and have you discharged or have the judge appoint some man who will see that she is comfortable, educated and decent looking!"

"You—you wouldn't!" gasped Mrs. Comstock.

"I won't need to, Kate!" said Sinton, his heart softening the instant the hard words were said. "You won't show it, but you do love Elnora! You can't help it! You must see how she needs things. Come, help us fix them and be friends. Maggie and I couldn't live without her, and you couldn't either. You've got to love such a fine girl as she is. Let it show a little!"

"You can hardly expect me to love her," said Mrs. Comstock coldly. "But for her a man would stand back of me now who would beat the breath out of your sneaking body for the cowardly thing with which you threaten me. After all I've suffered you'd drag me to court and compel me to tear up Robert's property. If I ever go they carry me. If they touch one tree or put down one greasy old oil well it will be over all I can shoot before they begin. Now, see how quick you can clear out of here!"

"You won't come and help Maggie with the dress?"

For answer Mrs. Comstock looked about swiftly for some object on which to lay her hands. Knowing her temper, Wesley Sinton left with all the haste consistent with dignity. But he did not go home. He crossed a field and in an hour brought another neighbor who was skillful with her needle. With sinking heart Margaret saw them coming.

Haphazard, occasional saving seldom accomplishes much. The money accumulates all the more rapidly, too, because of the Interest which is added every six months.

A PRACTICAL YOUNG MAN

But He Was Rather Too Much So

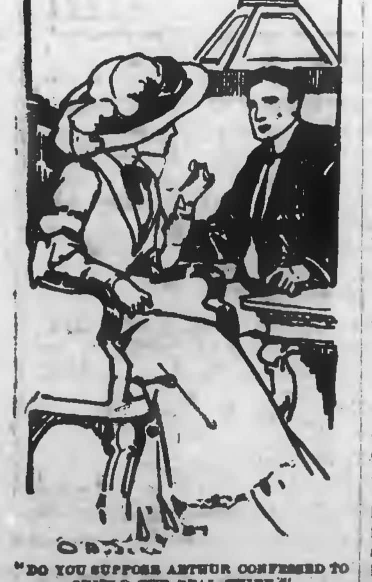
By HELEN D. WHEELER

Arthur Stanford was a practical young man. There are different interpretations of the word practical. A person may be honorable, tender hearted and possess other praiseworthy traits and yet be practical. But with some persons being practical means being selfish. Be this as it may, Stanford knew enough to look out for his own interests, and when those interests conflicted with other persons' interests he was not so impractical as to sacrifice himself.

When he had scarcely come of age his practical nature led him to argue that, whereas a family is an expensive luxury, when he married he would select some girl for a wife who had some means. He had nothing himself except his position with the house of Douglas & Sons, importers, but he was industrious and had the same chance for promotion as the other clerks. He was considered a model young man by all who knew him and one who, if he did not take a high stand in the world, would at least take a respectable one.

Bessie Ellison was his favorite among the girls of his acquaintance. She was an orphan and lived with an aunt, Miss Perkins. Miss Perkins was also of a practical turn of mind, and since she was anxious to see her niece married, with a view to having children in whom the aunt might take an interest, and noticing that Bessie and Arthur seemed to be pleased with each other, she was inclined to facilitate their union.

One evening when Arthur called and Bessie happened to be out Miss Perkins grew purposely confidential and let out the fact that she would give Bessie $10,000 at her marriage and leave her $20,000 more in her will. Arthur profited by the information. He was very fond of Bessie and had become dependent upon her as a repository of those matters that most concerned him. Indeed, he was far more dependent upon her than he realized.



"DO YOU SUPPOSE ARTHUR CONFESSED TO SHIELD THE REAL THIEF?"

He did not suspect that in her, underneath an unobtrusive demeanor, there was a great deal of good sense and plenty of what is called character. While he failed to realize that it would trouble him if he should see her about to unite with another, he was perfectly aware of the value of $10,000 and what could be done with it, besides the $20,000 that would come later.

The young man continued his attentions to Miss Ellison, who had the opinion of him that he had of himself and had the opinion of herself that he had of her. In other words, she rated him up to his full value, but was unconscious of her own merits.

Stanford made no declaration till he had considered the matter thoroughly, then made a proposition of marriage. She was a trifle disappointed that he did not show more zest, but she knew him to be a practical sort of a fellow, besides, she could not expect one who was her superior in every respect to be very demonstrative. The French people have an adage that one of a couple loves, while the other is loved Bessie felt honored in being permitted to love Arthur Stanford, and she gladly accepted him.

Miss Perkins was much pleased at the engagement, which she considered she had brought about, and was as much pleased with herself for her tactical management as with its result. Meanwhile the young couple were apparently growing more and more interested in each other and were making arrangements for their wedding.

One day a thunderbolt fell upon the Perkins household. Miss Perkins received a note from Stanford confessing that he had been guilty of a criminal act. He had entered the private office of Mr. Douglas, the junior member of the firm of Douglas & Son, and seeing a pile of bills on a desk, he had been suddenly overwhelmed with an uncontrollable desire to possess them and had taken them. Later he had confessed his crime and been retained in his position on probation. He felt it his duty to release Bessie from her engagement.

Bessie was heartbroken. After the first shock, realizing that Arthur would be plunged in the misery of remorse, she wrote him a sympathetic note encouraging him to hope that he might redeem himself, but she was silent upon the subject of an acceptance of a release. Then she called on Mr. Douglas, Jr., at his house to learn from him the circumstances of the theft and how he felt toward his employee who had disgraced himself.

She found Mr. Douglas a young man about twenty-eight years old, who was preparing himself to take his father's place as manager of the business. When he learned that she had been betrothed to Stanford his manner changed toward her at once, becoming unusually kind and deferential. He listened to what she had to say, then said to her:

"It gives me great pleasure to assure you that Mr. Stanford is not a thief, though he has confessed himself one. The bills he admitted he had stolen were returned by the real thief."

A great joy welled up in Bessie's breast.

"Do you mean it? No; you are too kind to me. You are trying to shield me."

"Listen. I left the bills on my desk and went out of my office. Stanford came in while I was gone. Thinking that he had been the only one in my office during my absence, I accused him of the theft. At first he denied it, but later confessed. Before his confession the real thief returned the bills, admitting that he had taken them."

Bessie was astonished. She sat looking at Mr. Douglas fixedly for some time, then asked:

"Do you suppose Arthur confessed to shield the real thief?"

"I don't know his motive. It is a mystery to me."

"I shall send for him at once and renew my engagement with him."

Mr. Douglas was silent.

"Should I not do so?" she asked eagerly.

"That is for you to decide. I would suggest, however, that you first discover his motive in this matter."

"I shall ask him at once."

"Will he tell you?"

Bessie was silent. Arthur had not given her his confidence in the first place, and he was not likely to do it now.

"I feel it incumbent on me," continued Mr. Douglas, "to endeavor to unravel the mystery because it has occurred in this concern. If you like I can give you the solution when I have learned it."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Douglas. I shall leave the matter entirely in your hands, remaining myself inactive. When you solve the problem kindly drop me a line, and I will call for it."

"Rather permit me to bring it to you. Your visits here might defeat the purpose."

Bessie left him relieved of one anxiety to be confronted by another. Her lover was not a thief, but there was a question whether his confession was caused by a noble or an ignoble motive.

She waited impatiently for Mr. Douglas' report, but he did not make any report.

Then she wrote him asking what progress he had made, and he answered her in person. He said that he had learned something that had led him to form an opinion of Stanford's motive in confessing himself a thief, but since it was only an opinion he would prefer not to make it known to her. She asked him if what he considered to be the solution reflected in any way upon Arthur Stanford. His reply was that since it was merely a matter of opinion he would be as inexcusable if he answered the second as the first question.

It was evident from this that what Mr. Douglas suspected was detrimental to Mr. Stanford. Bessie had herself heard a report that had set her to thinking. It was that Arthur had been seen several times recently in company with the daughter of a wealthy man—indeed, a millionaire. She suspected that Mr. Douglas' opinion was based on this report. She could not but contrast his sense of honor, his delicacy, with what she suspected Arthur to have been guilty of. But with her, as with Douglas, it was only a suspicion.

"I will state an inference of my own," she said to Douglas, "and leave it to you whether you shall tell me if it coincides with the opinion you have formed. I suspect Mr. Stanford of confessing a deed he did not commit to induce me to break my engagement with him that he might be free to marry into a wealthy family."

"We have both arrived at the same suspicion," was the reply.

"You mean conclusion."

"Well, be it conclusion, if you like that word better."

When Mr. Douglas rose to go he asked that the acquaintance might be continued and received permission to call again without reference to the matter that had brought the two together. Stanford continued in the employ of Douglas & Son. In time his engagement with the young lady to whom he had been paying attention was announced. One day Bessie Ellison met him on the street and cut him.

Then it was announced that his engagement was broken. He appeared one evening at Bessie's home, claimed that his object in confessing a theft he had not committed had been with a view to testing her love for him and confessed that he had discovered that he was so completely wrapped up in her that he could not live without her.

"I am sorry," she said coldly. "Your confession comes too late. I am engaged to Mr. Douglas."

Eight Men Killed.

TOULON, Jan. 7.—Eight men were killed yesterday by an explosion in the stokehold of the French battleship Massena. The Massena, accompanied by two cruisers, was proceeding for Bizerta. She was passing the Hyeres Islands when the steam collector pipe of one of the boilers burst. The warship was immediately stopped and the engine room staff rushed to the stokehold, where they found a petty officer, six stokers and an artificer lying on the floor dead.

Woman Publisher Now In the Field.

A woman publisher has her quiet private office on the first floor of one of the august old brownstone houses on a cross street just off Fifth avenue, New York. The books of her clients are reviewed as professional and not amateur literary efforts, and she prints only those that come up to her own standard. Needless to say, many books receive her imprint which other houses have "turned down;" but, on the other hand, she can "turn down" also.

In this way authors need not feel that their books are privately printed with as little discrimination as by a job printer. As the authors receive more than 50 per cent profit, they can also feel that the publication of their ideas is not an idle indulgence of personal vanity. Several recent novels are in their second edition, and a series of essays has taken a standard place in pedagogics.

A book on dolls that have had historic or royal prestige is now under way at the woman publisher's suggestion, and a too bulky set of illustrated stories for children is being broken up into a series. Leaflets of matter prompted by the eugenics interest, the recent hygiene congress and the like are to make a monthly appearance.

Helpful Hints.

If you will include a steel crochet needle in the implements for use in the sewing room you will have something as good as any patent ripper ever invented. Simply catch the hook under the thread in the stitches or bastings and pull them out in double quick time.

When a hole is worn in your carpet rug whip over the edges of the hole with yarn matching the colors in the rug. Then, also with yarn, fill in the hole with very tight crocheted stitches, using a plain stitch. Then over this work little loops of yarn that will correspond to the loops in the weave of the carpet itself.

Instead of using a wooden "egg" darner, try putting a worn stocking over your own shoe tree. Then you will be able to see exactly how the darned place will lie on your foot and can make it loose or tight as necessity requires.

The New Fur Coats.

The new fur coats fit just a little more neatly than the straighter lined garments of last season did. They do not really define the figure, but they certainly suggest it, and, though it is still the fashion to have a straight and young girlish back, the front of one's figure may hint at a few womanly curves without flying in the face of fashion.

BLACK AND WHITE COSTUME.

There are in Paris formal tailored costumes, trot-about tailored costumes and what are called demitailleurs, which partake of the characteristics of both styles.

The smart suit illustrated is a bit more elegant than a simple trotting suit, yet it is not luxurious enough in style or material to be a carriage costume.

The coat is made of black serge with trimmings of Persian lamb and ornaments of black braid. The skirt is of black and white plaid cloth, is built on straight lines and is trimmed with a wide band of fur.

A black hat, white gloves and patent leather boots complete a stunning suit.

"FEEBLE STOMACH

Causes Digestive Weakness and Poisons the Entire System.

"No one can have suffered more than I did with stomach trouble," writes Phil. E. Pascalar, well known at St. Andrews Corners. "My doctor told me my indigestion and sleeplessness were due to poisons in the blood. Certainly my condition was desperate, and it seemed from the despondent feelings that swept over me that would lose my reason. I happened to read about Dr. Hamilton's Pills and bought five boxes from the druggist. Such body-cleansing pills I never used; they were mild and yet quite strong enough to drive all the humors out of the blood. My stomach gained strength rapidly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I improved so much that in eight weeks I could eat and digest all ordinary food. Depression and weariness passed away and I am, thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills, enjoying robust good health."

A FOOD-TAX SUGGESTION

Sir Joseph Lawrence, one of the British Unionists, is out with a plan to give a bounty on wheat from the British dominions, instead of imposing a duty on foreign wheat to give the dominions a preference. What has been said all along by the Canadian newspapers on this question holds as good in regard to Sir Joseph Lawrence's suggestion as it does to the food-taxes plan. The Canadian people will not be a party to any act that would suggest they were trying to obtain sacrifices by the British workingman for their benefit. Canadians are prospering quite sufficiently without asking that the cost of his staples be increased to the British workers. The connecting of Mr. Borden's name with the matter was an unfortunate stab that goes far to demonstrate that the British Liberals are not at all averse to using Canadian brands to light their own tortuous path. If they think they can make a point on the British Unionists by dragging in the Canadian Conservative leader, they do not hesitate to do so, though when Mr. Borden was in England he maintained a most discreet and non-partisan attitude toward both parties.

The British political situation is such that it must have an increasing interest for Canadians, because Canada is opening wide the door to Imperialism, and a closer connection with Britain and her affairs. The Harcourt dispatch to the heads of the various self-governing dominions is a sufficient indication of how the way is being mapped out for closer relations on the subject of the Imperial Foreign policy.

A "MOVIE" INVENTION

The announcement is made that Edison has perfected the moving picture-photograph device upon which he has been working for three or four years. In his laboratory at West Orange, New Jersey, a test was made a few days ago showing at the sound-emitting moving picture has at last arrived. It is only a question of time before the device becomes commercially applied in the theatres, and a great innovation it will make. Imagine, if you can, a phonograph attachment booming forth the resounding roar of cannon as they belch forth their smoke in the picture. Instead of a silent storm at sea, we shall have the whistling of the wind, the moaning of the bar, the "break, break, break" of the waves, upon our ears. In the pictures of fires, we shall hear the firemen shouting, the crash of breaking windows, and the thud of falling walls. The clatter of the hoofs of a squadron of cavalry will become as natural as the sight of that squadron passing on the canvass. The art of taking great scenes in the moving pictures has been carried a long way. Some of the storms at sea depicted by the camera are really magnificent. Many of the adventures they portray in themselves carry quite a danger to the principals. The whole world is being ransacked for the best there is in scenes for melodramatic playlets, for educational novelties When the peculiar sounds of each individual happening in the pictures whether it be the grotesque clatter of a Hottentot's tongue as he speaks in a South African lion hunt play, or whether it be the growl of the polar bear, or the shrill squeal of a pig when its tail is twisted, are given by a phonograph synchronously with the picture movements, we shall have an invention of great delight to humanity. The records used on the phonograph are six minutes long, two minutes longer than the best hitherto, but it will be necessary to have much longer phonograph records to equal the length of some of the reels. But Edison ought to find it possible to accomplish this as he has given over the chief difficulty of making sound and action harmonize with exactitude.

TRIBUTE TO GENIUS

In the excitement of the election contest on Monday, we omitted to express our pleasure at meeting Mr. Jas. L. Livingstone, editor of the Grimsby Independent and Canadian Horseman, here on Sunday, and to express our disapproval of so gifted a writer taking the public platform. Grimsby Gim has ability worthy of a better cause, but we suppose eccentricities of genius must be excused. We knew he was the champion rough and tumble paragrapher of the Niagara district, since the death of the late J. R. Cameron, but we never knew, or even suspected, that he was able to perform the lofty feats of oratory as he was guilty of at the Grand on Sunday evening againts the local option by-law. He spoke for two and a half hours and most of that time he held the audience "spiel" bound.

The Canadian Almanac for 1913, a publictaion issued each year by the Copp, Clark Company of Toronto, is on the market for the current year, and is more valuable than ever as a source of information. Justice Sutherland, addressing the gradutaing class of Windsor Collegiate Institute said; "The young men of to-day with moderate salaries, are spending five times the amount their fathers spent, and the young women are encouraging them to do so."

It is a remarkable tribute to the genius of the men who framed the Bank Act of 1871 that their work has had to undergo so little remodelling in the four decades since. INSPECTORS INCOMPETENT.

Scales Men Appointed by Political Pull, Says Report.

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—A report has just been placed in the hands of the Government by the commission appointed to investigate certain charges and grievances of the farmers and dairymen of the eastern counties of the province.

The official text of the report has not yet been made public, but it is understood that a number of reforms including greater protection for farmers and dairymen, are recommended. Concerning present conditions it declares that practically all of the weights and measures inspectors of the Inland Revenue Department in Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec are absolutely incompetent, and were appointed by the late Government for political reasons.

That the weights and measures law and regulations of the Dominion are not applicable to present needs and conditions, and should be immediately revised and improved.

That 90 per cent. of the scales used by cheese exporters in Ontario give wrong weights, and that because of this the farmers of the province have during the past ten years suffered to the extent of nearly a million dollars.

INJECTION OF SCENTS.

Fashionable Beauties' Latest Craze In The Empire's Capital.

"Have you seen that?" said the London chemist, handing one of our representatives a dainty little box lined with rose-colored silk, says London Ideas. In it lay half a dozen tiny bottles of eau-de-Cologne and a small gold hypodermic syringe.

"No, what's the idea?"

"I'll tell you. Fashionable beauties are giving up the idea of pouring scent on themselves and on their clothes. Dozens of them now inject their favorite perfume by means of a tiny syringe like this.

"Special preparations of these perfumes have to be made, as ordinary scents, when injected, give forth no odor. These preparations are very expensive—this box alone will cost you fifty shillings—but then they last very much longer than others. An injection of old violet scent, for example, gives a pleasant odor to the fair one's skin that lasts for days.

"There's another thing about these scents," continued the chemist. "Although the majority of users inject them simply to exhale eau-de-Cologne, heliotrope, or whatever their favorite perfume is, yet in a large number of cases they are injected as a tonic.

"Some perfumes are said to have extraordinary effects. According to one doctor who has experimented with them, lavender water is fatal to the microbes of consumption. Certainly the scents extracted from rosemary, thyme and mint are excellent antiseptics. Oil of geranium is another deadly enemy of microbes.

"White rose induces an indolent, don't-care frame of mind, as does patchouli. Both bergamot and white violet are said to clear the brain and induce a steady stream of thought.

"As a matter of fact, I know a good many men who inject certain perfumes regularly into their arms in order to get into working trim.

"Ambergris is one of the favorite perfumes used for this purpose. It has the remarkable effect of driving away the blues and clearing the brain, making the mental faculties livelier, just as ammonia or smelling salts do.

A special preparation of musk, too, is said to be an excellent tonic, and drives away that 'tired feeling.'

"The overuse of these perfumes, however, is extremely dangerous, more dangerous, if anything, than taking ordinary drugs, as morphia.

Stiffer materials will be used this spring and satin cloth has a tendency to replace charmeuse.

A BIT DIFFERENT

Widely familiar as the Chateau Laurier has become already in its short career, the recent publication issued by the Grand Trunk dealing with its salient features, has served to win for it a host of new friends. One of these is a prominent business man from New England, whose experience of hotel conditions has been both wide and varied, who has written to one of the company's representatives as follows:

"I have just received the Chateau Laurier booklet, which you kindly sent to us as promised, and I am very glad indeed to hand it along to some friends of mine who are thinking of a trip to Canada. My wife and I went to Ottawa for no other reason at all, but to stay a few days at the new hotel, about which we had heard so much, and it may interest you to know that we were delighted with the house, the efficiency of its service and the cordiality of its management. The hotel is indeed beautiful, and I have no doubt will quickly become a Mecca for tourists who are looking for something 'a bit different.'"

A BEAUTIFUL WORK OF ART

The Review has received from the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. a copy of a new book just issued by that Co. entitled "The Imperial Highway." The book is beautifully illustrated with scenes along the line of the great railway, from ocean to ocean, and also of the company's steamships on the high seas. It is handsomely bound in leather and is a credit to the publishing house, as well as the author, A. N. Homer, F. R.G.S.

FAILS TO ACCEPT THE CHALLENGE

The Examiner keeps talking about the Buckhorn bridge but fails to accept Mr. J. H. Burnham's challenge on even terms. It is quite willing that he should pay the money to the charities proposed, but takes mighty good care not to accept the challenge to do so itself. However, Mr. Burnham is doing what the Examiner is not doing and is bringing the whole matter up in the House of Commons and will know whose fault it is.

$73,500 FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND COLLEGIATE

Needed This Year By the Board of Education

The Board of Education will require $73,500 to operate the schools this year, and the City Council will be asked to provide that amount on monthly instalments.

The Council will also be asked to provide $5,250 for the purchase of property, to be used in enlarging the King Edward school grounds.

ENGINEER COULD NOT SEE SIGNAL FOR THE STEAM

East Bound C.P.R. Freight Struck G.T.R. Cars at the Diamond

Running against the signal which was hidden to him by steam from his engine, the engineer on a C.P.R. eastbound freight train ran his engine into the freight cars immediately behind the G.T.R. shunter, badly wrecking and derailing a box car and two flats at the diamond of the two railroads about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The Grand Trunk shunter had moved cars down the Belleville track and was about to take some cars loaded with a tip two of which were wrecked, to the Cordage Company on the Port Hope track. The signal permitted the G. T. R. train to cross and the C. P. R. engineer evidently thought that it would be his turn to pass over the diamond after the G. T. R. train had crossed on the Belleville line. As he afterwards said, the steam escaping from his engine prevented him from seeing that the signal was still against him and he could not see the approaching G.T.R. train as the signal house was in the way, so consequently the two trains met at the crossing. Two box cars and a flat on the G.T.R. were derailed and badly wrecked but the C.P.R. engine came out of the fray with little else than a broken pilot. The G. T. R. engine escaped injury. The Lindsay auxiliary and the C. P. R. auxiliary working at the wreck near Pontypool were sent for and cleared the track.

"THE FATAL WEDDING"

The greatest of the plays to afford theatregoers pleasure this season is a return of the famous play, "The Fatal Wedding," one of the best plays of a decade ago. A play of extreme dramatic worth and intense heart interest. A capable company of players and a lavish scenic embellishment makes the attraction a worthy one. "The Fatal Wedding" will be seen at the Grand Opera House on Saturday next, matinee and night.

Norwood Council

Messrs. Stanley Hendren, W. E. Packenham, B. W. Squire and Thos. Morrison were elected to the Norwood Council

LATEST NEWS OF OSHKIGMONG

Special Correspondence.

Oshkigmong, Jan. 7.—The usual festivity of the New Year was celebrated in the customary manner, and with much exultation, both by the young and the older natives of Chemong, more so by the children, whose voices could be heard singing the New Year festive songs, interspersed with greetings as they visited each home in the village, while the sun was yet below the horizon and throughout the day every one was on a "quivive." Skating was much indulged in by the young people, as the ice is in first class condition. In the afternoon a hockey match was played between the Westerners and Easterners, resulting in favor of the latter. Leslie McCue won the boys' race, and Miss Clara Coppaway the girls.'

Meanwhile the good ladies had set a table in the hall, which was substantially provided with eatables, pleasant to the sense of taste, which was creditably manifested by about one hundred and fifty guests. After having satisfied the stomach and enjoying a smoke with a pipe of peace, all retired to the upper chamber, where the young entertained a large audience. The program consisted of mouthorgan and violin selections, songs and duets, etc. The speakers were Messrs. Jeremiah Crowe of Hiawatha; Alfred McCue, Joseph Whetung and Zack Knott. The chair was occupied by Mr. Jos. Whetung, jr.

Watchnight service was held in the church, conducted by Kezheabe, ung and Mr Isiah Kishego. The church was well packed to bid good-bye to the old year and to welcome the New.

Mr. H. C. Buffam and his young bride arrived here and were conducted to their new house by the Chief and Mr. D. Whetung. A reception was given to them by a few of the ladies, which was much appreciated by the young couple. The school was opened by Mr. Buffam on Monday the 6th.

The C.A.C are arranging to have an open air carnival on the 15th inst. This will be a grand affair of the season.

Mr and Mrs. R. Tobico, and Irene, have returned from Hiawatha, where they spent New Year's.

A LADY "PED."

On her return from Hiawatha Thursday of last week, and through some misunderstanding through the wire, Miss Vinnie Whetung decided to come as far as Bridgenorth on the Ennismore stage, and there to be met by her uncle, who was at that time under some special engagement. After waiting some length of time and her patience having exhausted, she concluded that her uncle was not coming, and being a good pedestrian herself, decided to walk from the port of Bridgenorth to Chemong on ice, the distance being about seven miles. The time it took Vinnie to walk the distance would surprise Dave Hartley.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Diary Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—The contest over the price of wheat on the board of trade today looked like a draw most of the day, but the bears were on top at the close with prices 1-4c to 1-2c under yesterday. It took considerable loading by longs with profits in sight, and much pressure from short sellers to check a further advance in corn. Final prices were practically unchanged. Oats were quiet and close irregular, while provisions declined 10c to 27 1-2c.

The Liverpool market closed 1-8d to 3-8d higher on wheat, and 1-4d to 1-2d higher on corn. Berlin closed unchanged on wheat. Budapest 1c higher, and Antwerp unchanged.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat came stronger at an advance of 1 1-2d to 3d. The demand was good from foreign buyers, and a fair amount of business was done for May-June shipment, but exporters were not disposed to accept the bids for early shipment, as they have confidence in the future course of prices. Cables on oats were discouraging, and bids were all below cost. The local market for coarse grains was very dull. There is practically no demand for oats, as buyers are all well stocked up. Demand for flour for local and country account is fair, but the export trade is dull. Millfeed steady. Butter and cheese quiet. The trade in eggs is only fair. A lot of stock is coming in from the United States. Dressed hogs fairly active and firm.

ABOUT SIR RICHARD.

Further Anecdotes About the Valiant Old Liberal Fighter.

People are very busy discussing the volume of Sir Richard Cartwright's reminiscences, especially the portions that lampoon the great men of his day. The famous statesman has probably left out one anecdote which is told about him in western Ontario. There was a time in his career when he did not have a constituency to send him to Parliament. His party had been looking out for one, and a vacancy occurred in a riding out near Guelph. It was considered a likely one, and Sir Richard went out to look over the ground.

The member for the local House, who happened to be a Liberal, brought him a piece of good news. One of the most influential Conservatives in the neighborhood had quarreled with the candidate, and as Sir Richard knew him personally, there seemed to be a chance to win him over. They decided to go and call. The man whom they sought greeted them in his garden, but his manner was not too cordial. There was a little natural restraint all round, but while they were talking a "gentleman-of-the road" came in to ask financial aid. He was ordered out, and the incident suggested a remark to Sir Richard.

"You don't appear to approve of tramps," he said.

"No," replied the Conservative, "political or otherwise."

That ended the interview.

The very uncomplimentary comments upon Hon. Edward Blake contained in the new book have astonished a great many persons. They fit in with a story that has been going the rounds, and the two things go to show that the Blakes and Sir Richard were not particularly fond of one another. People may have noticed that no local paper contained any tribute to the dead statesman from Hon. Samuel Blake. It is explained that one person approached the great champion of Protestantism, and that the following reply was given to him by the person who received his message: "Mr. Blake's opinion of Sir Richard Cartwright during his lifetime was such that he would rather not comment upon him now that he is dead."

World's Biggest Woman.

The biggest woman in the world died in Montreal the other day. She weighed 780 pounds. Her name was Justine Masson. Her mind became affected some time ago, and she was taken in charge by the Assistance Publique.

During her stay there her exploits became famous. She was so big and so strong that in her fits of insanity she used to break down the walls of the rooms in which she was enclosed, and it was finally found necessary to build a special house for her outside the main building.

She was so large that a special coffin had to be built for her. Then no undertaker could be found who would endanger his hearse with the weight, so the body had to be removed in an express wagon.

On one occasion she caused a sensation at Bonaventure Station by insisting on getting into a victoria to be driven to her home. She got in, but the carriage had not proceeded very far before it broke down. She then, it is said, took a street car, but could not get through the door and had to stand on the back platform, blocking the passage so that no one else could get in.

On another occasion she was arrested and an attempt made to take her to the police station. Four policemen from nearby beats were unable to handle her, so the reserves were called out. Ultimately eight officers bundled her into a piano wagon.

Mummy 6,000 Years Old.

Some human remains have been discovered at Sakkara, about fifteen miles from Cairo, belonging to the period of the end of the Second and the beginning of the Third Dynasties, about 4,000 years B.C.

Among them is the skeleton of a woman about thirty-five years of age, which was found completely invested in a large series of bandages, and next to the body was a corroded woven cloth. The corrosion, says Professor Smith, was presumptive evidence that some material (probably crude natron) was applied to the surface of the body, with a view to its preservation, and he has thus been able to trace to a higher antiquity than had previously been done the use of this method for preserving the bodies of the dead.

The skeleton is now in the museum of the College of Surgeons.

The Beaked Whale.

Some time ago a specimen of Layard's beaked whale was found stranded on a beach near Port Elizabeth, South Africa. This find was of great importance to zoology, because hitherto very little has been accurately known concerning this strange inhabitant of the ocean.

The specimen found near Port Elizabeth, and since mounted in the museum there, is a male nineteen feet two inches long. From the lower jaw project upward two tusks with sharp enameled teeth. The creature could open its beak only four or five inches at the outer end and its gullet was so narrow that it is evident that the animal devoured only very small fish and seaweed.

The beaked whale is said to furnish oil of an exceptionally fine quality.

A Patriotic Landlord.

An English landlord, Sir Fortescue Flannery, has informed farmers on his Essex estate that he will take no rent for land on which sugar beets are grown. He thinks this crop should be more extensively grown in Great Britain and is trying to encourage it within his own sphere of influence.

Chinese Albumen.

German manufacturers of ginger bread and spice cake use quantities of "Chinese albumen," and even the large restaurants and hotels use some of it. Chinese albumen is the dried whites of hen or duck eggs.

Bears a Brazilian Title.

Canadians will not soon forget Earl of Dundonald, the gallant G. O. C., who had a slight misunderstanding with the Government. Lord Dundonald's birthday was celebrated recently and an English admirer remarks that not many would recognize him under the title of Marquis of Marnaham. This title is of Brazilian origin, and comes to the earl from his grandfather, the naval commander of many exploits. After he was dismissed the service (an error that was redressed eighteen years later, when he was reinstated in the higher rank) the then Lord Cochrane placed his services at the disposal of other countries, such as Chili and Brazil, and for his assistance to the latter in its successful war of independence, the British Admiral was given a Marquisate. This is probably the only Brazilian title borne by an English subject.

When Trousers Were Scarce.

Trousers were banned among Quakers until the nineteenth century was halfway through. A correspondent of the London Notes and Queries writes on Feb. 2, 1866, that "in our retired northern dales the Quakers tenaciously held by their breeches as a testimony against the modern vanity of trousers. I often heard my father, who could not endure the idea of trousers 'slutthering about his legs,' say that when he was a boy all the male population from three-years old and upward, except sailors, wore cocked hats and knee breeches and that if a man was seen in trousers he was at once set down as a mariner."

No, Cordelia, a dancing academy is not necessarily a hop joint.

Judging From His Nose.

The vacant deanery of Durham has been accepted by Canon Hensley Henson, and Westminster Abbey in consequence loses one of its most interesting personalities.

The new Dean has often resembled the cat among the pigeons, for many of his actions and utterances have created a flutter in the dovecotes of his brethren. He has always adopted a very tolerant view towards Nonconformists, and a short time ago he created something approaching a sensation among his fellow clerics by offering to preach in a Birmingham Nonconformist chapel.

Dean Henson had a distinguished career at Oxford, and he has always been a prolific writer on subjects connected with his Church. As he is not yet fifty he has every reason to be satisfied with his rate of progress. His ready wit has always stood him in good stead. On one occasion he had a little encounter with a London cabman who thought the Dean's tip lacking in liberality. "'Ere," demanded the cabby, "wot's this for, guv'nor?" "Judging from your nose," replied the Dean, "it's for drink."

Suffragettes Lose Ground.

CHRISTIANIA, Jan. 8. The next Norwegian Storthing will contain no woman member or alternate, it became apparent yesterday: and opponents of equal suffrage are gloating over the unexpectedly poor showing made by the suffragettes in the recent Parliamentary elections. The last Legislature contained one woman member.

BUSINESS TAX WAS DISCUSSED

N. C. Cameron, Secretary of the Peterborough Retail Merchants' Association, and Vice-President of the Provincial Association, was one of a large deputation that waited on Premier Whitney and the members of the Cabinet in Toronto yesterday in regard to the business tax. The deputation asked that the tax be reduced to 10 per cent. of the assessed value of the building. At present there is a graded scale from 25 to 75 per cent.

MAJORITY OF 13 AT BURLEIGH

One hundred and forty votes were polled in the township of Burleigh on the local option question, seventy-nine for the by-law and sixty-one against, losing on the three-fifths clause by thirteen.

Parents Bereaved

Margaret, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Swanger, 58 Sherbrooke street, passed away this morning. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

OTHERS MAY GO OUT.

Sympathy Strike Threatened In Women's Garment Trade.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Both sides in the garment workers' strike drew their lines closer yesterday in preparation for a protracted struggle. The employers who belong to the Clothing Trade Manufacturers' Association met and voted not to recognize the closed shop, nor to deal with the workers' union. Some 75,000 members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union began voting last night on the question of whether they should join the United Garment Workers in their demand for higher wages and better working conditions.

Leaders of the international predicted that the strike would be called, but said it would take probably until Saturday to poll the whole vote.

Seventy-five manufacturers of children's clothing met yesterday afternoon and arranged to organise. A strike fund was raised and the manufacturers announced that they were ready to fight to a finish.

Thirty-three of the 37 strikers arrested during recent riots in Brooklyn were fined $10 each yesterday for disorderly conduct.

R. T. Woodside Drops Dead.

CORNWALL, Jan. 8.—R. T. Woodside, superintendent of the Stormont mills of the Canadian Cottons, Ltd., dropped dead on the way home from the mill shortly after 6.40 o'clock last night. He was in his usual good health and had worked all day. It is probable that death occurred from the rupture of a blood vessel in the brain.

Mr. Woodside came originally from Milltown, N.B. He went to Hamilton and then to Merritton, and came here nearly eight years ago. He leaves a wife and six children, one an infant only a few days old.

WANT ANCESTOR'S LAND.

Frenchmen To Sue For Site of Buffalo Church.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—The plaintiffs in a most interesting civil law suit in America, involving the ownership of a large quantity of real estate in Buffalo, New York, start from Havre for New York on board La Lorraine of the French Line on Saturday.

The claimants are three in number—Henry Le Couteulx de Caumont, his brother Louis, both of whom are great-grandsons of the French pioneer Louis Le Couteulx, and Baron Emmanuel de Bizi, a great-great-grandson of the pioneer. Only the first two of these, however, will go to America.

Their object is to recover the land which is now the site of the Roman Catholic Church of St. Louis in the City of Buffalo.

The pioneer Le Couteulx died in Buffalo in 1840.

$20,000,000 Loss In California.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8.—It is estimated that twenty million dollars' worth of damage has been done in Southern California by the extreme cold weather. Practically every orange grove in the citrus belt has suffered. The loss to railroads through this curtailment will be $5,000,000.

The weather moderated considerably yesterday, but the mercury began to drop at sundown, and by midnight the fruitgrowers were in the midst of the final "killing frost" of the present cold snap.

Rockefeller Still Elusive.

NASSAU, New Providence, Jan. 8. Efforts made to communicate with William Rockefeller, who has been staying at an hotel here since his arrival, Jan. 3, from Miami, Fla., have proved abortive. Enquirers at the hotel yesterday were informed that Mr. Rockefeller was not well enough to be interviewed about business affairs.

Wouldn't Be Low.

"I understand that Mrs. De Style is a great stickler for having everything of the most exclusive kind."

"Yes; she discharged her doctor because he told her that her temperature was too low."

Plump Whales.

The whales caught last year in the north Pacific were the fattest ever known. The blubber lay fifteen inches deep.

Cut Off Their Own Heads.

Perhaps the most striking proposal ever made by a Canadian grand jury was that made by the jury at the May Sessions in Toronto in 1909. It forms a curious comment on British institutions, and gives the last word upon the jury system, the foundation of British liberty, and the institution which made Athens the most thorough-going democracy the world has seen:

"We recommend the abolition of the grand jury as being superfluous, for the following reasons:

"All cases that come before the grand jury are previously investigated by the magistrates, whose trained mind is naturally better able to deal with them than the minds of the inexpert laymen comprising the grand jury.

"Malicious prosecutions are safeguarded against by the high ethical standard of the magistracy and by the petit jury.

"The grand jury has the power to defeat the ends of justice by shielding a criminal with whom they have sympathy.

"The annual expense of many thousands of dollars, for which no value is received, could be saved to the taxpayers of the country."

Haulage Cheaper In West.

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—Presenting statements which showed that whereas operating expenses on western divisions of the C.P.R., except for the mountainous section of British Columbia, were lower than those on many of the eastern divisions, the average earnings per mile in the west were higher, the Government yesterday afternoon commenced the presentation of its case in the western freight rates enquiry which has now resumed, before the railway commission.

PHYSICIANS Failed to Cure Rheumatism

Miss Flora Chapman Vividly Describes Her Sufferings and Ultimate Cure With "Nerviline."

"After being an enthusiastic user of Nerviline for years, I feel it my duty to tell you personally what your wonderful preparation has done for me.

"I suffered torture from rheumatism and heart trouble, tried scores of so-called remedies, consulted for weeks and months with Toronto's most eminent physicians, but derived only slight benefit.

"A friend insisted on my using Nerviline, and to my surprise a vigorous rubbing of this powerful liniment eased the pains and reduced the stiffness in my joints. I continued to use Nerviline and was permanently cured. I am now perfectly well, and for three years have had no rheumatism at all. I know many families where no other medicine but Nerviline is kept—it is so useful in minor ailments like earache, toothache, neuralgia, coughs, colds, lumbago, and sciatica. I call Nerviline my "Life Guard," and urge all to try its merit."

32 PATIENTS TREATED AT QUEEN MARY HOSPITAL

Cases From Surrounding Townships Will be Accepted Providing the Municipality Pays for Maintenance —Revenue From Pay Patients $596 70

Patients from the municipalities of Lakefield, Smith, North Monaghan, Douro, Otonabee, Ennismore, Dummer and Cavan, afflicted with contagious diseases, will be cared for at the Queen Mary hospital so long as there is accommodation, provided the municipality becomes responsible for their maintenance.

The decision was reached yesterday afternoon at a brief meeting of the Queen Mary Hospital Board. Mayor Bradburn and Alderman Duncan were present and Medical Health Officer McPherson. The latter reported that six patients were in the hospital at the commencement of the year 1912. During the year twenty-six patients were admitted all suffering from scarlet fever, making a total of thirty-two treated. All were discharged in first class condition, and the year closed with the hospital free from patients.

In 1193 days of treatment, the sum of $3687.46 was expended, including over $200 for permanent improvements to buildings and grounds. The receipts from pay patients were $596.70, making an average of $3.10 per day.

BOARD OF HEALTH ASKS THAT DRINKING CUPS BE ABOLISHED

(Protect School Children)

At the last meeting of the 1912 Board of Education last night, a letter from the Board of Health was read asking that the drinking cups in the schools be abolished. The matter was referred to the Property committee.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood read a report of the committee appointed to inspect the Penny savings banks in the Toronto public schools December 15 last, and recommended the Board to consider the matter.

A letter was read from Principal H. R. H. Kenner advocating new text books on different subjects for use in the Collegiate Institute. The motion carried.

Mr. Crane made a few remarks concerning the work during the last year, and referred to the retirement from the Board of an old member, Mr. Robert Fair.

Mr. Fair responded in a few words saying that it had been a great pleasure to work on the Board and that if he had made a few mistakes he had always tried to do his best. He felt no ill-feeling to the electors and hoped that the man they had chosen to take his place would succeed and do better than he had done. Mr. Fair's remarks were received with a hearty burst of applause.

1200 BEAUTIES EXHIBITED AT THE POULTRY SHOW

An Attractive Array of Birds From All Parts of Ontario

The Poultry Show will be formally opened by Mr. J. H. Burnham tonight.

Twelve hundred of the finest poultry specimens in Ontario are being judged at the annual exhibition of the Peterborough Poultry Association in the Market Hall. A large number of ardent bird fanciers and their friends visited the exhibition last night, and enthusiastic exclamations of praise and surprise were heard on every side. Interested poultry breeders will find splendid specimens to admire, all of them showing the best care and attention to breeding possible.

Secretary "Joe" Kelly is probably one of the busiest men at the exhibition, with the possible exception of Mr. Joseph Bennett, who has the extremely difficult task of awarding the prize cards. The judging commenced yesterday afternoon, but the work, which is necessarily slow, had not proceeded very far by last evening. The complete list of the prize winners will be published. There are over two hundred entries this year, more than in 1911, and many of the birds are pronounced by competent authorities to be fifty per cent. ahead in every way than any shown in the past five years. There are many local exhibitors, including Mr. George Paxman, George Buller, James Baptie and Clarence Henry.

Some beautiful fan-tail pigeons at the north end of the hall, were much admired, also specimens of the Homing and Trumbler pigeon variety. Stately and sleek specimens of geese and turkeys may also be examined.

There are some especially fine collections of black and white Minorcas, black and white Orphingtons also on exhibition. Some of the birds for exhibition arrived late last night, having been detained by a railroad mishap. Fine special prizes are being offered, one silver cup in particular, for the best American variety.

A feature of the exhibition last evening was the lecture by Mrs Yates on the ways of cleaning and cooking poultry.

The exhibition will be open this afternoon and to-night, closing Thursday night.

ADRIANOPLE CAPTURED OR CEDED TO THE ALLIES

Fortress Must Go One Way or the Other — Intervention Expected To-day.

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Jan. 9.—The expected joint intervention by the powers in the Turko-Balkans' may take place before evening. The Times thinks a friendly arrangement regarding Adrianople still , and was almost included when Roumania's intervention caused Turkey to stiffen her attitude.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The capitulation of Adrianople will, in the opinion of the Balkan plenipotentiaries, take place within a few days, either directly to the besieging forces or through European pressure pending some fresh developments. The Balkan delegates are keeping in closest touch with the ambassadors because they are aware that some of the questions they have most at heart depend almost entirely on the will of the powers.

Meanwhile the ambassadorial conference is doing little, hoping that the Adrianople difficulty will solve itself in some manner and thus make interference by the powers unnecessary. Moreover, this action of the ambassadors is hampered by the previous agreement that they must be unanimous in any decesion requiring active interference.

Should the fall of Adrianople still be delayed, now that the conference is suspended, it might become imperative for Europe to intervene, otherwise Europe would lose the prestige entitling her to dictate her will in smaller matters, such as creating an autonomous Albania and partitioning the Aegean Islands.

One suggestion is that, failing a better solution, Adrianople might be ceded to the powers, who could transfer to the allies after permitting the Turkish garrison to depart with the honors of war.

One of the gravest aspects of the situation, as unbiased observers view it, is the failure of Austria to give any sign of demobilization in spite of Servian sacrifices for a peaceful solution, Servia even going so far as to evacuate the Adriatic coast. Austria's action, in the opinion of some, is explained by the fact that Emperor Francis Joseph, owing to his advanced age, has practically abdicated the direction of affairs to the crown prince. The prince is entirely in the hands of the most reactionary elements, who are strongly opposed to the resurrection of the Servian and Slav races, and, wishing to take advantage of Europe's desire to avoid a great war, are imposing unjust conditions on both Servia and Montenegro.

TO HAVE FEDERAL RULE?

Plans Under Way For a Capital District It Is Declared.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—Legislation paving the way for the creation of Ottawa, Hull and suburbs into a federal district is being drafted at the Department of Justice, and may be introduced in Parliament towards the latter end of the present session.

A year ago the citizens of the capital, disgusted with the lack of efficiency shown by the civic authorities in coping with the water and typhoid situation, voted overwhelmingly in favor of a federal district. Some little time later a civic delegation, which also included a number of the most influential citizens of the city, made official representations with regard to the matter to Premier Borden, who expressed himself as favorable to the scheme, and requested that all available information and data bearing upon the question of the creation be supplied the Government.

This was attended to, and the whole thing was referred to the Justice Department for the drafting of details. These will have to be approved by the Cabinet, and it is likely that the citizens of Ottawa will also be given an opportunity of passing upon them. It is understood that in a great many respects the plan followed has been very similar to that followed by the United States Government when it created the district of Columbia at Washington.

DUCHESS SUFFERS FROM ATTACK OF PERITONITIS

Doctors Report Her Royal Highness to be Resting Easier.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Jan. 9.—The following bulletin was issued this morning after a consultation by the physicians: "The Duchess passed a comfortable night and is resting easier this morning."

Montreal, Jan. 9— The earlier bulletin was partly erroneous. A bulletin at eleven forty-five says the Duchess did not pass a good night. The patient was restless and complained of considerable pain. This morning, however, her condition showed improvement.

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—The following bulletin was issued at 11.30 last night

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught has stood the journey from Ottawa pretty well, and is now resting as comfortably as could be expected.

(Signed) E. S. Worthington.
Royal Victoria Hospital.

Deep Concern at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught is suffering from another attack of peritonitis, the same illness with which she was stricken last June. She has been transferred from Government House to the Royal Victoria Hospital at Montreal by a special train.

The announcement of her illness caused genuine regret throughout the city when made public yesterday afternoon. Since Sunday the Duchess of Connaught has been ill, and Dr. Garrow, the eminent Montreal surgeon, was called the first of the week to Government House. However, it was hoped the sickness would not develop into anything of a serious nature, and for this reason the authorities sought to avoid any unnecessary alarm on the part of the great numbers who inquired about her illness by stating that it was only of a temporary nature.

Her condition became less satisfactory yesterday morning, and the physicians decided that it was advisable to remove the patient to the Royal Victoria Hospital.

At 3.15 p.m. yesterday the following statement was issued:

"Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught was taken ill on Sunday evening, with symptoms similar to those of her previous attack of peritonitis. Dr. Garrow met Major Worthington in consultation on Monday evening. Her condition at this time was much more satisfactory, and continued so until early Wednesday morning, when there was a further rise in temperature and pulse, and an increase in abdominal pains and other symptoms.

"After further consultation between Major Worthington and Dr. Chipman and Dr. Garrow, it was decided to move her royal highness to the Royal Victoria Hospital at Montreal for further treatment."

(Signed) E. S. Worthington,
E. A. Garrow,
W. W. Chipman.

As soon as the public were acquainted with the facts of the illness, the enquiries for later information at newspaper offices were incessant.

Arrangements were made during the day for a Canadian Pacific Railway special train to move her royal highness to Montreal, and the train left at 6.16 p.m. She was accompanied by Their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught and Princess Patricia, Dr Garrow, Major Worthington, M.D., A.D.C., Capt. Bulkeley, equerry and comptroller, and Miss Pelly, lady-in waiting.

The special train was composed of a first-class coach and a baggage car. Seats were removed from the coach and a brass bed installed, in which her royal highness was placed.

Previous to the departure of the royal party, Premier Borden visited Government House.

The illness of the duchess has caused a general suspension of the social functions in the city. The dance to have been given by Col. Lowther, military secretary to his royal highness, at the Chateau Laurier last night was called off. The Saturday afternoon skating parties at Government House will be discontinued and a number of other engagements arranged for the week will be cancelled

FAMILY OF SEVEN BADLY BURNED; THREE MAY DIE

William Gough, His Wife, Two Daughters, and Three Sons Are In Hospital, Some In a Precarious Condition After Blaze In Which Their One-Roomed Shack Is Destroyed—Father Threw Babes From Window

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—When a fire broke out in a one-roomed shack on Clendenan avenue, a mile north of Davenport road, and just outside the city limits of Earlscourt, early this morning, William Gough was very badly cut and burned, his wife, who is in a delicate condition, was terribly burned, and their five children were so badly burned and otherwise injured that the recovery of three of them is in doubt. The shack was completely destroyed, as was the one next door, owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Simmons and their child.

The cause of the fire as yet has not been determined. The entire family were sleeping in their one-roomed shack, when the father was awakened by the heavy smoke and flames. He jumped out of bed and ran to the house next door, where the Simmonses live. Calling to them, he awakened them both, and then rushed back into his own house to rescue his family. In doing so he ran against the glass in the front door and was very badly cut.

By this time his neighbors had arrived and were assisting in the work of rescue. Mr. Gough took the children one at a time and threw them out of the front window of their little home. As they were sent flying through the smoke and flames, they were taken by Mr. and Mrs. Simmons and placed in another house, as the Simmons house by this time also was a mass of flames, and in a few minutes was burned to the ground.

The three eldest children, Gladys, aged 4; Walter, aged 9, and Frank, aged 6, were rushed to the Western Hospital in a police ambulance, which was sent on the run from Parkdale police station. The others, Nellie, aged 14, and Alice, a little baby, three and a half months old, were carried to a nearby house, where they are under the care of Dr. McCormack, as are also their father and mother.

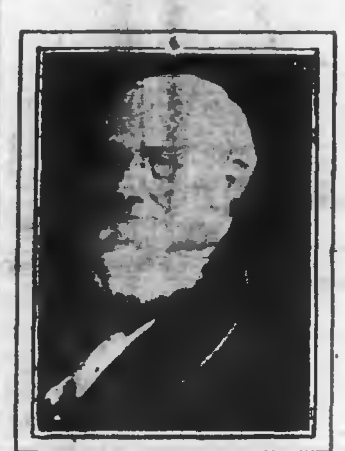
Attended Baby Saving Show.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9.—The Countess of Aberdeen, wife of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, who, with Miss Violent Asquith, youngest daughter of the British Premier, is visiting this city, spent yesterday inspecting the Phipps Institute and other institutions for the treatment of tuberculosis. Miss Asquith devoted her time to social engagements during the afternoon, but last night accompanied Lady Aberdeen to the opening of a baby-saving show in the negro section of the city.

TO CELEBRATE SIR ISAAC PITMAN'S CENTENNIAL



SIR ISAAC PITMAN

All over the world elaborate preparations are being made for the centennial celebration of Sir Isaac Pitman, the great English stenographer. Born January 4, 1813, at Trowbridge, Wiltshire, England, this great scholar devoted most of his life to the study of phonography and shorthand. He was the inventor of the celebrated Pitman system of phonography, which he later applied to shorthand. He was for fifty years the editor of the Phonographic Journal, also known as the Phonetic Journal. He was also greatly interested in the reform of English spelling. He was knighted in 1894 in recognition of his services to stenography. He died at Bath, January 22, 1897.

AGAINST NAVAL AID?

J. C. Walters Says Canadian Labor Is Solid Against It.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Daily Citizen states the Parliamentary Labor party is giving considerable attention to the Canadian Government's proposed naval contribution, with a view to united action at the proper time. In the same issue appears a letter from J. C. Walters, written on behalf of the executive of the Trades and Labor Congress, in which he seeks to dispel the illusion that the offer represents the united sentiment of Canadians. Organized labor in the Dominion is solidly against the spread of jingoism and armaments, he says.

Hundreds Homeless.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 9.—Portions of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and west Virginia are facing a serious flood situation last night, owing to a steady and rapid rise of the various rivers and small streams. A wide area of low land is under water. Hundreds of persons have been driven from their homes, many buildings are partly flooded, a number of transportation companies are crippled and several thousand men employed by industries in the flood zone, have been thrown out of work.

SONOMA MAKES PORT IN SAFETY

Word From the Panther is Expected at Any Time

Canadian Press Despatch.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 9— The tug "Sonoma" arrived at Guantanamo this morning, and the authorities expect to hear from the "Panther" during the day. It was persistently reported that the "Panther," a naval repair ship, and the "Sonoma," had foundered. The crews number 277 men.

PTOMAINES TIE-UP CARS.

South Norwalk Street Railway Employes Ate Cold Storage Turkey.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., Jan. 9.—The street car service here was practically tied up by ptomaine poisoning yesterday and is still crippled to-day.

A full hundred conductors and motormen lay at home groaning with attacks of the poisoning, the result of their annual turkey feast on Monday night.

They had a gobbler that weighed 45 pounds—the largest ever brought to town—which investigation has shown to have been kept in storage since Thanksgiving time.

Health Officer Tracey believes all of the men will survive, but he wonders that many of them were not killed.

TO DROP FOOD TAX.

Unionist Members Draft a Memorial Against Troublesome Plank.

LONDON, Jan 9.—Tariff reform, so far as it involves the taxing of food, is on the eve of final disappearance as a plank in the Unionist policy. A representative meeting of Unionists was held in the House of Commons yesterday with the object of healing if possible, the dissension in the Unionist party created by the recent proposal to impose taxes on food imported into the British Isles, and restoring the unity of the party.

A memorial was drafted and addressed to Mr. Bonar law, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, advocating the policy of abandoning the food taxes at the next general elections.

Lecture on Pompeii

To-morrow evening at eight o'clock, Professor Johnston, of Toronto University, will give an illustrated lecture in the Assembly Hall of the Normal School on the subject of "Pompeii." The public is invited.

FRITZI SCHEFF WANTS DIVORCE

New York, Jan 9.—Two arts and two temperaments made just four sources of dissension in the romance of John Fox, the author and dramatist, and Fritzi Scheff, the comic opera star, and after four years or more less happiness, the couple has asked the courts to cut loose the bonds that wore so heavily upon the two.

A good way to have all the friends you need is not to need any.

TWO DUELISTS ARE DEPORTED

Italian and Frenchman Embrace In Court-Room.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The United States will lose to-day the only two real duelists arrested in this part of the country for nearly one hundred years. Pietro Dutto and Charles Van Cent, who satisfied their old world notions of honor on Dec. 3 by exchanging harmless shots in a vacant lot, promised the court yesterday to go back to Europe if their sentences were suspended.

Dutto is an Italian and Van Cent a Frenchman. They quarrelled over the proper way to conduct the Balkan war. To show that they were quite reconciled, they embraced in the court-room and fervently kissed.

HON. FRANK COCHRANE.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, it is understood, will be appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario next autumn. The term of Lieutenant-Governor Gibson expires in September next, and if the present plans of the authorities are carried out he will be succeeded by Mr. Cochrane.

OPPOSITION TO THREE FIFTH CLAUSE WANING

Sir James Whitney Says Public Opinion is in Favor of It.

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—Up to last night the returns in Monday's local option vote totaled 24 places carried, 34 which failed to secure the three-fifths vote, 14 defeated on a majority vote, 21 places in which local option was sustained and 1 repeal.

The fact that 34 places had ineffective "dry" majorities, as contrasted with 24 carried by three-fifths or over, has intensified the opposition to the clause in Dominion Alliance circles.

In a statement yesterday Sir James Whitney said: "It is very gratifying for me to be able to say, from information I have received, that the opposition to the three-fifths clause, which was more or less strong, has died out. Of course, some individuals still raise their voices against the measure, but public opinion is in favor of it. The fact that in four municipalities the operation of the three-fifths clause prevented a repeal of the local option law, will probably afford good proof of its value even to those who have gone to all lengths in opposing it."

ANOTHER DEATH FROM SNOWSLIDE

Blacksmith Was Found But Died in Hospital

Canadian Press Despatch.

Nelson, B.C., Jan. 9— A snowslide carried away a blacksmith shop at Dunedin Mine on Sunday, burying the blacksmith, Levier McInnis. He was dug out and taken to a hospital but died on Wednesday. The place of the disaster is near Deadmans Slide, noted for similar catastrophes. It is the fourth death from the same cause near Sandon in a week.

ANOTHER TISZA DUEL.

He Has One Booked For To-day and Another In Sight.

BUDAPEST, Jan. 9.—Count Stephen Tisza, president of the lower House of the Hungarian Parliament, fought another duel yesterday, and succeeded in wounding his man. Count Tisza's opponent was Count Aladar Szechenyi. The weapons were sabres, and Count Szechenyi was wounded in the head. Count Tisza was not hurt.

The duel arose out of a declaration made in writing by Count Szechenyi that it was through an error that he recently acknowledged Count Tisza's salute. The latter promptly sent a challenge.

On Jan. 2 Count Tisza and Count Michael Karolyi, a prominent member of the Opposition, fought a duel with sabres, the latter being very severely wounded. A third duel is scheduled for to-day between the president of the lower House and Count Aladar Zichy, an Opposition deputy, while Deputy Potonyi, whom Count Tisza said he would not recognize in the street, sent a challenge to Count Tisza yesterday.

YOUTH IS FROZEN.

Brockville Young Man May Succumb To Injuries.

BROCKVILLE, Jan. 9.—William Elliott, Grenadier Island, was found badly frozen yesterday by Abel Root of Tar Island, and at latest accounts the young man was still unconscious and in a very precarious condition.

Elliott left Larue's Mills Tuesday evening in a skiff to row to his home, about a quarter of a mile distant. In the storm and buffeted by a stiff east wind, he was carried up the river and finally washed ashore near the home of Root, where he was found at daylight, almost dead from exposure.

EASTERN DAIRYMEN IN CONVENTION AT KINGSTON

Butter Trade With Britain Has Ceased, Says J. A. Ruddick—Mr. G. A. Gillespie Presiding.

KINGSTON, Jan. 9.—Startling statements regarding the dairying industry in Ontario were made yesterday at the thirty-sixth annual convention of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario. In an exhaustive review of Canada's domestic and foreign trade in dairy products, Mr. J. A. Ruddick, dairy commissioner for the Dominion, showed that not a solitary pound of Canadian butter had been shipped to Great Britain since last March, as compared with shipments of 34,000,000 pounds in 1903, the record year for exports to the old country.

"Indeed," said Mr. Ruddick, "this great dairying country, one of Britain's principal sources of supply a few years ago, found it necessary last year to go to the opposite end of the earth (New Zealand) for supplies to feed her own people, and the indications are that the imports of butter into Canada this year will reach several million pounds."

In explanation, Mr. Ruddick showed that in 1911 there were 106,000 fewer dairy cows on the farms of Ontario than in the previous year. It was the sequel to the distressing scarcity of farm labor. Unable to secure helpers, the farmers had been compelled to dispose of their cattle.

Mr. H. E. Hodgson of the Montreal Produce Exchange, and a member of the Government Cheese Commission, offered some good counsel to the cheese-makers. "Canada's splendid export trade in cheese is threatened by excessive shipments of green goods," said he, "and I would urge upon them to stop the evil." Mr. Hodgson intimated that when the commission presented their report they would recommend legislation making it unlawful for both buyer and seller to handle green cheese.

Thoughtful addresses on "Crop Production for Dairy Farmers," and "Feeding Dairy Cattle" were made by Prof. J. H. Grisdale of Ottawa and J. G. McTaggart, representative in Frontenac County of the Department of Agriculture.

Some three hundred of the leading dairy farmers of Eastern Ontario were present for the opening session. A warm welcome was extended by Mayor Hoag. G. A. Gillespie of Peterboro presided, and short addresses were made by Hon. Senator Derbyshire of Brockville; Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P.; A. Rankin, M.P.P., and E. G. Henderson. Dr. Edwards strongly condemned the system of Government inspection of scales. "Two-thirds of the scales with which Canadian cheese is weighed at Montreal," he said, "do not bear the name of the maker, because he was ashamed to put his name on them."

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST
BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Company.

"Kate is too busy to help today. She can't sew before tomorrow," said Wesley cheerfully as they entered.

That quieted Margaret's apprehension a little, though she had some doubts. Wesley prepared the lunch, and by 4 o'clock the pretty dress was finished as far as it possibly could be until it was fitted on Elnora.

CHAPTER V.

Wherein Mrs. Comstock Laughs the First Time In Sixteen Years.

THE neighbor left, and Margaret packed their purchases into the big market basket. Wesley took the hat, umbrella and raincoat, and they went down to Mrs. Comstock's. As they reached the step Margaret spoke pleasantly to Mrs. Comstock, who sat reading just inside the door, but she did not answer.

Wesley Sinton opened the door and went in, followed by Margaret.

"Kate," he said, "you needn't take out your mad over our little racket on Maggie. I ain't told her a word I said to you or you said to me. She's not so very strong, and she's sewed since 4 o'clock this morning to get this dress ready for tomorrow. It's done and we came down to try it on Elnora."

"Is that the truth, Mag Sinton?" demanded Mrs. Comstock.

"You heard Wesley say so," proudly affirmed Mrs. Sinton.

"I want to make you a proposition," said Wesley. "Wait till Elnora comes. Then we'll show her the things and see what she says."

"How would it do to see what she says without bribing her?" sneered Mrs. Comstock.

"If she can stand what she did yesterday and will today she can bear 'most anything," said Wesley. "Put away the clothes if you want to till we tell her."

"Well, you don't take this waist I'm working on," said Margaret, "for I have to baste in the sleeves and set the collar. Put the rest out of sight if you like."

Mrs. Comstock picked up the basket and bundles, placed them inside her room and closed the door.

Margaret threaded her needle and began to sew. Mrs. Comstock returned to her book, while Wesley fidgeted and raged inwardly. He could see that Margaret was nervous and almost in tears, but the lines in Mrs. Comstock's impassive face were set and cold. So they sat and the clock ticked off the time—one hour, two, dusk, and no Elnora. Margaret long since had taken the last stitch she could. Occasionally she and Wesley exchanged a few words. Mrs. Comstock regularly turned a leaf and once arose and moved nearer a window. Just when Margaret and Wesley were discussing whether he had not best go to town to meet Elnora, they heard her coming up the walk. Wesley dropped his tilted chair and squared himself. Margaret gripped her sewing and turned pleading eyes to the door. Mrs. Comstock closed her book and grimly smiled.

"Mother, please open the door!" called Elnora.

Mrs. Comstock arose and swung open the screen. Elnora stepped in beside her, bent half double, the whole front of her dress gathered into a sort of bag filled with a heavy load and one arm stacked high with books. In the dim light she did not see the Sintons.

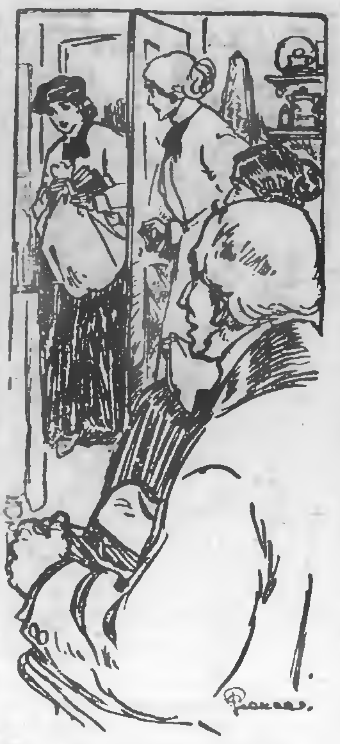
"Please hand me the empty bucket in the kitchen, mother," she said. "I just had to bring these arrow points home, but I'm scared for fear I've soiled my dress and will have to wash it. I'm to clean them and take them to the bank in the morning; and oh, mother, I've sold enough stuff to pay for my books, my tuition and maybe a dress and some lighter shoes besides. Oh, mother, I'm so happy! Take the books and bring the bucket!"

Then she saw Margaret and Wesley. "Oh, glory!" she exulted. "I was just wondering how I'd ever wait to tell you, and here you are! It's too perfectly splendid to be true!"

"Tell us, Elnora," said Sinton.

"Well, sir," said Elnora, doubling down on the floor and spreading out her skirt, "set the bucket here, mother. These points are brittle and have to be put in one at a time. If they are chipped I can't sell them." And she told all that had happened.

Elnora laid the last arrow point in the pail and arose, shaking leaves and bits of baked earth from her dress. She reached into her pocket and produced her money and waved it before their wondering eyes.



"Please hand me the empty bucket in the kitchen, mother," she said.

"And that's the joy part!" she exulted. "Put it up in the clock till morning, mother. That pays for the books and tuition and"— Elnora hesitated, for she saw the nervous grasp with which her mother's fingers closed on the bills. Then she went on, but more slowly and thinking before she spoke.

"What I get tomorrow pays for more books and tuition, and maybe a few, just a few, things to wear. These shoes are so dreadfully heavy and hot, and they make such a noise on the floor. There isn't another calico dress in the whole building, not among hundreds of us. Why, what is that? Aunt Margaret, what are you hiding in your lap?"

Sise snatched the waist and shook it out, and her face was beaming. "Have you taken to waists all fancy and buttoned in the back? I bet you this is mine!"

"I bet you so, too," said Margaret Sinton. "You undress right away and try it on, and if it fits it will be done for morning. There are some low shoes too!"

Elnora began to dance. "Oh, you dear people!" she cried. "I can pay for them tomorrow night! Isn't it too splendid! I was just thinking on the way home that I certainly would be compelled to have cooler shoes until later, and I was wondering what I'd do when the fall rains begin."

"I meant to get you some heavy dress skirts and a coat then," said Mrs. Comstock.

"I know you said so!" cried Elnora. "But you needn't now. I can get every single stitch I need myself. I'll be helping with the tax next, mother."

Elnora waved the waist and started for the bedroom. When she opened the door she gave a little cry.

"What have you people been doing?" she demanded. "I never saw so many interesting bundles in all my life. I'm skeered to death for fear I can't pay for all of them and will have to give up something."

"Wouldn't you take them if you could not pay for them, Elnora?" asked her mother instantly.

"Why, not unless you did," answered Elnora. "People have no right to wear things they can't afford, have they?"

"But from such old friends as Maggie and Wesley!" Mrs. Comstock's voice was oily with triumph.

Points for Mothers

Antidotes For Common Poisons.

A few days ago one of my neighbors called to me in great distress that her two-year-old son had swallowed, she did not know how much gasoline, said a woman recently.

The mother had carelessly left a cup half full of the fluid on a window sill, and the child, thinking it water, had attempted to drink it. His mother was panic stricken with fear, but after giving the little one an emetic of warm water and mustard, then following with a cup of lukewarm water, which he promptly vomited, then making him swallow the white of a raw egg, he recovered without any serious effects of the dose.

This experience taught me how necessary it is for every mother to know what to do first in case of such an emergency. No matter how careful mothers of small children are, there are likely to be times when a child will get some poisonous substance and, not knowing the danger, swallow it.

Always send for the doctor if poison of any kind has been taken into the stomach. Do not trust to your own ability to deal with such a case, but as quickly as possible after you have discovered the accident give the following antidotes without waiting for the doctor to arrive.

Where an emetic is ordered, make it by adding two teaspoonfuls of mustard flour to a glass of warm water. This usually starts vomiting at once, but in case it does not poke the finger down the throat of the child until he gags.

For acid poisoning, acetic, hydrochloric, sulphuric or nitric acid, give at once an alkali, such as magnesia, whiting, soda, soapsuds, and follow this up with soothing drinks of plenty of sweet oil.

Oxalic acid should be treated with an emetic, followed by limewater, chalk and water or magnesia, but not by potash or soda; then give soothing drinks. Should a child drink aconite give an emetic, followed by digitalis. Keep the head flat and stimulate with a little brandy and water.

Should the poison be alcohol, after the emetic apply ice to the head and stimulate the respiration by raising the arms above the head, then lowering them quickly. Keep repeating this frequently.

For alkaline poisoning, such as ammonia, caustic potash, paris green "rough on rats," give vinegar or lemon juice, followed by soothing drinks. In severe cases give an emetic, followed by baking soda and water, followed by white of egg and sweet oil. Give a big dose of castor oil to empty the bowels.

Belladonna, give an emetic, followed by tannic acid. Apply cold water or ice to the head; give coffee, stimulants and warmth if needed.

Corrosive sublimate, emetic, followed by the white of an egg and milk, tannic acid and castor oil.

Opium, including laudanum morphine, paregoric, soothing sirups or any medicine that has the drug in it, give an emetic. This is not always effective; if not, give permanganate of potash in doses of four or five grains, strong coffee, atrophine, and keep the patient awake by applying ice to the head and back and by artificial respiration and walking.

HIS DESERT ISLAND

A "Fish Story"

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Captain Barnabas Fish was rowing me out to the breakwater, where the little bluefish were running in multitudes.

He bent to the oars and pulled with long, even strokes, every exhalation of his deep breaths being marked by a little puff of blue smoke. Suddenly he looked up at me with twinkling eyes and spoke between his clinched teeth.

"I'll bet I know what you're thinking about, Miss Telham," he declared.

"Well?" I inquired skeptically.

"You was comparing me to a puffing donkey engine, eh?" he grinned.

I blushed and evaded the accusation. "You're not so very little, Captain Barnabas," I said hastily.

"Ho, ho, ho!" he laughed down deep in his throat, and I realized that once more had the captain exercised his almost uncanny powers of telepathy.

"You shall tell me a good story in return for that, Captain Barnabas," I said as he brought the boat skillfully around to the most advantageous spot in the fishing ground.

"I got to think up one, then," said he, plumping the anchor overboard and sliding his oars along the thwarts. Big as he was, the old captain stepped around the small craft as agilely as one of the cats that infested his cabin on the beach.

As he arranged the lines and baited the hooks I looked contentedly around at the encircling bluffs, wooded to their summits and faced with heavy yellow sand near the pebbly beach.

"Ready!" called the captain lustily, and I reached forward and took the baited line from his hand and tossed it overboard. All around us were anchored other small boats whose occupants were industriously pulling in the hungry bluefish.

When harbor blues are running all Quince Haven is redolent of frying fish at the dinner hour.

Captain Barnabas dropped his line over, and immediately it stretched taut and then quivered suggestively. He began to pull in with a gratified smile creasing his leathery skin.

"You got a whale on there, capt'n," called a neighboring fisherman.

"Want any help?" sang out another.

"Belay there!" retorted the captain, his grin changing to a frown as he yanked into view a large skate, which, at the moment of landing, snapped the line and disappeared beneath the troubled waters.

An echoing laugh ran around at the captain's expense, and his hearty "Ho, ho, ho!" was the loudest of all. While he prepared another line I felt a nibble at my own and pulled in a wriggling, little blue, which the captain promptly removed.

"This is a good time to begin the story," I insinuated when we were comfortably settled once more.

"Lemme see," he mused, pushing the straw hat back from his head and skillfully refilling his pipe with one hand. "Something about that there skatefish I just caught makes me think of Ananias Sline's whale."

"I'm rather sorry it's an Ananias story, captain."

"Why?" Again his eyes twinkled at me.

"Oh, because!"

He laughed heartily. "That's an insinuation against Ananias Sline, whose name is against him and"—

"He certainly lives up to it, captain."

"Ho, ho! Of course I've described Ananias Sline to you before, and you know he was little and mean looking, with pop eyes and a light bald head I mean his hair was light color, what there was of it, and, come to think of it, it wasn't overloaded with common sense, and he had a most murderous smile and a hand that was cold and damp like a dead fish.

"When he was my first mate aboard the old Indus he used to sit aft with me and tell stories, the greatest yarns I ever did hear. I never met a man who had so many wonderful adventures as did Ananias Sline and could tell 'em so they sounded more like truth than fiction, either. Well, one night when we was homeward bound from Luzon we sat out under the southern cross and watched the glimmering phosphorescent waves, and as a little spicy breeze came along on its way from some little south Pacific island Ananias folded his arms and tilted back against the rail.

"Says he: 'This reminds me of the time I was wrecked hereabouts. Want to hear about it?'

"'Yes,' says I. And so he begins.

"'It was on my first voyage to sea, and I was a young fellow and everything was new to me. We was on our way to China when the ship got afire and all hands escaped in the boats, all except me. I was—

"'I'll bet you was snooping around the cabin to see if the captain had left any loose money behind or something like that.' I chipped in, but Ananias only gave me one of them murderous smiles and went on with his yarn.

"'I was still manning the fire hose and trying to pump water and hold the hose at the same time when all of a sudden I was alone. There wasn't a boat left. There wasn't anything except some slush tubs, and so I put on a life preserver and grabbed a bag of biscuits and a can of fresh water and went overboard. Just as I got out of danger the ship went down, and there I was in the south Pacific sitting in a big slush tub with a piece of canvas thrown over me and not even a bit of plank to use as an oar.

"'Still it wasn't so bad, for the sea was calm, and the tub just bobbed along in an oily kind of way, kind of whirling around and around till I was dizzy. Without nothing to get nowhere, I didn't know where I might fetch up, so while I was thinking about it I just went off to sleep, and in the morning when I woke up there I was bumping gently against a kind of steep, sandy bank, while palm trees rustled overhead and monkeys chattered at me from the branches.

"'Of course I scrambled ashore and pulled the tub up on the beach and took a walk around the island, for that's what it was. It was only about fifty feet long and thirty feet wide, and there were only five palm trees on it and three monkeys and a banana tree and one that bore bread fruit. The soil was sandy, but kind of spongy, or more like rubber, but there wasn't a sign of fresh water, except some that was gathered in cocoanut shells by the monkeys. Did I say there was a cocoanut tree?' asked Ananias hastily.

"'You did not mention it, but never mind so long as you brung it in on time,' I says.

"'Well,' he scowled at me, 'how long do you think I lived on that island, captain?'

"'An unlikely length of time, Ananias,' says I coolly.

"'I'm not expecting you to believe it,' says he, getting mad. 'A man that wasn't always a deep sea sailor, if he had most of his seagoing fishing down the bay, I guess ain't seen or heard enough strange adventures to appreciate the marvels of—of'— He looked around for the proper word.

"'The marvels of invention, Ananias?' I asked slyly. 'I expect there's more sailors got their first knowledge of the sea selling codfish in a grocery store than you, Ananias.' I've told you Ananias used to be a clerk in a grocery store.

"He stared coldly at me and twisted his mouth into another horrible smile.

"'As I was saying,' he went on sourly, 'I stayed on that island three weeks before the great upheaval came and'—

"'Jonah was hove up in less time than that,' I chipped in, but he took no notice of me.

"'One morning just at daybreak the island quivered from stem to stern, and a mighty wave rushed up and washed completely over it. I would have been drowned only I clung to the trunk of a tree, and before another wave came I was up the tree among the branches out of danger. Next thing I saw was the slush tub afloat, and in it was the three monkeys as big as life, and they were cute enough to take a bunch of bananas along with 'em. They bobbed out of sight astern, and it happened so suddenly I didn't realize the situation. Then it dawned upon me that that island was racing along through the water at about ten knots! The water was washing over her and sluicing the sand right off. One by one the palm trees went over as the soil disappeared, and at last there was nothing left on the island except the banana tree where I was perched, and the heap of sand and shells around the roots was growing smaller every minute.

"'Where the sand had washed off the ground was black and hard and oily looking, and the island rolled and wallowed in the sea just like a big whale, and so I wasn't a bit surprised when all of a sudden there spouted into the air a jet of water, and I was certain. Every minute I was afraid that whale would dive and carry me with it to Davy Jones' locker, but then I think it was waiting for the banana tree to go. It would be free then.

"'All at once I heard a shout, and, looking ahead, I could see that we were driving straight up on to a sandy beach—a real one this time, captain—and men were shouting and leaping back as the whale advanced. Then there was a mighty flop, and we went out of the water, the whale quivered like a jelly, and the banana tree with me in it went sliding off to the ground.

"'When I come to the whale was dead and all the white men on this island had patched up a theory about the whale which my story only substantiated. Hanging from one of his teeth was a short length of anchor chain newly broken on the lower end. One of the links had caught in his tooth, and before the chain was broken I suppose there was a lot more of it, with, maybe, a big anchor on the bottom. Oh, you can sniff, cap'n, but that anchor maybe was resting on the summit of a volcano or perhaps on the top layer of some island that was in the making. Anyway, something had held that whale anchored there till the chain parted. All he had to do was to open his mouth and his food would swim right in. Of course the waves washed up sand till it formed a soil, and then birds brought seeds, and the trees grew, and'—

"'How about those monkeys?' I asked tartly, because I was mad Ananias should think I was fool enough to believe his yarns. 'I s'pose the birds brought them too!'

"'H'm,' says Ananias, eying me fiercely, 'I—expect they was cast ashore same as I was!'

"'In a slush tub, most likely,' I said, getting up and knocking out my pipe against the rail. 'That seemed to be the favorite monkey transportation line, Ananias Sline.' and I went below."

Captain Barnabas looked down at the pile of silvery blues that filled the big basket we had brought and twinkled an eye at me. "Most time to pipe all hands to dinner, I guess, Miss Telham!"

MOTHERHOOD SUGGESTIONS

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

VOICE OF HIS MASTER.

He Recognized It the Very Moment It Struck Him.

A man down in North Carolina lived with his wife for seven years and during that time he came to have a very healthy regard for her physical superiority. After meekly submitting to all the kicking and cuffing that he could stand he left home and took up his residence at the home of a farmer about seven miles distant.

One day he was working in the field when his employer brought him the message that some one wanted to speak with him over the telephone, presumably his wife. He didn't disobey the authority of the woman, even at a distance, and he hurried to answer the call.

He had had no experience with the telephone, and it was with wonder and hesitation that he picked up the receiver. About that time lightning struck the line, and the shock threw him to the floor.

Rising from the floor with a look of amazement, and with a dubious look at the instrument, he said softly, "I'll be doggoned if it wasn't her."—National Monthly.

Scared.

"Do you believe that women should have anything to do with politics?"

"I certainly do."

"You do?"

"She certainly should have both voice and vote."

"Well, maybe the vote's all right, but I hope you don't want her to have any more voice than she has now, do you?"

In the Cycle.

"He is so far behind the times that he will never catch up."

"There is some advantage to that."

"What is it?"

"His jokes are so old that they sound like new."

WHEN LIMBS AND CHEST ACHE

Zam-Buk Gives Ease Quickly

Have you got cold in your bones? Have you a bad attack of "general aching?" You know the feeling. Limbs ache, muscles seem to have become tired out, back aches, now and again a twinge of rheumatism strikes you here and there. Your chest feels tight, and there is a pain between your shoulders.

Cold is responsible for this condition, and a vigorous application of Zam-Buk will put you right. Take a hot bath, and then rub your chest and the aching limbs well with Zam-Buk.

Mrs. B. Gorie, 76 Berkley street, Toronto, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Zam-Buk. A few weeks ago I was suffering from a bad cold which had settled in my throat, chest and limbs. I tried all kinds of remedies, new and old, and found very little relief until I tried Zam-Buk. On applying this to my throat and chest, I found such ease and relief from the tightness and soreness I determined to use only Zam-Buk. I also rubbed it on my limbs where I felt the rheumatic pains. In three days from the time I first began applying Zam-Buk I was free from the cold in throat and chest, and also the rheumatism in my limbs."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Avoid harmful imitations and substitutes.

THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC VOTE

The hydro-electric vote throughout the 14 municipalities was almost as satisfactory as it was in Peterborough. The total amount of the money by-laws voted on was about $350,000, of which Peterborough, with $120,000 headed the list. North Bay voted $60,000, the same private company being affected there as the one in Peterborough. The fact of of the situation in Peterborough was quite clear to most observers of public sentiment. The people want, as the Review has said more than once, competition in power. They have faith in the ability of the Hydro Electric Commission to carry out its undertakings, and now that Peterborough has done its part, in authorizing the raising of the money, they look to the Hydro electric to deliver the goods. Perhaps it might have been possible for the city to have made some sort of deal with the Electric Power company in the recent negotiations, if every offer by the company had not attached to it a string that Peterborough must yield to the Electric Power company a continuous franchise. More correctly speaking, the city was to bind itself against introducing Hydro power. But the people would not have been in favor of any such abortion. They want the competition, the right to get power at the cost. It is undoubtedly true that it will not be an easy thing to find in this city a sufficient market for power, to justify the low rates the Commission has estimated, but there is certainly something to be said for the venture from the standpoint of having another powerful lever with which to attract industries. If through cheap municipal power Peterborough could get two or three large and solid industries each year, its venture would be a handsome investment, since with the growth of consumption the price would automatically come down, and the citizens using Hydro electric power for lighting, or power purposes, would share the direct benefit. The financing of such a public utility during the first two or three years sometimes comes hard, but once established on a good basis, it is an asset to a city, of great worth.

THE THREE FIFTHS CLAUSE

The temperance people of the province will undoubtedly use the local option vote in Peterborough as a horrible example of how the three fifths clause is unjust. Where in a city the size of Peterborough, there is a large vote over the simple majority, but falling short of the three fifths by a few votes, the soreness and bitterness of the temperance people is undoubtedly more or less justified. It seems hard that they should go to so much trouble, should spend so much money, only to be balked by a few votes short of the necessary large number. But we think that the argument in favor of the three-fifths clause remains quite unaltered for all that. In the case of Galt, for instance, which was a local option town, there was a campaign for repeal. In 1910 Galt went dry by 1,837 to 878. This year the liquor interests obtained a clear majority of 47, the vote standing 1278 to 1231. Thus the liquor vote picked up nearly 500, while the temperance vote was substantially the same. It was the three-fifths clause which saved Galt to the temperance cause. So with the other repeal contests. In every case, where local option has once been established on a three-fifths basis, it is almost established for good. It is very hard for the temperance people to get a three-fifths majority in the first place, but it is immensely harder for the liquor men to destroy that vote by themselves putting up a three-fifths majority. A twenty per cent vote has to change before that is possible. On May 1, nearly 500 of the 828 municipalities in Ontario will be under local option. That surely must be a great satisfaction to the temperance workers. But in Hamilton, for instance, they acted like the small boy who plunged his fist into the jug of filberts, only to find that when he tried to grab too many, he got none. The temperance people wanted to cut off half of the licenses in the city, and were decisively defeated. If they had asked for 10 off, they would probably have been sustained. No local option by-law, or liquor regulation, will be satisfactorily upheld without a sound and stable public sentiment behind it, and this cannot be got by hap-azard voting, or other devices. The three-fifths clause prevents all that. This is why there is so much local option in Ontario to-day.

Means "hidden eye." The "near" lens is actually hidden in the "distance" lens making a solid piece of glass.

No "lines" no cement, and perfect sight with the discomfort and unsightliness left out.

They cost more than the regular "cement" bifocal, ("Bifocal" means two lenses in one—far and near) but if you are particular of comfort and appearance they are worth the difference. We recommend and sell them.

Revived Order Of Priests.

The Order of Bridgettine Fathers, which has a remarkable history, dating back to the early fourteenth century, is to be revived in London, and a suburban site, a church capable of holding two thousand worshippers is to be erected, together with a novitiate, a mission house and a school for eight hundred children, adjoining the church. The scheme also embraces the establishment of four small chapels in outlying parts of the parish and two infant schools. The estimated cost is $300,000

Founded by St. Bridget, of Sweden, a great mystic, in the fourteenth century, the community, and especially the English section of it, has had an eventful history.

The standard set up for the novice in this order is particularly severe.

"They must be absolutely single of heart," says the official statement, "eager and ready to embrace every possible kind of discomfort and inconvenience, devoid of any seeking after those little things that, while they make life a little easier, spoil the completeness of the sacrifice. They must be absolutely dead to all creature comforts, ready to labor by day and by night, or both, wanting little sleep, caring nothing as to whether the surroundings are pleasant or the reverse."

THE COLLECTION OF GARBAGE

Sometimes the Boys Play Pranks With Receptacles

Residents within the garbage collecting area are reminded that it is just as necessary to keep their garbage in a separate receptacle during the cold weather as in the summer months. Where garbage is mixed with ashes and rubbish the collectors are justified in refusing to take it, indeed they are not allowed to do so, and are instructed to report such instances to the Sanitary Inspector. This notice is necessary in view of the presumably increasing carelessness of householders lately in the disposal of their refuse.

Another important point to ntoe with regard to the garbage by-law is that the receptacles should not be placed out on the street until the morning of the day of collection. When placed out the night before, cans are often found upset by mischievious boys and the contents scattered around by prowling dogs.

The Sanitary Inspector hopes that those concerned will make a note of these particulars and act accordingly, and so preserve the amicable relations existing between them and the Health Department.

STICK TO DEMANDS.

Grain Growers Want Public Ownership and Tariff Reform.

BRANDON, Jan. 9.—In the course of his annual address before the convention of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association, President Henders yesterday spoke in part as follows:

"Our bill of rights as presented to Parliament at Ottawa sets forth very clearly the position we take on Government ownership of public utilities and tariff reform, and we still contend that until the principles therein contained are put into action through proper legislation there will not be developed that confiedence between all classes which is so essential to the building up of national stability and greatness. We therefore desire to place ourselves on record as not having swerved one iota from the position then taken.

"We are well convinced that had our trade relations with the market to the south of us been opened up along the lines marked out in our farmers' bill of rights it would have resulted in the placing of millions of dollars in the pockets of our farmers this year; millions which could have been used to good advantage in meeting obligations which at this moment are pressing very heavily upon us, and under which not a few are being driven out of business. We record our most emphatic determination to press this issue still further, nothing less than an open market to the south of us will satisfy."

There was a time, Mr. Henders added, when he took the ground that a tariff to help infant industries might be beneficial, and that a tariff for revenue purposes seemed also to have some commendable features about it.

"The experiences through which we have passed," he affirmed, "in the development of this country during the past twenty-five years have demonstrated beyond all doubt the utter fallacy of all such teachings."

"We believe that our transportation facilities should be under such control as, while it afforded reasonable dividends on all capital investments as well as proper security for such capital, would also secure to the people of this country reasonable transportation and export rates."

If you achieve success, you must pass the slow men.

FEW REDUCTIONS.

Freight Rates Have Not Changed Much Since 1886.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—W. R McInnes, freight traffic manager of the C.P.R., was cross-examined, upon exhibit A of the defence put in by the C.P.R at the rates hearing before the Dominion Railway Board yesterday. This exhibit is a formidable document, containing forty-two schedules, designed to prove that the C.P.R. Co. has materially reduced its freight rates in the west. The exhibit set forth what it purported to be the rates effective in 1886 for the shipment of grain, coal, fence poles, stone and many other commodities, and compared the same with the rates now in force.

Thus presented the statistics showed a considerable reduction in rates. Mr. Cowan, however, proved from the witness that all the rates were based upon the first general tariff of rates established by the company. This was a standard mileage rate and practically a maximum rate. It was shown, however, that as freight commenced to move over the system the C.P.R. put into force commodity rates materially lower than the maximum standard rates, established twenty-five years ago, were about the rates now in force.

Mr. Cowan declared the company was charging about the same rates to-day when its annual revenue was $123,000,000 that it charged when its annual revenue was $24,000,000.

Summing up the day's testimony it appeared that practically the only reductions in rates made by the C.P.R. since 1886 were those made as a matter of bargaining with respect to the Crow's Nest Pass concession and those made to meet the contract rates exacted from Mackenzie and Mann years ago by the Manitoba Government.

New tinware, before it is used, should be greased well with fresh lard. Then put in the oven to heat. After this is done it will never rust.

The councillors are; Mr. Walter Madill, Mr. F. Spence, Mr. J. Richardson, Mr. Geo. Payne.

For the School Board the old members were re-elected by acclamation.

RESULTS OF MILK TESTS

One Hundred and Thirty Six Samples From 38 Vendors

The milk supply of Peterborough fulfills practically all the requirements of the by-law, as far as the percentage of butter fat which it must contain is concerned. Between April and the end of the year just closed, one hundred and thirty six samples of milk have been taken and tested from thirty-eight vendors, and the average for the total number shows 3.51 per cent butter fat. The by-law calls for a minimum of 3 per cent. fat.

Four milk tests averaged over four per cent fat; ten averaged between 3.5 and 4 per cent fat; twenty-four averaged between 3 and 3.5. The highest individual average was 4.53 per cent. fat; the lowest 3.05; highest indiiivdual test was 5.9 and the lowest 2.2

The above facts were furnished by Sanitary Inspector Spence.

A FURTHER PROOF OF FUTILITY

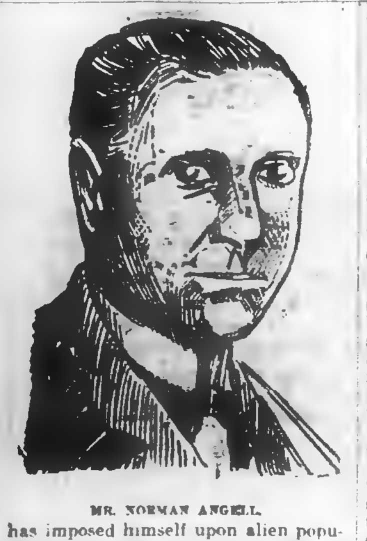
BALKAN WAR DEMONSTRATES HIS POINT SAYS MR. ANGELL.

Author of "The Great Illusion" Declares That The Present Conflict Shows Completely That Rule Based on Force is Inevitably Overthrown —Nations Must Co-operate And Not Fight Each Other.

What has Mr. Norman Angell to say about the war now being brought to a close in Turkey? Mr. Angell is the man who wrote "The Great Illusion," a book whose purpose was to show, not that war is impossible, but that it is futile. His work caused a tremendous sensation, and has done more than anything else to modify the policies of statesmen and diplomats and to assuage the war fever among the most militarist of civilized nations. He showed conclusively that even the victorious nation could not be but a loser by war, and no one has as yet been able to find a vulnerable place in his argument.

And now comes the astonishing thing. Mr. Angell favors the present war. To a Christian Commonwealth interview, he justified his thesis and the war both. This is how he did it:

"Well," said Mr. Angell, crossing the room and settling comfortably in his chair with a writing-pad on his knee, "what is my thesis?" He puts the issue clearly before his mind and approaches it by the most direct path. "What is my thesis? Not that war is impossible, but that it is futile, that conquest as a means of national enrichment, national advantage, is impossible, that it is impossible for one nation to benefit by imposing its will upon another nation by force. Well, in this matter it is the Turk who is the conqueror and has imposed himself upon alien populations by force, and by nothing else. That method has failed, as it was bound to fail. One could not have a better demonstration of the utter failure of force and conquest than the history of the Turks. And this war is in my view justifiable because it is a means of bringing force and conquest to an end; between two forms of war and force—the other being that which the Turk has waged daily for 400 years—it is the choice of the less evil form."



MR. NORMAN ANGELL.

"I do not wish to be paradoxical. Let me put it this way: The rule of the Turk is based on force. He lives by the sword. In Europe he is an alien ruling caste superimposed upon the nations whom he compels to pay tribute to him. He is incapable of administering those states. The only statecraft the Turk knows is the art of living parasitically upon the people he has conquered. He knows nothing of government or administration, all his energies are absorbed in a military system maintained for the purpose of robbery. When we prevent the brigand knocking people's brains out, we do it not because we believe in force as a means of settling the ownership of property, but precisely because we don't. And if in the process of preventing him we knocked his brains out, no one but a casuist and logic-chopper would say that we believed in knocking peoples' brains out. That is why those pacifists who desire to see the disappearance of force as a factor in the relationships of peoples may conceivably approve of this war as a means of putting an end to the use of force in those relationships."

"It restores the balance and leaves the question of the Government of those states to be settled by reason. But, of course, if the Balkans adopt the militarist philosophy, and decide that preponderant force is merely to settle the issue, why then the never-ending bloodshed will go on. Suppose that when the war with Turkey is finished Bulgaria were to turn round and say to the other states that henceforth she would rule in the peninsula; again war would go on until she, too, was reduced to reason, and came to see that a solution of the problem is possible only by co-operation of all for the order and good government for all. The misgovernment of Macedonia and Albania would have disappeared if the Christian powers had abandoned in their international relationships the political doctrine of the Turk. Under the spell of the great illusion that their interests are not common but rival, they have failed to become sufficiently a community to enforce their own treaties. When we learn that in international, as in local, relationships, our interests are common, that our well-being lies in cordial co-operation in the community of nations, as it does within the state, war will cease. Our real prey is this planet. Our business is so to conquer it. We gain no benefit by preying upon each other. No nation adds to its wealth in these days, so interdependent and interwoven are the interests of all, by conquering another nation. That is 'the great illusion'."

MR. GROUCH.

He got up with a grouch, and he scolded
his wife.
He told her that she was the bane of his life.
He scolded the children and cuffed them around.
His voice had a harsh and a blood chilling sound.
He scolded the cook because she'd slept late,
And he scolded about everything that he ate.

He scolded the driver upon the front seat,
And he scolded and spluttered concerning the heat.
He scolded policemen at crossings because They held up their hands and compelled him to pause.
He scolded because of the puncture they got.
By the scowl on his face you'd have known
he was hot.

He scolded the newsboy that got in his way,
And he scolded because it said, "Warmer today."
He scolded the clerks and looked horribly cross
When he entered the office in which he was boss.
He scolded because there was dust on his chair
And because there were snarls in the office boy's hair.

The stenog. came in after his work was begun.
He had called for her twice; she went in on the run.
Did he scold when she, trembling, began to explain
That a wreck at a crossing had halted her train?
Did he snarl at the girl as he'd snarled at
his wife?
Did he show his impatience? You bet your sweet life!

P. S.—Perhaps we should say, lest you think him a brute,
The stenog. was not youthful, nor was she a beaut.

Big Hearted.

"You," sighed the rejected lover, "will find your name written in imperishable characters on my heart could you but look."

"So?" murmured the fair young thing who was aware of the fact that the swain had been playing Romeo at the seaside for something like twenty years. "So? Then you must have a heart like a local directory by this time."—Tit-Bits.

Loves The Moveys.

So fond has a well-known British peer become of cinematograph pictures that he has had a complete cinema theatre fitted up in his London residence. To this he invites his friends every Friday evening, and report has it that, while all the films are very interesting, some of them are piquant. This liking for cinematograph entertainments is shared by the Royal children, and when they are staying at Buckingham Palace, they never miss visiting one of the West-end theatres once or twice a week.

Some men expect a receipt in full when they pay a debt with promise.

FAMOUS WAR HORSES.

Britain's Great Soldiers Have All Had Their Favorite Mounts.

The fact that King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, commander-in-chief of the Balkan forces, has a favorite black charger which he has named Varna, after the place of that name on the Black Sea, where his summer palace is situated, reminds one of the affection which has existed between celebrated soldiers and the horses which have accompanied them through their numerous campaigns.

One of the most famous war-horses was Lord Roberts's gallant charger Volonel, which died a few years ago, and lies buried near the Royal Hospital, Dublin. Volonel was a grey Arab which Lord Roberts bought in India, and he rode the animal to Kandahar.

Lord Roberts was very much attached to the animal, and when Queen Victoria awarded medals to the soldiers who had gone through the Afghan War, the hero of Kandahar proudly hung round his charger's neck the Kabul medal with four clasps and the Kandahar star of bronze.

The best known of Lord Kitchener's war-horses was a handsome chestnut which he named Omdurman. The animal carried Kitchener during that battle, and ultimately went with his master to South Africa during the Boer War.

Mention of the South African campaign reminds the writer that in 1901 he had a chat with some of the 2nd Life Guards at Knightsbridge Barracks, who introduced him to the most remarkable horse in the British Army, known to the regiment as Freddy of Paardeberg. This animal was the only horse out of 260 taken to South Africa during the Briton and Boer War which returned to this country fit for service again. Freddy went through six engagements without receiving a scratch, and came home in capital condition, being ultimately decorated by Queen Alexandra with a silver medal bearing his official number, D.36, this medal, together with six bars, being attached to its breast-plate.

Freddy of Paardeberg died last year at the age of eighteen, and his medal with the clasps is to be seen in the officers' mess ante-room at Regent's Park Barracks.

Among other famous war-horses might be mentioned Copenhagen, Wellington's chestnut charger, which carried his famous master through the Peninsular War, and bore him for eighteen hours on the day of Waterloo. On that day, too, Napolean rode Marengo. After his master's flight the animal was found by an English officer wandering disconsolately on the battlefield, and he was sent to England. He survived Napoleon nine years, and when old age and pneumonia combined to end his career his skeleton was sent for preservation to the Royal United Service Institution at Whitehall.

When a man falls' heir to a big job it is always said his head swells. And frequently it is true.

DOGS OF WAR.

What Canines Have Learned To Do In Military Operations.

That honored old phrase "the dogs of war" has now quite a new significance which has nothing to do with the lank hounds of Bellona. The modern conception of a dog of war was explained by Major Richardson in a lecture at the Royal United Service Institution on "The Employment of War Dogs, with Special Reference to Tripoli and Other Recent Campaigns."

Major Richardson is famous as a trainer of dogs for such special services as police, sentry, and ambulance work, and foreign armies have taken more notice of his work than has Great Britain. To an interested audience, chiefly of military people, he outlined the advantages to an army of possessing four-footed scouts. It is not a theoretical matter, as dogs are already extensively employed all over the continent of Europe for military and police purposes, and on many of the frontiers for detecting smugglers. Moreover, they have in many cases proved their value in actual warfare, and in one instance in particular sentry dogs saved the Italian troops near Tripoli from being rushed by surprise in a stealthy night attack by the Turks last February.

This particular incident is worth giving in full. The sentry dogs were kept chained in kennels amid the wire entanglements ahead of the Italian trenches. Major Richardson said:

"In the early part of the evening of Februray 11-12, the Turks, under cover of darkness, advanced in two columns against the Italian position at Derna; one column of about 500 men to the right, the other consisting of about 1,000 Bedouins, with a stiffening of Turkish officers. The whole of the country is difficult in the extreme, without roads, and crossed by a series of tracks for the most part known to the native only, running on the edges of precipices. This force took every advantage of the sinuosities of the ground, and practically crawled undisturbed to the Italian position. The alarm, however, was given by the dogs chained to the entanglements, and at 1.30 began an engagement at this point which lasted the whole night."

With the descent of darkness, which renders the human being so helpless, said the lecturer, the hearing and scenting powers of the dog become most acute, and while soldiers, tired out with long marching or the ardour of a campaign, may have their senses dulled, the four-footed scout will hear or "wind" the stealthy approach of an enemy's patrols long before a sentry is aware that there is anyone in the neighborhood. After hundreds of experiments he had proved that the dog can hear at 200 or 400 yards further than a man, and when the conditions for scenting detection will come at very great distances. The slightest suspicious noise, unheard by human ears makes the dog watchful and restless, and his fears are immediately communicated to the sentry accompanying him.

The lecture was illustrated by lantern slides showing the dogs at work with the various continental armies in peace time, and with the Italians during the war in Tripoli. In Belgium dogs are even used for dragging machine guns. In a number of armies they are used for carrying messages for short distances, and also for carrying ammunition. But Major Richardson favors their use in two main ways only—as sentry dogs and as ambulance dogs to search out the wounded after a battle.

In ambulance dogs the French army is especially well provided, and they are trained up to a very high pitch. Major Richardson had two ambulance dogs with him—two beautiful and intelligent Airedales, with the red cross of mercy standing out bodly on their flanks, and with cordials for the wounded strapped to their backs. One can imagine the joy with which the appearance of such a saviour would be hailed by a wounded soldier lying in rocky ground or scrub, where the biped brigade might never find him at all.

Economy.

A maiden of tender years came into a dry goods store the other day and asked the price of some collars.

"Two for a quarter," answered the clerk.

"How much does one cost?"

"Thirteen cents."

She thought for awhile and then said, "That would make the other one cost 12 cents, so I guess I'll take that." —Harper's Magazine.

The Cake Taken.

The Old Lady—What's the matter with the little boy?

His Elder Brother—Oh, 'e's cryin' 'cos I'm eatin' my cake and won't give 'im any.

The Old Lady—Is his own cake finished, then?

His Elder Brother—Yes, an' 'e cried while I was eatin' that too.—Sketch.

"YOU'LL SUFFER ALL YOUR LIFE"

That's what the Doctor told him

"Fruit-a-tives Cured Him

CHESTERVILLE, ONT., Jan. 25th 1911

"For over twenty years, I have been troubled with Kidney Disease, and the doctors told me they could do me no good, and that I would be a sufferer for the rest of my life.

I doctored with different medical men and tried many advertised remedies, but none of them suited my case.

Nearly a year ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives". I have been using this fruit medicine nearly all the time since, and am glad to say that I am cured.

I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible.

I am now seventy-six years old, and in first class health"

GEO. W. BARKLEY.

In all the world, there is no other remedy that has cured so many cases of so-called "incurable" kidney disease, as "Fruit-a-tives".

This famous fruit medicine acts directly on the kidneys—healing and strengthening them—and ridding the system of the waste matter that poisons the blood.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Couldn't Stand It.

"Did you hear why Mrs. Mason recalled the invitations to her party?"

"Because her husband's second cousin died."

"That's the reason she gave, but don't you believe it."

"Elucidate."

"Because the last Indian Swami that Mrs. Wilson secured for her party made Mrs. Mason's poor little Japanese juggler look like the half of 30 cents."

SARDINE FISHING.

How the Toothsome Little Fish Is Taken In Fundy.

The sardine is a frequent article of diet upon Canadian tables, and however much its flavor and handiness are appreciated but little is generally known of the processes through which it passes before its appearance in the grocery.

The true sardine (Clupea sardina) is a small fish of the Mediterranean and derives its name from the island of Sardinia. This is the sardine put up in France. The sardine packed in Canada, the United States and Norway are the young of the herring (Clupea harengus), from five to seven inches in length.

These young herring come in on the coast of the Bay of Fundy in immense schools from June to October. They are caught in weirs (pronounced "ware" among the fishermen of New Brunswick). The weir is a large, hoop-shaped enclosure of stakes, brush and net, far enough out from shore so that at low tide (and the tide in the Bay of Fundy rises and falls some twenty-eight feet) there will be from four to ten feet of water in it. A fence of stakes and brush known as the "lead" runs out from the shore to the gate of the weir.

The young herring coming in from the sea keep close to the shore. Striking the lead they will not swim between the brush, of which it is composed, but swim along it into the mouth of the weir. The man who is running a weir lives close to it during the season, and as the fish fill into a weir on the high tide he inspects his weir each high tide, and if he finds fish in it he drops the net over the gate. Usually the fish come in it, he drops the net over the gate. Usually the fish come in on a night high tide. At low tide the weir is seined. A sein is a long net deep enough to reach the bottom of the weir, with weights at the bottom and floats at the top. This net is stretched round the circumference of the inside of the weir by a man in a boat, then gradually drawn in until the fish are gathered into a practically solid mass.

Then the fish are dipped out by a huge dip-net with a long bag. The hoop of the net is placed in the boat and the bag pulled in hand over hand, loading the fish into the boat. Some idea of the immense numbers of sardine which sometimes run into a weir may be obtained from the fact that as high as three hundred hogsheads, each holding four barrels, have been taken out at one time. From fifteen to thirty hogsheads is considered a fair catch, and anything over two hogsheads as worth seining for. The price paid to the owner of the weir varies from $3 to $10 per hogshead, according to the abundance or scarcity of sardine.

On arrival at the factory the fish are hoisted from the hold to the dock and are sent down a sluice. Here they are deposited in brine tanks. From these tanks they go through the flaking machine, which raises them to the next floor and arranges them in a layer over large trays known as "flakes." These flakes are placed in a large rack on wheels, which is wheeled into the steam-chest, where they are steamed for ten minutes. From the steam-chest they are wheeled into the drying-room, where they are dried in a hot air blast. When dry they are removed from the rack and the flakes are carried to the packing tables, at which girls are at work packing the fish into tins. The tins and covers are stamped out of sheet tin by machines on the premises. Considering the immense number of young herring which are caught in the weirs it is no wonder that many have predicted that the supply of herring would soon give out, but the fact remains that the season of 1911 was one of the best, if not the very best, in the history of the sardine industry in Canada, the owner of one weir making $5,000 in two weeks.—Canadian Courier.

His Reporting Days.

During the days of his apprenticeship in the field of literature Arthur Stringer was a reporter on The London Free Press. His faculty for dramatic effect was already beginning to show itself, and he sometimes handed in copy more vigorous than discreet. Upon one occasion he was sent to write up an entertainment in which several out-of-town singers took part. Mr. Stringer's article criticized one of them as "rendering Tosti's 'Good-Bye' with the expressive cadences of a phonograph out of breath." Very naturally the editor made an objection to such unnecessary compliments.

"If we let that go in, her husband would dynamite the building," Stringer was told.

"Then we'll compromise," agreed the reporter. "We shall say 'she rendered Tosti's 'Good-bye' indescribably'."

"That won't do, either."

"Then, 'she rendered Tosti's Good-bye'."

"Much better," said the editor.

"In any event," concluded Stringer, "I had the satisfaction of getting my sentiments down on paper for half an hour. I don't care now whether you print them or not."—Star Weekly.

A GREAT CATALOGUE.

British Museum's List Is The Biggest In the World.

The late Dr. G. K. Fortescue who died recently after his retirement from 42 years' service as keeper of Printed Books in the British Museum, spent most of that time in compiling the great catalogue of the library, the most wonderful book in the world.

"It contains about four million entries, and grows at the rate of 30,000 additional entries each year, said Dr. Fortescue just before his death. At present the interleaved copies consist of 980 volumes, and from fifteen to twenty volumes are added every year, so we shall soon pass the limit of 1,000 volumes. In 1880 we began to print the great catalogue, and by 1904 the work, including a supplement of recently acquired books, was completed to the end of the year 1899. It was issued from time to time in 436 parts. A majority of the catalogues were given to libraries and institutions, and the remainder we sold, the price of the whole being $470, spread over some twenty years.

"As the great catalogue is only an index to authors, it has been my endeavor to start a modest Subject Index, which now consists of five volumes, and contains the subjects of all books printed between 1880 and the present time. I took the work in hand immediately after my appointment as Superintendent of the Reading Room in succession to my old and reverend friend, Dr. Richard Garnett. I was asked one day 'What is the best guide to the Canary Islands?' 'Brown's,' I replied. 'Thanks,' retorted my interlocutor—who must have been an American, I fancy—'but which of them? There are three whole volumes of Brown's here!' This struck me as so absurd that I immediately started to compile my Subject Index, and I can only hope that it has proved as useful to others as it has to myself.

"Another catalogue I undertook was that of what is known as the Thomason Tracts, comprising over 20,000 books, pamphlets, and newspapers published during the Civil War and the Commonwealth of which Carlyle once said in characteristic language, 'For value I believe the whole world could not parallel them. I consider them to be the most valuable set of documents connected with English history, greatly preferable to all the sheepskins in the Tower for informing the English what the English were in former times. If a man wanted to do a beneficent act to England he ought to print the catalogue of these Civil War pamphlets. Without a catalogue these collections might as well be put into water-tight chests and sunk off the Dogger Bank as put into the British Museum.'

"Also, I have been responsible for a smaller, but I hope useful, catalogue of the Crocker Tracts, a collection of newspapers and pamphlets made by Mr. J. W. Crocker during the French Revolution. There are some 49,000 pieces, which I believe to be the largest on the subject in the world. The British Museum thus possessed the two greatest treasures of the two greatest periods of British and French history."

Needless to say, in the course of his long association with the national library, Dr. Fortescue knew upon intimate terms many famous men, drawn from many spheres of life, and he could, no doubt, tell many interesting stories concerning them. But upon this topic he is inexorably silent. All that he would say was that "there is hardly any book of the slightest importance which has appeared in this country during the last half-century which does not owe something to the Reading Room, nor would it be easy to find a single author of note, whether he be English, French, German, Russian or Italian, who is not indebted in one way or another to the library of the British Museum."

"The daily average attendance at the Reading Room," he added, "now exceed 700, and it is still apparently growing. But unlike the libraries and reading-rooms of similar, though smaller institutions, which are doing such excellent educational work, the British Museum Reading Room may be said to be almost entirely a place of business. People do not come here to improve their minds nor for recreative reading. That they can do better in smaller libraries. Ours is, in point of fact, the great literary workshop.

A Record Season.

It was officially announced at Yarmouth the other day that this autumn's herring fishery has beaten all records. The season normally lasts till Christmas, but already landings have reached a figure which surpasses those of any previous complete season. Last year had held the record with a total of 523,335 crans, but up to the present no fewer than 580,000 crans have been delivered at Yarmouth, and there is still another month to continue fishing. A cran comprises approximately 1,000 herrings, and Yarmouth easily holds the world's herring record.

Fewer Potatoes There.

Despite an increase of 33,731 acres in the area under potato cultivation in England and Wales, compared with 1911, this year's crop shows a decrease, according to the official returns of 606,484 tons. Turnips and swedes were grown on 51,629 fewer acres than last year, but the yield increased by 2,742,790 tons. In the case of mangolds there have been increases in the acreage of 35,594 acres and in the crop of 1,352,921 tons.

A Brotherly Act.

Admiral Lord Charles Beresford commanded a naval brigade in the Sudan when the British forces were there. One day when the Arabs were making a terrific onrush the admiral's life was saved by a mule which fell dead upon him. When the square had been reformed and the Arabs were repulsed Lord Charles was rescued. He looked at the mule for a moment and then remarked gratefully, "Now, that poor beast did what I should call a brotherly act."

Patience may be a virtue, or it may be simply laziness.

FOR FAMILY USE

An Ideal Remedy for Coughs, Sore Throat, Catarrh, Weak Chest.

After having made a special study of the treatment of the throat and lungs for twenty years, Prof. D. Jackson states that in his opinion no preparation for general family use is so efficient, so healing, so certain to cure as Catarrhozone.

As his reasons for making this claim for Catarrhozone, Dr. Jackson says:

"Catarrhozone is free from opium.

"The patient can breathe its rich, balsamic fumes direct to the diseased spot.

"It is a remedy that treats and cures causes—prevents disease spreading.

"Reaches the innermost recesses of the throat, nose, bronchial tubes, and lungs.

"Alleviates chest soreness.

"Stops coughing instantly.

"Prevents bronchial irritations.

"Relieves clogged nostrils.

"Cures sniffles and nasal catarrh.

"Prevents La Grippe.

"Has proven itself a cure for weak lungs, loss of voice, speakers' [illegible] throat, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, coughs, colds, and winter ills."

Catarrhozone is unquestionably the world's greatest breathable cold, cough, and catarrh medicine, and being free from all drowsy drugs, entirely safe for children and old folks, it makes an ideal family remedy. Recommended by the medical profession and sold by all reliable dealers. Beware of imitations, get "Catarrhozone" only; large size lasts two months, and is guaranteed, price $1, smaller sizes 25c and 50c. By mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

THE G. WALTER GREEN CO. ANNUAL BANQUET

Hooper's parlors held last evening a gathering of the employes of the G. Walter Green Co. at the fourth annual. This has been a recognized institution, and is shared in by employer and employes. Mr. W. R. Morris, auditor, and Mr. V. Eastwood, of the Royal Bank, and the Press were guests of the evening.

Mr. Green had been called from the city by the illness of his brother, and the chair was filled by Mr. T. Donaldson, secretary-treasurer. After supper had been served in Hooper's best style, the chairman opened the program with a reference to the year's success, and made some commendation of the zeal and helpfulness shown by the men in advancing the interests of the firm.

Mr. Morris paid a well deserved tribute to the many good qualities that characterised Mr. Green's conduct of the business, and spoke of the cordial relations existing with the staff and factory force. He congratulated the city on securing the services of Mr. Green as one of the aldermen, and said he felt that the citizens had expressed confidence by electing Mr. Green by acclamation. Mr. Morris proposed the toast of "The Employes," which was responded to by Mr. W. Hardill and Mr. H. Robinson, both speaking in terms of confidence and appreciation of Mr. Green, his energy and ability and considerate dealings with the men. Mr. W. Weese also endorsed what the previous speakers had said.

Mr. V. Eastwood briefly referred to his relations with the Company, and to the good feeling existing all around, and further on proposed the toast of the Press, which was responded to by Mr. F. H. Dobbin, of the Review.

Opportunity was taken to mark the occasion, when the health of Mr. Green and that of his excellent wife was proposed. This was done by Mr. Morris, and the cheers and expressions of approval left no doubt that all the good wishes uttered were sincere.

During the evening songs were given by Mr. H. Filling and Mr. J. Peace, while Mr. Andrews gave a very clever performance on the mouth organ.

Several volunteer toasts were offered and recognized and the meeting closed with Auld Lang Syne, and good wishes all around.

LARGE AUDIENCE SAW A NAUTICAL KNOT UNTIED

Pleasing Presentation By Amateurs of St. Peters T. A. S.—Highly Creditable Work by Both Principals and Chorus

Success has crowned the efforts of the young people of St. Peter's T.A.S. in amateur theatrical presentations on numerous occasions in the past, but not moreso than was the case last night when "A Nautical Knot" was untied at the Grand Opera House in a manner that brought forth the hearty appreciation of an audience that filled the theatre.

Every one in the Company which numbered nearly fifty, is to be congratulated. With Miss Lillian Hurley and Mr. George Lynch in charge and practise and rehearsal extending over a considerable length of time, much was expected. Of disappointment there was none.

It is true that some of the dialogue and parts in the musical numbers were given with the voices modulated—perhaps unconsciously—more than they were expected to be, but counterbalancing this was the otherwise excellent work of the principals and the chorus. There were numerous incidents in the piece that called for and received clever interpretation. Much depended on the principals, yet the success attained would not have been so pronounced had the chorus been less capable.

The story tells of Jack ashore, his blunders in affairs of the heart, his departure and long voyage, then his return to port, when everything is righted and everybody made happy again.

Miss Molly Young, as the Belle of Barnstapoole, became a favorite with the audience as quickly as she turned the heads of the sailor boys by her beauty.

Miss Josephine Delaire as the sweetheart of Joe Stout, was equally a favorite, although her role did not call for so much prominence as Miss Young.

Mr. Jack New, a wandering artist, was splendid, and the same can be said of his brother, Mr. Albert New, the mate of the "Bounding Billow."

In the character of Bill Salt, a boatswain, Mr. Ed. Hanrahan could not be improved upon.

Special mention is also due to Miss Alice Milloy, Miss Marguerite Clancy, and Miss Geraldine Rudkins; also Mr. Joe Minicola, Mr. Vincent McCabe, Mr. Alex. Primeau and Mr. Elric White. The latter was seen in a "hornpipe" that would do credit to any Jack Tar.

Miss Lilian Hurley was musical director; Mr. George Lynch stage manager, and Miss Sue Kelly business manager. The cast was as follows:

JULIA, The Belle of Barnstapool .... Miss Molly Young
BARNABAS LEE, Wandering Artist .... Mr. Jack New

LAST NIGHT OF POULTRY SHOW

Best Exhibition Yet Held By Association

The big poultry show closes to-night at ten o'clock. The exhibition this year is pronounced to be superior in quality of exhibits and size to any of previous years. Mr. Joseph Bennett, who has officiated as judge, stated to a reporter to-day that the Peterborough exhibition in some respects outclassed that held in Toronto. He was much pleased with the splendid specimens of feathered life that predominated.

The judging at two o'clock this afternoon was practically over. There is still ample time for visitors to call and inspect the exhibition and a big attendance is anticipated to-night.

A special array of cups were offered this year as special prizes.

SHE WILL WEAR GORGEOUS GOWNS

MADGE TITHERADGE.

Brown-eyed, petite Madge Titheradge, who while but 24 years old, has been for the past five years the toast of all London, will appear here with Mr. Lewis Waller in "A Marriage of Convenience." Miss Titheradge has appeared in but one production in America outside the present play, "A Butterfly on the Wheel," and it was one of the most striking individual triumphs of the year. Miss Titheradge appears as the Comtesse de Candale in the present play, and since it was a period of grace and elegance Miss Titheradge it may be guessed, will appear very lovely in the role as the "child of the age."

In the first act she will wear a wedding dress in pannier style of rich white brocaded satin over a petticoat of white satin embroidered in silver with exquisite lace on the sleeve and corsage. In the second act her dress is a pale pink and rose satin, the petticoat being formed of ruffles and lace. In the third act she wears pale blue and white made in the style of the period, and looks a picture when she dons a deep rose shade of satin domino with hood. In the fourth act her dress is a bronze satin and lace, cord and tassels to match, the overdress being of shot green and bronze silk lined with emerald green satin.

A word should also be given to Mr. Waller's wonderful wardrobe. His coats of white satin and gold, grey velvet and silver with gloves and stockings embroidered in silver and gold being most picturesque. The coat which he wears in the last act is certainly one of the most expensive and possibly one of the most wonderful in many ways ever worn by an actor on the stage, it weighs 25 pounds and is trimmed with pure gold. It cost $1,000 and is a present to Mr. Waller from the Earl of Shaftesbury who wore it at the celebrated reception and ball given by the Duchess of Devonshire just after the coronation of the late King.

The distinguished Englishman and his excellent company will appear at the Grand on Wednesday next, Jan. 15th. 30

ONE SOLID YEAR IN NEW YORK

Proclaimed by press and public to be unqualifiedly the greatest dramatic success of the century, "A Butterfly on the Wheel," will have its first presentation in this city to-morrow, Friday night.

"The Butterfly on the Wheel" is in four acts and is sprinkled throughout with wholesome comedy. It enjoyed a run of one solid year at the 39th Street Theatre, New York. A similar reign of prosperity in London preceded its New York presentation. The story is told in four acts. The first two show the rooms of Mrs. Admaston in a Paris Hotel, the third the famous trial scene, and the last the home of the Admastons in London. Peggy Admaston, the wife, is the butterfly, and it seems that she is neglected to a certain extent by her husband, the Rt. Hon. Geo. Admaston, M.P., whose time is mostly occupied by politics. The wife languishes under his neglect but flourishes under the attentions of Roderick Collingwood, a mutual friend of the family, but who is altogether too much in love with her and her love for adoration leads her to be somewhat indiscreet. A combination of circumstances later induces the husband to believe her guilty of infidelity. This finally influences him to seek a divorce which brings the play to a dramatic climax—the court scene. The audience being aware of her guilelessness, sympathizes with her. The husband, after she has been subjected to a terrible cross-examination, is finnaly convinced of her innocence and the happy reconcilliation brings the play to a happy ending.

C.P.R.'S FREIGHT EVIDENCE VIGOROUSLY CRITICIZED

M. K. Cowan in Examination of Railway's Expert Shows That U. S Villages Are Compared With Winnipeg and Canadian Cities—One Verbal Order is Already Made as Result of Hearing.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—Claiming that villages in the United States represented only by "a saloon, blacksmith shop and corner grocery" had been taken as distributing points by the C.P.R. in its statement of comparisons of its rates with those in the western States, and these points then compared with such big Canadian centres as Winnipeg, Mr. M. K. Cowan, K.C., counsel for Saskatchewan and Alberta, at yesterday afternoon's session of the western rate case before the Railway Commission made a vigorous onslaught on the Canadian Pacific Railway's case, and wound up his examination of Mr. W. R. McInnes, chief traffic manager of that road.

Mr. Cowan urged that it had been admitted by the Canadian Pacific that density of traffic and cost of operation were important factors in making rates. He had already shown, Mr. Cowan then contended, that cost of operation was less and traffic as dense in the west, therefore, he asked, why were rates higher there, except, perhaps, as a result of the lack of water competition?

At the opening of the session Mr. Cowan turned his attention to rates on cattle shipments in Canada and the United States. He urged that in its Series B of rate comparisons the C.P.R. had compared the commodity rates to the big packing-houses on the C.P.R. lines with local rates to butchers on the other side of the line, in other words, had compared the most favorable Canadian rates with the least favorable American ones.

Mr. Cowan also showed that the rate, for instance, from Regina to Winnipeg, and then from Winnipeg to Wabigoon, was 28 cents per hundred, while the rate on a car shipped direct from Regina to Wabigoon was 34 cents, which constituted a discrimination of 6 cents per hundred for the indirect shipment.

Shipments from Moosomin and Whitewood to Vermillion Bay, from Grenfall to Savanne, from Yorkton to Savanne, and from Regina to Vermillion Bay, all were under a higher rate by direct shipment than by the indirect shipment to Winnipeg and thence to the point of destination.

Chairman Drayton failed to see the reasonableness of this condition, despite somewhat lengthy explanations from W. B. Lanigan, and other officials of the company, and at the close of the session gave a verbal order to do away with the discrimination.

GALT, Jan. 10.—The statement was made last night that the Iroquois Hotel, the largest in town, will be converted into an apartment house immediately, and the Imperial, next in rank, dismantled. If these places close it will leave Galt without any of its heretofore first-class accommodation. But it is stated on undisputed authority that this action in apparent reprisal for the local option vote Monday, will be promptly met by an incorporated company, able to supply the deficiency in a most thorough and acceptable way and without any loss or inconvenience to the traveling public.

Grain-Growers' Officers.

BRANDON, Jan. 10.—R. C. Henders was re-elected president and G. S. Wood, vice-president, of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association yesterday afternoon by a unanimous vote, no candidates being put in the field against them.

Christian Scientist Found Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—W. N. Miller, formerly president of the Christian Science Church, was found dead yesterday in an armchair in a room adjoining the church. Mr. Miller was born in Nova Scotia.

YOUNG GIRL'S ASSAILANT IS AN EX-CONVICT

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Jan. 10 — It is now known that Cyrille Chartrand, the furnace man who assaulted twelve year old Katie Marcovitch, a pupil at Bon Secours convent, and tried to push her into a furnace, is an ex-convict, having served six years in St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary.

GALE IN PACIFIC.

Another Schooner Comes To Grief on Columbia River Bar.

ASTORIA, Ore., Jan. 10.—As the two survivors of the lost steamer Rosecrans crossed the bar yesterday on which they saw 33 of their shipmates smother in the surf, they watched the steam schooner Westerner overwhelmed by a huge wave. When she righted her bulwarks had been swept away and her deckload of lumber was floating in the entrance of the Columbia river. No lives were lost.

Tremendous seas were pounding the North Pacific coast yesterday, although the furious gale of the day before had abated, and vessels were in trouble wherever they tried to cross the breaking bars.

At Portland anxiety was felt for the steam schooner Rochelle, in ballast from San Francisco, and 48 hours overdue, with fifteen men on board. The lumber carrier Fifield, bound for San Francisco, lost her deckload off Cape Blanco, on the Oregon coast.

CONFERENCE NEXT WEEK

Canadian Press Despatch

London, Jan. 10.—The Peace Conference is not expected to meet before next week. There has been no change in the situation. A conference of ambassadors of the powers at the Foreign Office this afternoon is expected to reach a decision regarding the collective attitude of Europe.

London, Jan. 10.—Roumania practically delivered an ultimatum to Bulgaria today demanding the cession of Silistria and territory to the north of a line stretching from there to Varna on the Black Sea, according to a despatch to a news agency from Sofia.

Paris, Jan. 10.—A despatch from Bucharest to the Temps says Roumania has decided to mobilize her army if she does not obtain within 48 hours, satisfaction from Bulgaria in regard to the ratification of her frontier.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Officials news received by the Bulgarian delegation describes the situation at Adrianople as desperate. Several soldiers who deserted and succeeded in reaching the headquarters of the allies, say that the town is in its last gasp. Provisions are so scarce that the military authorities have requisitioned all the food possessed, even by private individuals, and are making only one distribution, comprising half a ration, daily.

The conditions have been rendered graver by the great number of sick, who overflow the hospitals, where the attendance is inadequate. Thus the death rate is very high. The Bulgarians have allowed medicines and Red Cross workers to enter under the escort of a Bulgarian detachment.

The commander of the fortress has declared that he would rather see all die of starvation than surrender the town; that is why all who can are endeavoring to escape. The Bulgarians believe that even independently of any action the powers may take, the question of Adrianople will soon be solved.

To Recall Delegates.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 10.—The Porte, according to official announcement, has sent a circular to the Turkish ambassadors abroad, intimating that unless the allies accept Turkey's peace proposals by the end of the week, the Ottoman delegates will be invited to return to Constantinople immediately. The circular adds:

"Whatever happens, the Porte is determined to maintain its attitude with regard to Adrianople and the Aegean Islands, in view of the fact that sacrifices made in other directions have reached the extreme limit."

HAS BIG SCHEME.

City Officials Would Develop Power With Natural Gas.

CALGARY, Alta., Jan. 10.—Calgary may go into the natural gas business on a stupendous scale to produce cheap power for manufacturing purposes.

The Western Canada Natural Gas Co.'s pipes run from Bow Island, 200 miles away, and has the exclusive franchise in the city. The plan proposed by the city administration, which has been formulated by the power committee, is to form the 36 townships adjoining the city into a separate municipality, to buy the sister municipality for $10,000,000, construct a municipal trunk line to Bow Island gas fields, and generate power in the adjacent municipality.

Mayor Sinnott submitted an estimate of the cost of gas transmission, including operating expenses, interest and depreciation, at three cents per thousand feet.

CONDITION IS IMPROVED

Duchess of Connaught Slept Well During Night

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Jan. 10.—A bulletin issued at noon says the Duchess of Connaught passed a better night and slept more. This morning her condition showed some improvement. Her strength is well maintained.

MONTREAL, Jan. 10.—Two bulletins respecting the condition of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught, at present a patient in the Royal Victoria Hospital, were issued last night, and the last one issued at a late hour, was more reassuring and indicated that after a restless day, her royal highness had found relief in sleep.

Following the official bulletin issued Wednesday night, after the arrival of the duchess at the hospital, that she had stood the journey from Ottawa very well, the bulletin issued yesterday morning was by no means reassuring.

"Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught did not pass a very good night. She was restless and complained of considerable pain. This morning, however, her condition shows improvement."

(Signed) E. S. Worthington, A. E. Garrow, W. W. Chipman, M.D.'s.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and the Princess Patricia called several times at the hospital and visited the distinguished patient, who occupies a private suite in Ward L, where Miss Pelly, lady-in-waiting, and two trained nurses are in constant attendance.

Throughout the day there was little change in the patient's condition, and while it is regarded as serious, there is nothing yet to indicate that it will be necessary to resort to an operation, and the bulletin issued at 6.15 o'clock last evening indicated that she had been resting easily.

The condition of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught remained unchanged throughout the day. She slept at intervals and her strength has been maintained.

During the day there were many callers at the hospital anxious to learn how the duchess was progressing, and the issuing of the above bulletin served to lessen the tension, for the reticence of the former bulletin did not allay the apprehension felt when it was known that her royal highness was suffering from a recurrence of the attack of peritonitis with which she was stricken last summer, and which kept her in the hospital for over a month.

At shortly after ten o'clock last night, Mr. Arthur F. Sladen, C.M.G., private secretary to the Duke of Connaught, stated that the condition of her royal highness was regarded as generally satisfactory. The turn of events during the next two or three days, he admitted, would probably be of importance.

At 11.30 o'clock at night the last bulletin was issued:

"Her royal highness is fairly comfortable. Strength now well maintained, now sleeping."

TO PREACH TAX REFORM

Liberals Will Tour the Province Before Session

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—N. W. Rowell K.C., leader of the Ontario Opposition, and a number of his colleagues will begin a tour shortly for the purpose of preaching the doctrine of tax reform. The Liberal members will address four or five public meetings before the opening of the session. Mr. Rowell is of the opinion that the vote for assessment reform in Toronto was one of the most encouraging and significant signs in the whole history of the tax reform movement in Ontario. He believes that it was a very emphatic condemnation of the "autocratic and unprogressive attitude of the Premier on this important question." It shows, he declared, that Sir James Whitney has commenced to realize the strength and volume of the protest, not only by the press of his party, but by all classes of citizens.

Little Hope For Child.

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—Little hope is entertained for the recovery of nine-year-old Walter Gough, who, with his mother and four other members of the family, were so badly burned in the terrible fire at Earlscourt Wednesday night. The whole family is now under the care of the staff at the Western Hospital. Dr. Hector McCormack who rendered first aid to the injured ones, had Mrs. Gough, Alice and Nellie, removed to the hospital yesterday afternoon.

BECAUSE OF HIS MARRIAGE GRAND DUKE IS RELIEVED OF HIS COMMAND

GRAND DUKE MICHAEL.
FROM THE SPHERE

The Tsar's displeasure over the marriage of the Grand Duke Michael to Mme. Sheremetievskaia has resulted, it is stated, in the Grand Duke's dismissal from the command of the Chevalier Guards regiment, one of the crack commands.

Although the Grand Duke is a brother of the Tsar, the order will cause his banishment from the capital, which, it is stated, is doubtless intended to prevent him from taking part in the celebration of the tercentenary of the Romanoff dynasty.

TEN THOUSAND MEN IDLE THROUGH OHIO FRESHETS

Train Had to Plow Through Eighteen Inches of Water to Reach Station

WHEELING, W.Va., Jan. 10.—The Ohio River reached a stage slightly under 44 feet last night, and this city is in the midst of its most disastrous flood, with the exception of the visitations of 1884 and 1907. Last night the Baltimore & Ohio Railway brought its last passenger train from the east. The train plowed through 18 inches of water for a quarter of a mile before reaching the station. Railroads, trolley lines and steamboats are all out of commission, and the city is practically isolated from the outside world.

In some sections of the city the natural gas supply is cut off, and much suffering caused. A majority of the iron and steel mills have been forced to suspend by the high water, and upwards of ten thousand men are idle.

FISHERMEN WERE SAVED

Canadian Press Despatch.

St. John, Nfld., Jan. 10.—The fishing schooner, "Evelyn" was dashed to pieces yesterday on a ledge near the Isle Aubois cove. A small boat from the shore, manned by three fishermen, took off Captain Burke and his eight men, but on returning was thrown ashore on a narrow shelf under the high cliff. With pounding waves on one side and a towering promontory on the other their case looked desperate, but ropes were dropped from above by fisher folk who hauled them one by one to safety.

WOULDN'T LEAVE SHIP.

And Passing Captain Had To Leave Steamer To Fate.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—Fears that have been entertained regarding the safety of the overdue British steamship Snowden Range, which sailed from here Nov. 23 for Leith, were intensified yesterday when the captain of the Swedish steamship Vesterland reported that on Dec. 19, when about 700 miles west of Scotland, he saw a steamship burning blue lights and sending up rockets. At four o'clock on the morning of the 19th Captain Christiansen of the Vesterland said he was in communication with the vessel, which signaled that she was bound from Philadelphia for Leith and wanted to be towed to Belfast. The disabled steamship signaled its rudder was broken, that all lifeboats had been swept away in a storm and that it had been rolling in heavy seas in this condition for fourteen days.

The Vesterland was unable to take the other boat in tow, but offered to take off the crew. This offer, the skipper of the Vesterland said, was refused, and the steamships soon lost sight of each other.

The Snowden Range is about eight days overdue and carried a crew of nearly forty men. It was loaded with a general cargo.

EXAMINER PREJUDICE

How the Examiner does hate the Hydro electric system! Last night that paper published official election returns on its front page and stated "Hope by-law had larger majority than Hydro electric." According to its own figures 1856 votes were cast for the hydro by-law and 160 against it, the majority being 1696. The Henry Hope by-law figures given were 1700 for and 100 against—a majority of 1600.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

Opening to Take Place on February 4th

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—The opening of the Ontario Legislature will take place on Feb. 4. This date was decided upon yesterday at a meeting of the Cabinet. The House met at an earlier date last year, but the delay this year was caused by the renovation of the chamber. Sir James Whitney was assured yesterday that the contractors would complete their work in plenty of time for the members to assemble on Feb. 4.

GALT FEARS SMALLPOX.

Vaccination Going On Wholesale In the County.

GALT, Jan 10.—In view of a serious outbreak of smallpox in the county, where already it is said 15,000 people have been vaccinated, Dr. Vardon, medical health officer, points out that it would be easy to carry the disease here, and he strongly advises that all children who have not been vaccinated in the past seven years, be vaccinated, and the parents urged to take the children to the family physician. If the families cannot afford the charges, the town will bear the expense. Galt does not want a repetition of the disastrous smallpox outbreak of a few years ago, which caused a loss of several lives and over $5,000 civic outlay.

Letter Vandals Sentenced.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Long sentences were passed yesterday on two of the militant suffragettes, many of whom in recent months have engaged in a campaign of destruction of the mails. May Billinghurst and Louisa Gay, two of the first to be arrested in connection with these outrages, were brought up for trial at the Old Bailey yesterday and condemned to eight months' imprisonment each.

May Billinghurst, who is a cripple and is unable to get about except on a tricycle, already has been imprisoned on several occasions in connection with the suffrage campaign.

Regret Deakin's Retirement.

MELBOURNE, Jan. 10.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The resignation of Alfred Deakin, Opposition leader, on account of ill-health, has been received with regret on all sides. For 37 years he has played a prominent part in Australian affairs, and his countrymen consider him the best-known dominion statesman next to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. His successor as Opposition leader will probably be Mr. Cookhead of the free trade wing.

PREVIOUS RECORD IS BEATEN BY 25 PER CENT.

Advance Information Concerning the Trade and Commerce Report Shows That the Volume of Business Passes the Billion Dollar Mark by Five and a Half Million—Agricultural Exports Lead.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—Canada's total trade for the twelve months of the past year passed the billion-dollar mark by a little over five and a half million dollars. Final or detailed figures will not be available for some weeks yet, but the returns received so far by the Trade and Commerce and Customs Departments show that the billion-dollar mark has been well passed. As compared with the Dominion's trade for 1911 this represents a gain of nearly $189,000,000, or 23 per cent. Imports for the past twelve months totalled approximately $654,000,000, while exports amounted to nearly $352,000,000. The gain in imports was nearly $140,000,000, while exports increased by nearly $49,000,000. Only one country in the world rivals Canada in the percentage of trade growth during the past few years, namely, Argentina. By the end of the fiscal year it is expected that Canada will have reached tenth place among the countries of the world in respect of total trade. The Dominion's trade has doubled within the past six years and trebled within the past thirteen years.

The principal gains in exports during the past year have been in exports of agriculture, mines and manufactures. The increase in exports of agriculture has been over twenty-five millions, in mines over twelve millions, and in manufactures over seven millions. Exports of the forest and of animals and their products have shown a falling off of several millions, due, doubtless, to the increased demands of the home market.

Veterans Want Grants.

MONTREAL, Jan. 10.—A delegation of Fenian raid veterans interviewed Sir Lomer Gouin at the Government offices yesterday, asking a provincial grant for the survivors. It was argued that the Government of Ontario had shown its appreciation of the services rendered to their country by the veterans and that the Government of Quebec should follow suit. The Premier replied that the request would receive his full consideration.

Schooner May Be Loss.

ROCKLAND, Maine, Jan. 10.—Driven ashore on the Fiddler, a dangerous reef near North Haven, the potato-laden schooner Lena White, bound for New York from Whiting, Maine, will probably be a total loss. When the vessel struck Wednesday night her crew escaped to Brownhead Light, a short distance from the reef. They will be brought here by a tug to-day.

MURDERER GOES BLIND

Canadian Press Despatch.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 10.—Walter Eaves, who shot Mrs. Hancock, in Dr. Fletcher's office, has gone blind, through paralysis of the optic nerve, which was brought about by the bullet.

HUGE PROFITS MADE.

New York Bank Has Paid 18,550 Per Cent. Since 1878.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Enormous profits by the First National Bank of New York City were recounted yesterday by George F. Baker, chairman of the board of directors of the bank, as a witness before the House money trust committee. Mr. Baker furnished the committee with records showing that since its organization in 1863, with a capital of $500,000, the bank has made profits amounting to more than $80,000,000.

In the four years since 1908, Mr. Baker told the committee, the bank had paid dividends of 226 per cent, or more than twice the total capitalization, which is now $10,000,000.

When the capital was increased in 1901, a special dividend of $9,500,000 was declared, Mr. Baker said, to enable the stockholders to take up the additional investment. In 1908, in order to provide $10,000,000 of cash for the organization of the First Securities Co. to take over the business, "which the bank could not do under the law," Mr. Baker said, a special dividend of $10,000,000 was declared. This was in addition to the regular yearly dividend.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the committee, from the figures supplied by Mr. Baker, calculated that since he assumed the presidency of the First National in 1878, that institution has paid dividends of 18,550 per cent. on its original capitalization.

TO ABOLISH ICEBERGS.

Jetty Across Grand Banks of Newfoundland Proposed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—A plan for abolishing icebergs is to be laid before Congress. The New York Board of Trade and Transportation announces its endorsement of a bill which Congressman Calder of Brooklyn will submit at Washington, calling for a Government commission to study the feasibility of constructing a huge jetty across the Grand Banks of Newfoundland.

The idea, at which the members of the board were at first inclined to jeer, but later adopted, was explained by its originator, C. L. Ricker, a Brooklyn engineer.

Mr. Ricker declared that, however wild this project might seem at first sight, it had received the endorsement of many engineers, and even the United States Hydrographic Office had considered it feasible. He estimated the cost at $20,000,000.

MEDIUM BEING SUED BY RICH NEW YORK WOMAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Favorable reports of a midnight reading of the whims of fate in a boiling pot of herbs, brought from a witch's cavern on an island in the West Indies, induced Mrs. Isabelle V. Adams, widow of Al Adams, "policy king," to sign a note for $30,000 in favor of Mrs. Marguerite Gilbert, a professional medium, according to testimony in a trial of unusual interest in the Supreme Court yesterday. Mrs. Gilbert, recognized in her own mystic world as "Mme. De Bran," is plaintiff against Mrs. Adams in a suit to recover the amount of the note.

"Hegs," with insistent demands for more money, was the shade who, according to Mrs. Adams' story of representations made to her, translated what the boiling pot had to divulge. After giving Mrs. Gilbert sums of $1,000, $200 and $500, so that "Hega's son" might visit the island in search of fresh herbs and blossoms, Mrs. Adams said she handed the plaintiff a $5,000 note in return for promised "protection" for herself and family during a trip to Mexico. When informed that "Hega" considered this amount too small, Mrs. Adams said, she wrote the $30,000 note, telling Mrs. Gilbert to keep it until the defendant had made a bequest for the same amount in her will. When this provision was made in the will, Mrs. Gilbert refused to return the note, Mrs. Adams testified.

GOULD WEDDING ON NEXT WEEK

Only Near Relatives and Friends to Be Invited

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The marriage of Miss Helen M. Gould to Finlay J. Shephard, of St. Louis, is expected to be celebrated next week. It is stated that Miss Gould has fixed the date of the wedding, and that invitations will be issued within a few days, but as these are to be confined to near relatives and friends, and a home wedding is decided upon in preference to a church affair the arrangements will be kept as private as possible.

Want Canteen Restored.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 10.—In favor of the restoration of the army canteen, Secretary of War Stimson, Surgeon-General Lorney, Brigadier-General Wetherspoon, and Representative Bartholdt of Missouri appeared yesterday before the House Military Affairs Committee to urge Mr. Bartholdt's bill for that purpose.

Secretary Stimson said that without the canteen the conditions were worse than where the sale of beer and light wines was allowed at army posts.

Reall, have been on trial in the federal court charged with using the mails to defraud in the promotion of a company to sell wireless telephone and telegraph stock, were found guilty last night on all five counts in the indictment. Reall was found not guilty.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST
BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Company.

"From them least of all," cried Elnora stoutly. "From a stranger sooner than from them, to whom I owe so much more than I ever can pay now."

"Well, you don't have to," said Mrs. Comstock. "Maggie just selected these things because she is more in touch with the world and has got such good taste. You can pay as long as your money holds out, and if there's more necessary maybe I can sell the butcher a calf, or if there's things too costly for us, of course, they can take them back. Anything that ain't used can be returned. They were only brought here on trial."

The girl began opening the packages. The hat came first.

"Mother!" cried Elnora. "Mother, of course, you have seen this, but you haven't seen it on me. I must try it on."

"Don't you dare put that on your head until your hair is washed and properly combed," said Margaret. "While it dries you can eat your supper, and this dress will be finished. Then you can put on your new ribbon and your hat. That little round bundle on the top of the basket is your stockings."

Margaret sat down and began sewing swiftly and a little later opened the machine and ran several long seams.

Elnora was back in a few minutes, holding up her skirts and stepping daintily in the beautiful new shoes.

Wesley and Margaret scarcely breathed for a long time. Then Wesley went to do the feeding. Elnora set the table. When the water was hot Margaret pinned a big towel around Elnora's shoulders and washed and dried the lovely hair according to the instructions she had been given the previous night. As the hair began to dry it billowed out in a sparkling sheen that caught the light and gleamed and flashed.

"Now, the idea is to let it stand naturally, just as the curl will make it. Don't you do any of that nasty, untidy snarling, Elnora," cautioned Margaret. "Wash it this way every two weeks while you are in school, shake it out and dry it. Then part it in the middle and turn a front quarter on each side from your face. You tie the back at your neck with a string—so, and the ribbon goes in a big, loose bow. I'll show you." One after another Margaret Sinton tied the ribbons, creasing each of them so they could not be returned, as she explained that she was trying to see which was most becoming. Then she produced the raincoat, which carried Elnora into transports.

To Wesley and to Margaret the bright young face of Elnora, with its pink tints, its heavy dark browns, its bright blue gray eyes and its frame of curling reddish brown hair was the sweetest sight on earth, and at that instant Elnora was radiant.

She set the hat on her head. It was just a wide tan straw with three exquisite peacock quills at one side. Margaret Sinton cried out, Wesley slapped his knee and sighed like a blast and Mrs. Comstock stood speechless for a second.

"I wish you had asked the price before you put that on," she said impatiently. "We never can afford it."

"It's not so much as you think," said Margaret. "Don't you see what I did? I had them take off the quills and I put on some of those Phoebe Simms gave me from her peacocks. The hat will only cost you a dollar and a half."

She avoided Wesley's eyes and looked straight at Mrs. Comstock. Elnora removed the hat to examine it.

"Why, they are those reddish tan quills of yours!" she cried. "Mother, look how beautifully they are set on! I think they are fine. I'd much rather have them than those from the store."

"So would I," said Mrs. Comstock. "If Margaret wants to spare them, that will make you a beautiful hat, dirt cheap, too! You must go past Mrs. Simms and show her. She would be pleased to see them."

Elnora sank into a chair because she couldn't stand any longer and contemplated her toe. "Landy, ain't I a queen?" she murmured. "What else have I got?"

"Just a belt, some handkerchiefs and a pair of top shoes for rainy days and colder weather," said Margaret, handing over parcels.

"About those high shoes, that was my idea," said Wesley. "Soon as it rains low shoes won't do, and by taking two pairs at once I could get them some cheaper. The low ones are two and the high ones two-fifty, together three seventy-five. Ain't that cheap?"

"That's a real bargain," said Mrs. Comstock, "if they are good shoes, and they look it."

"This," said Wesley, producing the last package, "is your Christmas present from your Aunt Maggie. I got mine, too, but it's at the house. I'll bring it up in the morning."

He handed Margaret the umbrella, and she passed it over to Elnora, who opened it and sat laughing under its shelter. Then she kissed both of them. She got a pencil and a slip of paper and set down the prices they gave her of everything they had brought except the umbrella, added the sum and said laughingly: "Will you please wait till tomorrow for the money? I will have it then, sure."

"Elnora," said Wesley Sinton, "wouldn't you"—

"Elnora, hustle here a minute!" called Mrs. Comstock from the kitchen. "I need you!"

"One second, mother," answered Elnora, throwing off the coat and hat and closing the umbrella as she ran. There were several errands to do in a hurry, and then supper. Elnora chattered incessantly, Wesley and Margaret talked all they could, while Mrs. Comstock said a word now and then, which was all she ever did. But Wesley Sinton was watching her, and time and again he saw a peculiar little twist around her mouth. He knew that for the first time in sixteen years she really was laughing over something. She had all she could do to preserve her usually sober face. Wesley knew what she was thinking.

After supper the dress was finished, the plans for the next one discussed, and then the Sintons went home. Elnora gathered her treasures.

As she started for the stairs she stopped. "May I kiss you good night, mother?" she asked lightly.

"Never mind any slobbering," said Mrs. Comstock. "I should think you'd lived with me long enough to know that I don't care for it."

"Well, I'd love to show you in some way how happy I am and how I thank you."

"I wonder what for?" said Mrs. Comstock. "Mag Sinton picked that stuff and brought it here, and you pay for it."

"Yes, but you seemed willing for me to have it, and you said you would help me if I couldn't pay all," insisted Elnora.

"Maybe I did," said Mrs. Comstock. "Maybe I did. I meant to get you some heavy dress skirts about Thanksgiving, and I still can get them. Go to bed and for mercy's sake don't begin mooning before a mirror and make a dunce of yourself."

CHAPTER VI.

Wherein the Heart of Pete Corson Is Touched by a Girl.

MRS. COMSTOCK picked up several papers and blew out the kitchen light. She stood in the middle of the sitting room floor for a time and then went into her room and closed the door. Sitting on the edge of the bed, she thought for a few minutes and then suddenly buried her face in the pillow and again heaved with laughter.

Down the road plodded Margaret and Wesley Sinton. Neither of them had words to utter their united thought.

"Done!" hissed Wesley at last. "Done brown! Did you ever feel like a bloomin', confounded donkey? How did the woman do it?"

"She didn't do it!" gulped Margaret through her tears. "She didn't do anything. She just trusted to Elnora's great big soul to bring her out right, and really she was right, and so it had to bring her. She's a darling, Wesley. But she's got a time before her. Did you see Kate Comstock grab that money? Before six months she'll be out combing the Limberlost for bugs and arrow points to help pay the tax. I know her."

"Well, I don't!" exclaimed Sinton. "She's too many for me. But there is a laugh left in her yet. I didn't s'pose there was. Bet you a dollar if we could see her this minute she'd be chuckling over the way we got left."

Both of them stopped in the road and looked back.

"There's Elnora's light in her room," said Margaret. "The poor child will feel those clothes and pore over her books till morning, but she'll look decent to go to school, anyway. Nothing is too big a price to pay for that."

"Yes, if Kate lets her wear them. Ten to one she makes her finish the week with that old stuff."

"No, she won't," said Margaret. "She don't dare. Kate made some concessions all right, big ones for her—if she did get her way in the main. She bent some, and if Elnora proves that she can walk out barehanded in the morning and come back with that much money in her pocket, an armful of books and buy a turnout like that she proves that she is of some consideration, and Kate's smart enough. She'll think twice before she'll do that. Elnora won't wear a calico dress to high school again. You watch and see if she does! She may have got the best clothes she'll get for a time for the least money, but she won't know it until she tries to buy goods herself at the same rates. Wesley, what about those prices? Didn't they shrink considerable?"

"You began it," said Wesley. "Those prices were all right. We didn't say what the goods cost us; we said what they would cost her. Surely she's mistaken about being able to pay all that. Can she pick up stuff of that value around the Limberlost? Didn't the Bird Woman see her trouble and just give her the money?"

"I don't think so," said Margaret. "Seems to me I've heard of her paying or offering to pay them that would take the money for bugs and butterflies, and I've known people who sold that banker Indian stuff. Once I heard that his pipe collection beat that of the government at the Philadelphia centennial. Those things have come to have a value."

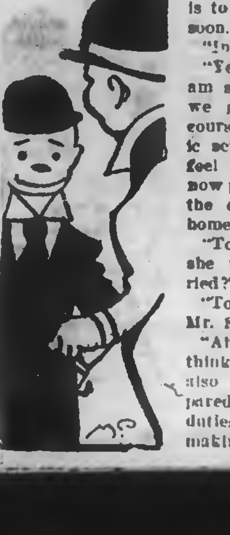
"Well, there's about a bushel of that kind of valuables piled up in the woodshed that belongs to Elnora. At least I picked them up because she said she wanted them. Maggie, how the nation did Kate Comstock do that?"

"You will keep on harping, Wesley. I told you she didn't do it. Elnora did it! She walked in and took things right out of our hands. S'pose we'd got Elnora when she was a baby, and we'd heaped on her all the love we can't on our own, and we'd coddled, petted and shielded her, would she have made the woman that living alone, learning to think for herself and taking all the knocks Kate Comstock could give have made of her?"

"You bet your life!" cried Wesley warmly. "Loving anybody don't hurt them. We wouldn't have done anything but love her. You can't hurt a child loving it. She'd have learned to work, be sensible, study, and grown into a woman with us, without suffering like a poor homeless dog."

(To be Continued.)

Not Sufficient Preparation.



"My daughter is to be married soon."

"Indeed!"

"Yes. And I am so glad that we gave her a course in domestic science, for I feel that she is now prepared for the duties of homemaking."

"To whom is she to be married?"

"To the young Mr. Spender."

"Ah! Don't you think you ought also have prepared her for the duties of money making too?"

UNDERBRIM HALO.

The Rose Hat Pretty For Debutante.

OLD ROSE VELVET MODEL.

This halo hat is particularly attractive when worn by a debutante, but woe to the woman past her first youth who attempts to wear one.

The brim of the halo consists of one or more layers of tulle sewed above or below the brim of a large hat. In this instance tulle in three shades of old rose is used under the brim of an old rose hat. A paradise in pale yellow tones sweeps from under the brim over the shoulders of the wearer. No trimming appears on the top of the model.

Why Little Women Fascinate.

Little women appear to fascinate men more than big ones do. Perhaps it is because they look up to men and so appeal to their chivalry. They are less independent by nature and more confiding. A little woman always strikes a man as being more or less helpless, and he wants if he is a manly man to shield her if necessary and to take her part.

Little women are more dainty than big ones and have prettier hands and feet. A five and a half glove appeals to the masculine heart where a six and three-quarters one utterly fails.

New Chameleon Velvets.

The chameleon velvets are another novelty of the season which are finding a warm reception. Nor is this favor to be wondered at when they come in such delightful color combinations as royal blue and violet, old gold and prune, nile green and copper, old blue and violet and others just as artistic. Lace and chiffon enter largely into the fashioning of the frocks of this material.

Gown of Great Distinction.

The combination of two rich materials produces an effect of great distinction, even when the lines are very simple. This elaborate tailored costume shows old gold velvet combined with moleskin, the ball buttons being of amber.

The peasant one piece sleeve and the rolling directoire collar are noteworthy.

OLD GOLD VELVET AND MOLESKIN.

Boots of black satin with amber buttons and Louis heels accompany this costume.

Footwear fashion decrees that all boots shall be buttoned this season and that these buttons on dressy gowns shall correspond with the button trimming on the costume. Even in the case when expensive buttons, such as rhinestone, lapus lazuli and, as in this instance, amber, are used is this true.

Valuable Sewing Hints.

Beautiful buttonholes may be made in any material, no matter how thin, if they are first marked and before they are cut out are stitched along each side on the machine. Cut between the two rows of stitching and there will be good foundation for the buttonhole stitches, with no danger of raveling. This makes the working of any buttonhole much easier and greatly adds to its durability.

Inevitable Comment.

A committee of investigating scientists approached a lady.

"Madam," said Professor Prewins, the spokesman, offering her a magnificent chrysanthemum of rare and lovely hue. "Madam, permit me to present this flower to you as a token of our high regard."

She clasped the splendid blossom in her lily hand.

Breathlessly the committee awaited her reply.

"How beautiful it is!" she answered. "What an exquisite shade of purple! I should love to have a dress of that color."

Dr. Prewins nodded knowingly to the committee as if to say, "I told you so."

The committee winked to the professor and whispered, "You win."—Newark News.

A TELEPHONE CALL

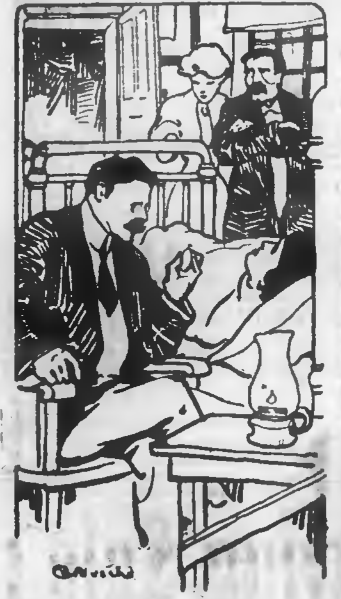
It Led a Physician to an Adventure

By WALTER BRONSON

I had come in from my afternoon calls on my patients, tired and hungry, and luckily between after dinner and bedtime I was not called out. At 10 o'clock I turned in and fell into a sound sleep. At 11 there was a sharp ring at the telephone bell beside my bed. Half asleep, I was conjuring up excuses for not going out into the night and, taking the receiver off the hook, applied it to my ear and asked who called.

"Help! North side of Skelton square! Only dwelling left among business blocks! See woman with white skin, brown eyes and reddish hair. Oh, my God!"

I could hear a gruff voice, "You come away from that." A shriek and a scuffle, and all was still. For a moment I thought of calling central with a view to asking if they knew who lived in the house described, but since I would be likely to wait a long while for the information and was not sure that it would benefit me I concluded to act without it.



IT DIDN'T REQUIRE A PHYSICIAN TO SEE THAT SHE WAS SHAMMING.

I was a young man then, not quite thirty, yet old enough to have tired of being called up in the middle of the night to listen to persons' aches and pains. But I was not too old to be interested in a cry for help from a woman. Whether she knew who it was she called or had simply cried for help to any one who might hear her I did not know. Indeed, to this day I have never learned how the telephone connection fell to me and have never been able to account for it. But, for that matter, I have never been able to account for a tithe of the mistakes occurring on my phone. I became awake at once and interested in a case that was not likely to come within the range of my profession. I sounded to James Dugan the signal to bring my auto to my door, dressed myself, took a revolver from a bureau drawer; then, snatching up my medicine satchel, on which I relied more than on the pistol, I ran downstairs and out to the auto.

"Skelton square, James!" I said.

"What number, sir?"

"I haven't the number; north side of square; only dwelling house; let her go."

On the way I told James the circumstances, and he suggested that it was a case for the police rather than a doctor, but failed to convince me. It seemed to me that if the police went to the house, whoever was at fault, would be forewarned, where a doctor, supposed to have been called to see a patient might gain access without being suspected of his real intention. As we drove through the streets at law breaking pace, I having occasionally to cry "Doctor!" to a policeman who attempted to stop me, it occurred to me that in the few words the woman at the phone had been permitted to speak she had told a great deal.

When we reached Skelton square we found the house without any difficulty, the only dwelling on the north side. It was an old house, above which modern office buildings towered on either side. There was not a light to be seen in it. The block was divided by an alley and the house cornered on the alley. I told James to come with me and go down this alley to the rear of the dwelling and when I called for admittance to watch for the exit of any one who might rush to get out in that quarter. If I succeeded in getting in he was to run to the front door, rap and, if possible, I would see that he was admitted also. He thought it would be better, should I succeed in making an entrance, for him to follow with a police force. But I preferred to rely on myself, to play the part of a physician till I had at least gained the necessary information. I had no mind to permit the cops to blunderingly start up my game too soon or to spoil my endeavor through jealousy.

I ran up the steps and rang the bell. No answer. I believed if a crime were being perpetrated in the house, if I knocked loud enough, the inmates would fear that I would attract the attention of the police and would answer the summons on that account. I therefore knocked gently, increasing my knockings, and at last began to kick with my boots. At this latter device I saw through the transom a light approaching. A chain was loosened, a key turned, the door was opened, and an ill favored woman looked at me over a kerosene lamp.

"Doctor to see the sick woman," I said in a businesslike tone.

"What sick woman?"

"The one who telephoned."

This seemed to put an idea into the woman's head. She doubtless knew of the telephone message, and I think it occurred to her that it had reached a physician. Might it not be a good plan to avert any detrimental consequences by pretending that a doctor had really been called for?

"There is a woman here who is sick, but she doesn't need a doctor," she said.

"Whether she does or she doesn't is her affair. When I'm called out to see a patient I don't permit any one to put me off. I might be held for criminal neglect."

I aggressively stalked into the hall. The woman asked me to wait a minute and went away. She had no sooner gone than I heard a tap at the front door, and I admitted James. I told him to stand by the door and if I were called to see a patient to search for what he could find. The woman kept me waiting so long that I called out gruffly:

"Hi, you, there! Do you expect me to stay here all night?"

I heard voices, and the woman came back with a man. The latter looked ugly, but, seeing that I had been reenforced by James, said quietly:

"All right, doctor. My wife is suffering with a bad pain in her side. Come this way."

I followed him, keeping a hand on my revolver in my overcoat outside pocket. I was conducted to a room where a woman lay in bed groaning. Her hair and eyes were black, and I knew at once that she was not the person who had called me. Besides, it didn't require a physician to see that she was shamming pain. To give James time to make discoveries, I asked her a great many questions as to her symptoms, felt her pulse and her side, where she said she suffered the pain; called for hot water, and when they said there was no water heated I told them to heat it at once.

I asked if there were enough persons in the house to assist in an operation, and they said there were but the two women and the man. Hearing James cough in the hall, I wrote a prescription and told the man to go out to a drug store and get the medicine it called for. I thought for a time he would refuse. I looked up at him with stern surprise, and this decided him, and he went out doggedly. I followed him into the hall and signed to James to turn the key after him, which was done without making a perceptible sound. Then James and I approached each other, and James whispered in my ear:

"There's a door locked upstairs and some one moaning inside."

"Wait here," was my reply, and I went back to my patient.

The woman who had admitted me was in the kitchen heating or pretending to heat the water, leaving me alone with the one in bed. Taking some ether from my medicine case, I poured it on a towel and held it over her face. She struggled, but I held my ground, and she was soon unconscious. I called James, and, handing him my revolver, I told him to go into the kitchen and not let the woman there come out. Then I went upstairs and after trying a couple of doors found the one that was locked. I called out: "I'm the man you got on the telephone! What's the trouble?"

The reply came, "I've been kidnaped and am held here till I can be removed to"—

"There's no time to hear the story now," I interrupted, and in a twinkling I made up my mind between calling the police and taking the woman away on my own responsibility. Choosing the latter course I gave the door a vigorous kick; the lock or the woodwork about it was old and rotten, it flew open and a woman stepped out into the hall. There was no light on the floor and I could not see her features; but, having hurried her downstairs, I saw that she was young and comely. I called to James to lock the door leading to the kitchen and come quick. He did so and in another moment the three of us were in the auto spinning away.

"Where shall I take you?" I asked the lady.

"Anywhere except where I, am known," was the reply.

"Why?"

"I have escaped from a retreat. It is a matter of property. They are trying to prove me insane. If they discover where I am the matter will be referred to the courts and they will send me back."

I caught on to this brief statement and resolved to take the lady to my house, where I lived with my mother and sister. It occurred to me that my decision not to call the police was fortunate. I carried my capture home and, arousing my sister, turned the prize over to her. Then I went to bed. In an hour I had been summoned and had found the person who had called for me and had rescued her.

The next morning she asked me to send for a lawyer, who came and took care of her case so skillfully that within a year she obtained full possession of an estate of which others were trying to deprive her and at the same time to keep her in an asylum. I was called upon to testify before the court. The only thing I knew against her sanity was that she had accepted a proposition of marriage from so unworthy a person as myself.

A ROMANCE OF RUBBER.

Smuggled Seeds From Brazil Started the Industry In India.

Living on a pension in London is W. H. Wickham, the man responsible for the introduction of rubber trees in India at the risk of his life. He is said to have received from the promoters of the enterprise $5,500 in cash, the remainder being put out at interest to furnish him with a life income. The agricultural department of East India, which was approached on the subject, took kindly to it and sent Wickham to gather the seed of the Para rubber tree in Brazil.

Wickham lived in the jungle with the natives and won their confidence. Slowly he collected seeds until he had 75,000 of them. He put them in bags and smuggled them aboard a ship which was short of cargo and funds. The government of India stood all the costs. The seeds were cultivated in the pothouses of Kew gardens. Some 2,000 Para plants developed, and these were sent to Ceylon for cultivation.

That was the beginning of the rubber growing industry in India, and now millions of dollars are made annually from the rubber plantations in Ceylon, Malaya and other East Indian provinces. From Wickham's seeds much purer rubber was grown than Brazil had ever seen. He ran the risk of a long term in prison, for a Brazilian law prohibited the removal of the seeds from the country.—Argonaut.

Lighting Up the Battlefield.

In the event of a war between great world powers, says the Jahrbuch der Wissenschaften, battle machinery will play an important part. The searchlight has already been introduced, but it is cumbersome and is not always effective when the ground is uneven. This will be replaced by the illuminating pistol with which little bombs may be shot into the dark spaces. These bombs on exploding will cast a light equal to 3,000 candle power for a space of 500 meters. By these a battlefield could be brilliantly illuminated, and a larger and more powerful light projectile will be fired from mortars which are now being perfected.

A New Theory of Colors.

Experiments have been made which, it is held, demonstrate that the true complementary colors of the spectrum have not hitherto been recognized. Red, for instance, has always been considered to be the complement of green, yellow of violet and blue of orange. But, according to Rosenstiel, the complements of red and orange are neither green nor blue, but two greenish blue tints, and the complement of yellow is asserted to be blue, and not violet, which is the complement of green. Accordingly there has been formed a new "chromatic circle" for the use of artists, which Rosenstiel believes to be more correct than its predecessors.—Exchange.

Our Jail In China.

In the annual appropriation bill for the diplomatic and consular service of the United States there is included an item for the actual expenses of renting a prison at Shanghai, China, for Americans convicted in the United States court for China. In the statutes the place of confinement in Shanghai is designated a "prison," and as there is but one place provided it serves both as penitentiary and jail. This prison consists of one small back room in a private building, in the wall of which there is a hole through which the prisoner is supplied with food, the jailer being a clerk in the United States consulate at Shanghai.—Harper's.

New Fuel Ships.

One of the new fuel ships provided for the navy at the past session of congress will be built at the New York yard. The other will be built at the Mare Island yard. The two ships are to be identical in design. These vessels, when completed, will be of the highest type of naval colliers and designed especially to carry oil. Fleet oilers Nos. 1 and 2 is the official designation of the two new ships, and they will be so constructed as to carry an oil cargo of 7,590 tons, exclusive of 1,500 tons for their own fuel.

The Truth About Old Age.

George F. Baer, the famous Philadelphia railroad man, said on his seventieth birthday:

"I agree with Professor Metchnikoff about the wisdom of the old. Professor Osler made it fashionable to decry gray hairs, but my experience has been that the old not only possess wisdom, but they seek it also."

With a smile Mr. Baer added:

"The only people who think they are too old to learn are those who really are too young."—New York Tribune.

For the Children

Christmas Dolls In Up to Date Costumes.

The girls and perhaps boys, too, for that matter, who are planning to make Christmas gifts of dolls to their young friends might find a hint as to dressing the toy babies in the picture shown above. A pair of dolls in sweaters is a rather novel and up to date scheme. The costume is appropriate to the season and would be sure to delight the youthful recipient. The donor, of course, need not give two dolls, but the jolly pair, with that tiny Teddy bear between them, make a very interesting and picturesque group. Doubtless there are many girls who will improve on the suggestion and produce something far more unique and pleasing. Anyhow, it helps us enjoy the holiday season and feel the true Christmas spirit to remember our friends, no matter how modest the offering. Gifts made by the giver's hands are from the heart and are evidences of good will and love.

Holiday Cards.

Christmas and New Year's cards, like a good many other things, might be said to have been discovered by accident. Their originator was a Mr. Dobson, who in 1844 made a little sketch symbolic of the season's joys and sent it to a friend. It gave great pleasure, and the next day Mr. Dobson determined to follow up the idea on a larger scale. He had his card lithographed and was enabled to send copies to some twenty-five of his friends. Mr. Dobson soon saw that his idea was a happy one, for the delight of those who had received his cards was far greater than if he had sent them gifts. Thus has come to us this card greeting, now almost as indispensable to the Christmas season as evergreen trees and mysterious packages tied in red ribbons and with a spray of holly to bid us a "Merry Christmas."

Dickens' Christmas Greetings.

"A merry Christmas to us all, my dears. God bless us." "God bless us every one!" said Tiny Tim, the last of all.

"Yo-ho, my boys," said Fezziwig. "No more work tonight, Christmas eve, Dick! Christmas, Ebenezer!"

Christmas time I have always thought of as a good time—a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time.

BORDEN POLICY IS POPULAR

Dr. Edwards, of Frontenac, says that of the voters in his riding 90 per cent favor the Borden naval policy. Some of the straight-die Liberals are not forward about proclaiming their views, but they think much more of Mr. Borden's straight-forward attempt to do something to help the naval defence of the Empire than of the Laurier substitute plans. The creation of a Canadian navy, under the circumstances similar to those surrounding the bringing here of the Niobe and Rainbow, would be too ridiculous a proposition for Canada to permit. The naval proposal of Laurier involves no special defence for Canada for some years, and even then it would be of little use as a help to the British navy. What is first of all such strengthening of the central navy as will ensure the predominance of Britain at the most critical sea points, and that assured for a few years more, we have a breathing space to consider what we ought to adopt as a permanent policy. The gift of three Dreadnoughts is not a permanent policy. Canada is not going to give three Dreadnoughts every three years under such circumstances. Having done our duty for the time being to the Empire, we will feel unashamed, we will wipe out the stain of inaction, and we will then sit by and wait for the unfolding of some plan of imperial reciprocity or federation such as Mr. Borden undoubtedly has in mind.

THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC SUPPORT

The Peterborough supporters of the Hydro-electric Commission will find their faith in the achieving power of that commission confirmed by the annual report of the affairs of the Commission for the year ending October 31, 1912. That report is eminently satisfactory to all believers in the cause of the people's power. The capital cost of the Hydro distributing system is over $4,000,000, and the interest on this, the cost of power as taken from the Ontario Power Company, the cost of distribution, maintenance, transmission losses, etc., for the year totalled $456,000. The receipts from the sale of power to the municipalities amounted to $511,000, giving a surplus for the year of about $55,000. The recent announcement by the Commission that the sale of power prices would be reduced, each city and town sharing in the reduction proportionately to its distance, and the quantity of power taken, was the result of the splendid showing in the last quarter of the year. In that quarter the jump of revenue was nearly $30,000, the amount of the power delivered being $157,000. Thus the great growth of the consumption over the Commission's lines is amply demonstrated. If the Hydro-electric Commission had been a private company, it would have watched the increasing receipts, and the piling up of a surplus, with a broad smile, anticipating with some glee the fattening of the receipts to a highly profitable degree. But the beauty of the Hydro-electric power is that it is operated for the benefit of the public, and the public gets the benefit of what price reductions can be made. The Hydro-electric system seems to be in a prosperous and growing condition all the way through, and this fact is one to commend the Commission in its estimates on the Peterborough power proposition.

KRYPTOK

Means "hidden eye." The "near" lens is actually hidden in the "distance" lens making a solid piece of glass.

No "lines" no cement, and perfect sight with the discomfort and unsightliness left out.

They cost more than the regular "cement" bifocal, ("Bifocal" means two lenses in one—far and near) but if you are particular of comfort and appearance they are worth the difference. We recommend and sell them.

ABOUT BONUSING

From the Toronto Star: From a brief inspection of unrevised election returns, it appears that industries were yesterday bonused by Goderich, Tavistock, Elmira, Huntsville, Seaforth, Peterboro, Harrow, Newmarket, Orangeville, Petrolea, Forest, Blenheim, Fort William, and other places. It is encouraging to see that similar measures were defeated in Waterloo, Berlin, Niagara Falls, Tillsonburg, Penetang, and a few more centres despite the bonusing-made-easy legislation. The time will come when municipalities will refuse bonuses altogether. It should be hastened by a statute making industrial bonuses illegal.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any cause that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

USED 38 TONS OF PAPER

This enormous quantity of paper was used in printing the 1913 edition of the Na-Dru Co. Almanac, just off the press. As each Almanac weighs a little less than two ounces, this means that 700,000 copies were printed— one copy for every eleven individuals, or for every two families, in Canada. Stronger evidence could scarcely be given of the wonderful popularity which has already been won by the Na-Dru Almanac now only in its fourth edition. This is due to the rich fund of useful information which it contains, and to its valuable hints on health and physical comfort. Reader, your druggist has a copy for you.

STATEMENT FROM THE SUPREME COURT REPORTS

The following statement is taken from the index of the last volume of Supreme Court of Canada Reports to hand. It will be noticed that under the heading of "Constitutional Law," reference is made to the late Marriage Law case which came up in Parliament and was referred to the Courts. It will be seen that the Lancaster Bill was decided by the Supreme Court (affirmed by the Privy Council) to be ultra vires. This Bill (the Lancaster Bill) was not voted on in Parliament at all, but was referred to the Courts. If it had been declared constitutional by the Privy Council or by the Supreme Court it would have been voted upon by Parliament after the reference. Then follow some remarks by Idington J., after which follows the judgment of the Court respecting the marriage of Catholics in Quebec, by Davies, Idington and Duff, who, being the majority of the Court expressing an opinion, give the decision of the Supreme Court in this respect. It will be noticed that Anglin J. opposed but the Chief Justice expressed no opinion. Then follows the decision of the Court (affirmed by the Privy Council) with reference to marriages in Quebec, where one party is a Roman Catholic (or mixed marriages) which is followed by a statement of Idington J. with respect thereto. It will be noticed that the law referred to throughout is the Civil Law, and that the Canonical Law is not cited. This establishes the supremacy of the Civil Law. It will be seen that the law in Quebec is different to that heretofore supposed.

The answers to Mr. Burnham's recent questions show, it will be remembered, that the Parliament of Canada has complete jurisdiction in its own territories, and that therefore marriages contracted under these laws are, as in the case of marriages contracted under the Provincial laws, valid everywhere; not, however, because the Parliament of Canada (or the Provinces) has said so, because it could not say so but by reason of international law which considers valid all marriages contracted legally in civilized countries.

"CONSTITUTIONAL LAW — "Marriage and divorce"—"Solemnization of marriage"—"Jurisdiction of Parliament—Jurisdiction of legislature—Federal validating Act—Religious belief —Canonical decrees—Civil rights—"B.N.A. Act" (1867), s.s. 91 and 92—Arts. 127 et seq. C.C.) The parliament of Canada has no authority to enact a bill in the following form:—1. The "Marriage Act," chapter 105 of the Revised Statutes, 1906, is amended by adding thereto the following section:—"3. Every ceremony or form of marriage heretofore or hereafter performed by any person authorized to perform any ceremony of marriage by the laws of the place where it is performed, and duly performed according to such laws, shall everywhere within Canada be deemed to be a valid marriage, notwithstanding any differences in the religious faith of the persons so married and without regard to the religion of the person performing the ceremony.—"2. The rights and duties, as married people, of the respective persons married as aforesaid, and of the children of such marriage, shall be absolute and complete, and no law or canonical decree or custom of or in any province of Canada shall have any force or effect to invalidate or qualify any such marriage or any of the rights of the said persons or their children in any manner whatsoever." (Affirmed by Privy Council, 29th July, 1912.)—Per Idington J.—The retrospective part would be good as part of a scheme for concurrent legislation by Parliament and legislatures confirming past marriages which, probably, neither effectively can do. The prospective part, so far as possible to make it an effective prohibition of religious tests, may be good, but doubtful, and the probable purpose can be reached by a better bill.—Per Davies, Idington and Duff J.J.—The law of the Province of Quebec does not render null and void, unless contracted before a Roman Catholic priest, a marriage in such province between two Roman Catholics that would otherwise be binding. Anglin J. contra. Fitzpatrick C.J. expressing no opinion—The law of Quebec does not render void, unless contracted before a Roman Catholic priest, a marriage otherwise valid where one party only is a Roman Catholic.—The Parliament of Canada has no authority to enact that a marriage between Roman Catholics, or a "mixed marriage," not contracted before a Roman Catholic priest and whether heretofore or hereafter solemnized shall be valid and binding. (Affirmed by Privy Council, 29th July, 1912.)—Per Idington J.—Parliament has power to declare valid such a marriage heretofore solemnized to be concurred in by the legislature of the province concerned, and the like power as to a marriage hereafter to be solemnized if and when the province fails to provide adequate means of solemnization. (See (1912) A.C. 880.) S.C.R. Vol. XLVI."

TOOK WELL AT SPRINGVILLE

Charlotte St. Ladies' Aid Gave Their Entertainment

The Ladies' Aid of Charlotte-st. Methodist church repeated their "Olde Tyme Lydies Aide" meeting at Mohawk Crossroads, last evening in the Springville Presbyterian church with great success. About thirty-five people from Peterborough including the company were driven out to Springville by representatives of the Presbyterian church. The ladies were splendidly entertained and partook of an appetising supper, previous to the concert as guests of Dr. Marsh at the manse.

The Presbyterian church was filled to capacity and the audience heartily appreciated the amusing incidents with which the sketch teemed. At its conclusion a vote of thanks was tendered the whole company.

Mr. R. F. Downey contributed solos, in his usual excellent voice, also Mrs. G. B. Hughes.

PROVED A BIG DRAWING CARD

Good Attendance at Closing of Poultry Show

The Peterborough poultry exhibition was brought to a conclusion last night after a most successful and highly satisfactory three days duration. The attendance of each day and evening averaged well, and the association feel justly proud of their achievements. The splendid rally of bird fanciers which featured the exhibition, proved to be a great drawing card, and last evening scores of people took advantage of the last opportunity of visiting the show. Secretary Kelly is busy entering the names of the prize winners and will be in a position to furnish them in a day or two.

The exhibition has done much to stir up and increase interest in poultry breeding in the city.

LETTER CARRIERS HELD BANQUET

A banquet of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, held last evening, was a great success. After a sumptuous supper served at Hoopers, the evening was pleasantly passed in the enjoyment of songs, speeches and musical selections. During the evening the members of the association presented their assistant carrier with a handsome sum of money. Though taken by surprise, he replied in a few well-chosen words, thanking his associates for their kindness in the past.

108 JUVENILE TICKETS WERE ISSUED AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

Total Number of Books Issued During Year Was 52,327.

At the regular meeting of the Public Library Board last night, Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, the librarian, reported thirteen hundred volumes added to the library during the past year. In the purchase of books 691 were of fiction. The total number of books issued was 52,327. One hundred and eight juvenile tickets and 850 adults were issued, six of the latter being country membership. The total amount of tickets issued to date is 3311.

The report further says;

Many gifts of books from private individuals have been received and to Mrs. Dean the library is especially indebted for a generous gift from the collection of the late Judge Weller, consisting of a rare edition of 18th century essayists and many other volumes of an interesting and useful character. The gifts received from these various sources amount to 102 volumes and deal almost entirely with subjects other than fiction.

BOOK CIRCULATION

There has been an increase in circulation during the year, showing that interest in the Library is by no means on the wane. Last year the total circulation for forty seven weeks was 42737 and this year for fifty-two weeks the figures are over on 52,000. It has to be borne in mind that no account whatever is taken of the books used during this period in the Reference Room, which would certainly amount to many thousands more.

FINANCES

The statement of finances showed a balance in hand of $318.82. Fines, reserves and renewals amounted to $223.36; county members fees, $12; sale of old paper $2.43; sale of old magazines $10.25. The city grant was $4000; government grant $260; interest in credit balance $20.02; Mrs. Nicholls endowment $828.30.

RECOMMENDATIONS

On his report, the retiring chairman, Mr W. G. Morrow suggested as subjects for consideration by the Board;

1. The establishment of a distinct children's department.

2. The advisability or otherwise of establishing a course of lectures during the present winter.

3. The establishment of a children's hour.

In expenditures, $829.56 was paid for books; $389.45 for book binding; $306.23 for furniture and furnishings while magazines, newspapers, etc. cost $229.28. Salaries amounted to $2099.77.

In part, the report of Mr. T. A. S. Hay, Curator of the Museum, was as follows:

The rapid growth of the Museum shows the great interest taken in it by the public, but it is necessary that additional cases should be procured, for which no funds are available.

Many persons have offered to donate or loan articles if there are cases to display them in, and much material has been removed from this vicinity to Museums in other cities, which by right should be deposited here. Strong efforts are being made to retain what are left. If the Board can see their way to making a grant for new cases it will be very much appreciated, as the Museum, even now, is the most comprehensive collection to be found outside of the large cities.

FEWER CASES OF MISFORTUNE IN THE CITY

An excellent state of affairs prevails in Peterborough as far as the absence of downright cases of hard-luck or poverty are concerned. Not for some time has Peterborough been so blessed in this respect. In some past years at this season City Relief Officer Miller has had much to do in alleviating cases of distress. The officer, however, whenever such a case is reported, always personally investigates, thereby satisfying himself that whatever aid is advanced is wisely and worthily done. Often, however, zealous, but misinformed people call at his office to solicit assistance for families whom they consider poor. These same families, so Mr. Miller says, often have sufficient means of support to enable them to live fairly well of which the well meaning informants are ignorant. Mr. Miller is rarely imposed upon and the Charity Board always rely on his careful reports, and implicitly trust him with the expending of the city relief funds to the best advantage.

FRITZ KUHN COMING

Fritz Kuhn, of Ottawa, a noted business specialist, will speak here under the auspices of the Peterboro Ad Club next Monday evening, in Hooper's Palm Parlors. All merchants and clerks are invited, but seats must be reserved in advance. Secretary McNichol, of Cressman's store, has the tickets.

C. S. Hubbell of Vancouver, B.C., was the guest of C. L. Cunningham, Rubidge street, during the week.

Mr. E. Pemberton, 134 Rubidge street, left for St. John's to-day to sail on the Empress of Britain for a trip to the old country, where he expects to visit for six or eight weeks.

Mr. W. H. Hastings, barrister, etc., Winnipeg, who is in the city visiting friends and his the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. Greene, 202 Perry street, leaves to-night for Ottawa on business in connection with the Government.

ASSAULT CHARGE COST THE DEFENDANT $17.60

A case was heard in County Police Magistrate Edmison's court this morning, when Herbert Miller of Keene was found guilty of assaulting Bertie Evans, an employe, engaged in cutting wood for him.

Mr. G. N. Gordon conducted the case for the complainant, and Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., appeared for the defendant. Miller was found guilty and ordered to pay a fine of $2.50, and the costs of the action, which in all amounted to $17.60.

It appeared that Evans decided to quit working for Miller, and at six o'clock on Monday morning last he left Miller's house, where he had been boarding, taking with him his suit cases.

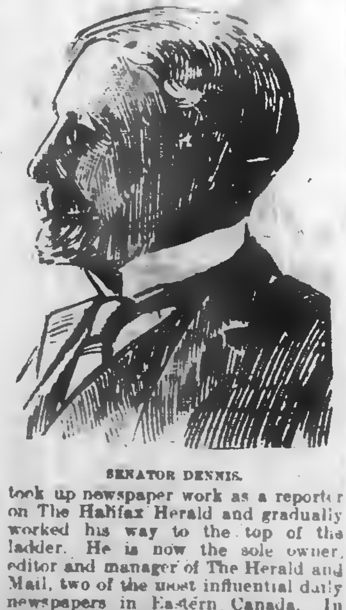
Miller followed him and in a melee which ensued Evans was choked and knocked to the ground. The injury to his throat necessitated medical attendance by Dr. McWilliams, of Keene.

SENATOR DENNIS' RISE

NEW WEARER OF THE TOGA CAME FROM ENGLAND.

A Visitor at an English Hotel Advised Boy to Emigrate to America and the Lad Came to Halifax—He Has Always Been Very Much an Independent In Politics—Is Enterprising and Ambitious.

Some years ago, while stopping at an English hotel, a visitor became attracted to a rather bright lad who was employed about the place. He thought the youngster would succeed in America and told him so, the boy "thought it over," with the result that he came to America, but not to the United States. He selected that part of America where the British flag waved. You see he was a bit of a flag waver, though a very small one. And he never dropped the habit. That youngster settled in Nova Scotia and the other day Premier Borden called him to the Senate. Senator Dennis is, in the truest sense, a self-made man. Shortly after coming to Canada he took up newspaper work as a reporter on The Halifax Herald and gradually worked his way to the top of the ladder. He is now the sole owner, editor and manager of The Herald and Mail, two of the most influential daily newspapers in Eastern Canada. In calling Mr. Dennis to the Senate, Premier Borden is paying a high compliment to the independent party press. The Dennis publications never hesitate to clean out their own political stables. The fact that they have as many Grit readers as they have Tory bears witness to this.



SENATOR DENNIS.

Senator Dennis is a man of indomitable energy, enterprising and ambitions. He is one of the leading aldermen of Halifax city, chairman of the city board of works and freely spoken of as the next "first citizen." The handsome Dennis Building, the most imposing structure in the city of Halifax, and the new Herald and Mail building now in the course of construction, are monuments to his industry and enterprise.—Saturday Night.

Entertaining.

Cholly—There's always something to laugh about when I tell a joke. She—Yes, and you're always so nice about it. You never get mad.—Puck.

Obeying Instructions.

Employer—You're late again!

New Clerk—Well, you said you didn't want a man who watched the clock.—Life.

Christmas Secrets.

Upstairs and downstairs,
In every nook and corner,
We find surprises unawares,
As did wee Jacky Horner.

Christmas pies and Christmas cake
Nestle in the cupboard.
What a find all these would make
For dear old Mother Hubbard!

Every time the doorbell rings,
My, what a commotion!
Children only guess at things,
But can have no notion.

Underneath the couch there lies
Many a bulky package.
But 'twould spoil a fine surprise
Should we break the wrappage.

We must never, never peep
(Children, all take warning).
Or we may have cause to weep
On a Christmas morning.

Secrecy about us lies.
All the nooks and corners
Hold for us as fine surprise
As little Jacky Horner's!

When Baby Begins to Walk.

The business of walking requires development of strength and obedience to the will. The baby muscles are not accustomed to just this kind of order and they do not readily respond. Neither have they supported such great weight as is now demanded of them. It is well to bathe in salt water night and morning the legs of a baby who is learning to walk and to rub and knead the muscles, working toward the body.

The clothing must be loose, with nothing tight around thighs or hips. The bones and flesh of the little child are very soft, and, if the legs are crowded out of the natural position in any manner by the tight clothing the bones will adjust themselves to the pressure and grow crooked. Women having the care of children should keep this in mind.

Don't Restrict Your Daughter's Development.

The mother who really has her daughter's interest at heart will allow the girl some opportunity to develop naturally. There is nothing so blighting to a girl's individuality as to be ruled in every way by her mother's preferences. There are mothers who considered their taste so infallible that the daughters have gone through life dressed like frumps, and other mothers who considered their judgment so infallible that they have made decisions which have ruined their daughters' happiness, and still other mothers whose love of power has made weaklings of the daughters who might otherwise have been strong.

May Close Dance Hall.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 10.—With more than $105,000 invested in the land and the building, there is a strong probability that the Coliseum, the elaborate new dance hall opened here some weeks ago, will be closed by the civic authorities and its license cancelled. Emphatic protests are being made to the police commission, the board of control and to the aldermen, that the hall is a menace to the morals of the young folks of Winnipeg.

Suspense.

"Mus, did you hear the stepladder when it tumbled down?"

"No, darling. I hope papa didn't fall."

"Not yet. He's still hanging on to the picture molding."—London Opinion.

Very Much Married.

Waitress—Have another glass, sir?

Husband (to his wife)—Shall I have another glass, Friedrika?

Wife (to her mother)—Shall we have another, mother?—Fliegende Blatter.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Diary Products, Live Stock, Etc

"I TOLD YOU SO!"

Wild eyed he hails you
Mid the din,
Grabs you, nails you,
Hems you in;
Yanks you, pokes you,
Till you wilt;
Digs you, soaks you
To the hilt;
Hands you pity;
Damns your eyes;
Sings his ditty
In this wise:
"Wow! (thump) Howdy?
Durned ol' skate!
Gee (slap) whillikens,
Wasn't it great?
What'd I tell you?
(Dig) 'Member, hey?
Purty good dope, eh?
(Punch) I sh'd say!
C'u'd they hit 'im?
(Kick) I guess no—
Not in a million!
(Smash) Told you so!"
Moral? There is none when you've lost your "dough;"
But, oh, for a gun when he lets you go!

A Quitter.

Years ago a former United States senator from one of our western states was foreman of a gang of lumberjacks, mostly Swedes. One day he had three or four with him on a raft.

"You better gat some one to tak Ole's place," one of the men addressed him.

"What's the matter with Ole?"

"Hae yust went under the raft, and I tank hae's not coming back."—Saturday Evening Post.

Tommy at Dinner.

Tommy went out to dine at a friend's house one evening. When the soup was brought Tommy did not touch his and the hostess, looking over, said:

"Why, Tommy, dear, what's the matter? Aren't you hungry tonight?"

"Yes," replied Tommy. "I'm quite hungry, but I'm not thirsty."—Judge.

WARNING!

Information has reached us that certain dealers, when asked for Zam-Buk, try to sell something else on which they make a larger profit. They do not give this as their reason but say; "I can sell you so and so at half the price and it is just as good."

Don't be fooled! The "cheap" preparation is not just as good as Zam-Buk—not in the same class! Most of the cheap salves are made from animal fats and oils. Zam-Buk is made from pure herbal essences and juices. There is as little similarity between the two as between a horse and an automobile.

Imitation of Zam-Buk and cheap substitutes may give the dealer a little more profit, but they won't cure your skin disease, or stop the pain of your burn or ease the agony of piles, or cure the rash on your baby. Don't be misled. Get the real Zam-Buk. See the legally protected name on the packet before paying for it.

The Clever Child.

It should never be forgotten that the happier a child is the cleverer he will be. This is not only because in a state of happiness the mind is free and at liberty for the exercise of its faculties, instead of spending its thoughts and energy in brooding over troubles, but also because the action of the brain is stronger when the frame is in a state of hilarity, the ideas are more clear, impressions of outward objects are more vivid, and the memory will not let them slip.—Harriet Martineau.

LOCALS SHOULD DO BETTER ON THE HARD ICE TO-NIGHT

Whitby Juniors will appear at Brock street rink to-night for an argument with the local juniors at 8.15. The only change in Captain Kenneally's line-up is at goal, where Flowers will perform.

The Brock street lads are out to jump into the winning column to-night, and with the good ice that's available, should make the game very interesting for the visitors and spectator.

The team will line-up as follows—

$ 30,000 FOR BOUT BY ZBYSZKO AND GOTCH

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 10.—Frank Gotch, champion wrestler, is likely to come out of retirement before many weeks. Gotch gave up the heavyweight championship because there was no worthy opponent to contest his honors.

The combined lure of fame and money has caused the big farmer to hanker for one more bout. Gotch has finally decided that he will meet Zbyszko the last week in April, provided the giant Pole in the meantime disposes of all the other big fellows who have been bowling for a chance at Gotch ever since the latter sought seclusion.

If the championship bout between Gotch and Zbyszko materializes it is likely to be held in this city. A syndicate of local sporting men has made all arrangements for a purse of $30,000 for the battle.

TIE OF 2-2 IN BANK LEAGUE

A fast and exciting game of hockey was played in the Brock street rink yesterday afternoon, when the Dominion-Ottawas met the mighty Toronto-Nova Scotia-Toronto Savings in the Bank League series. The result was a tie of 2-2.

The teams were:

Dominion Ottawa. T.N.S.T.S.

C. Bartlett.......... Jack Murray

W. E. Russell.......... Brown

Referee—Mr. J. Fobin.

KEN CRANE IN SENIOR COMPANY

Kenneth Crane, formerly of the local O.H.A. Juniors, was prominent in the play at Stratford last night when T. R. and O.A. defeated the home team by 6-4. He was the strongest player on his team, and scored one of the goals.

DAVE ROWAN WILL REFEREE

A new referee will be introduced to the fans to-night when Dave Rowan takes charge of the game between Whitby and the local Juniors.

Dave will doubtless get a reception not far behind that of a certain day last summer, when as the leader of the White Caps, he came across with a pinch bit over short and won one of the warmest arguments of the baseball season.

CLANCY AND COOK ON TEAM

Clancy and Cook of last year's Peterboro "bear cats" will again play together on the Dominion Bank team at the Arena to-night. The winners of the Bank League intend challenging for city honors.—Toronto Globe.

Dreadful Mistake.

There is a very sweet girl in a Kansas town who stutters dreadfully. One night not long ago when her beau was leaving she accompanied him to the porch and said, "George, are you coming again next S-s-s-s"—

The dog was on the porch. After George was half a mile down the road with the dog gaining on him at every leap, it occurred to him that possibly the young lady had intended to say "Sunday" instead of "Seize him," but it didn't occur to the dog for as much as a mile or so beyond that.—Saturday

VICTORIA WON IN OVERTIME

Canadian Press Despatch.

Victoria, Jan. 10.—Victoria defeated New Westminster by a score of 3 to 2 in fifteen minutes' overtime here last night.

Up to the Maid.

Mistress—I shall want you to be dressed by 3 o'clock, Ellen, to receive any friends that may call.

Ellen—Oh, thank yer, mum! Ain't you goin' to be in?—Philadelphia Press.

Striking a Match.

First Bachelor Maid—Miss Singleton is playing with fire again.

Second Bachelor Maid—How is that?

First Bachelor Maid—Going with an "old flame" of hers.—Judge.

The Patient's Retort.

Doctor—Well, I hope you profited by my advice?

Patient—Yes, doctor, but not so much as you did.—Tit-Bits.

The Reason Why.

"Nonsense! There was plenty of room for you to pass with the cart without knocking the gate off."

"But yer see, sorr, the room was on the wrong side of the cart."—Tatler.

His Tints.

"When I last saw him Jabbs was green with envy, yellow with jealousy, white with fear and red with rage."

"What a highly colored life his must be!"—Baltimore American.

"There is one thing which is oddly contradictory about an engine."

"What is that?"

"When it gets cooled, then it becomes hot."—Boston Herald.

IN THE MAZE.

WHAT a crisscross maze is life,
Take it any way you choose,
In the never ending strife
As you gain and as you lose!
Luck is with you now and then
As you hurry for your goal,
Twisting through the maze again,
You are pitched into a hole.

Out of it you scramble up,
Hoping to do mighty deeds.
Still of sorrow you must sup
Ere your budding hope succeeds.
How you struggle, how you groan,
As you buckle to your task
Just to make success your own,
Just in fortune's smile to bask!

But it isn't all a frost.
There are seasons to be gay.
Hope is never wholy lost.
Joys are blooming on your way.
There's a path to your success.
You will find it after while
If you seek with cheerfulness
And you don't forget to smile.

Entertain Themselves.

"What entertainment have you provided when the thimble club meets at your house next week?"

"Oh, Mrs. Gray has taken her baby and gone home to her mother, Kitty Clark has eloped with the Greek who keeps the fruit store and Tom Slade has defaulted and skipped for Brazil."

"Yes?"

"I haven't invited any of the relatives of these people, so I think the club will quite easily entertain itself."

JUST LIKE KOPENICK.

A Daring Swindler Who Is Fooling the German Officials.

In emulation of the exploits of the famous "Captain Kopenick," an audacious swindler, in the full uniform of a gendarme, carrying his rifle on his shoulder, presented himself at the treasurer's office at Bilensgach and declared he had been sent on an official inspection. The public accounts were at once submitted to him, and, after pocketing £20 and casting a glance over the books, he told the chief official that they were not in order and that he ought to arrest him. But to avoid a scandal the supposed gendarme directed him to present himself the following day at Heilbronn.

The thief then went off with his booty to repeat the comedy at Gagernberg. The alarm, however, was given, and the telephone set at work, and all the localities in the department were warned to be on the lookout for the new Captain Kopenick.

At Unterheinriet the swindler was nearly caught, but he used his rifle to such purpose that he got clear away. It was necessary, however, to traverse the populous locality of Beilstein, and to overcome this difficulty he arrested a tramp, whom he took handcuffed through the town, releasing him when he again reached the open country.

On arriving at Geupenbach he calmly announced to the police that he was hot on the track of the swindler and demanded to be supplied with a bicycle. A choice of machines was offered him. He selected the newest and pedaled rapidly away, and that is the last that has been heard of him up to the present.—Strassburg Cor. London Standard.

CHILD BREADWINNERS.

Youngsters at Work That Should Be at School or Play.

To an official window in one of the city departments of New York a man came recently, leading his little daughter. "I can't get work," he said bitterly. "This child can. They are hungry at home. May she have a permit?"

She was fourteen and met the other requirements of the law. So the city of New York gave her the desired legal document, the "working paper," as the children call it. The man and his daughter went out together, the little girl to join the great army of toilers, where the insistent sign of industry, "Girls Wanted—Boys Wanted," always swings in the wind; the father to swell the ranks of unemployed men.

Last year 40,530 children in New York city went the way of that little girl past the official window carrying their working papers with them. Throughout the United States there are some 2,000,000 of these child breadwinners less than fifteen years of age.

These papers are the passport to freedom from home constraint that economic independence assures. One sociologist has told the story of the sixteen-year-old girl who, in a dance hall of dangerous repute, tossed her head in defiance of the threat of parental objection. "I pay the rent," she said. "What can my mother do to me?"—Mrs. Daggett in World's Work.

Responsible.

"Mrs. Jipes, I think I have heard you say you have a cousin in the regular army. He is an officer, I presume?"

"Yes; he holds some responsible position, but I don't exactly know the nature of it. When he wrote to me last he said he was in the guardhouse—whatever that is."—Chicago Tribune.

Disappointed.

"George has told me all the secrets of his past."

"Mercy! What did you think of them?"

"I was awfully disappointed."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not a Cannibal.

"And how would you like to have your steak cooked, sir?" said the ever polite waiter.

"Fine!" replied the diner. "I never did care for raw meat."—Fun Magazine.

BABEL OF THE BALKANS.

The Riot of Names That Runs Loose In the Near East.

A queer bargain has been struck in the Austro-Hungarian postoffice. The Croatians have agreed to quit addressing letters to Becs, the Slav name of Vienna; the Viennese are to address letters for the Croatian capital not to Agram, as they have been doing, but to Zagrab. The postoffice is expected not to deliver letters whose addressers disregard the truce.

From Vienna (Wien or Becs) to Constantinople (Stamboul) and from Fiume (Rieka) to Saloniki (Selanik or Solun) this babel's curse of triple names continues. It makes war maps difficult and war news at times almost incomprehensible.

Servia, Macedonia, where the Greeks have been fighting toward Saloniki, is also Selvidje, Selfidja, Servida and so on. Prishtina (Pristina) is spelled by the Servians who live in it Prshtena. Try to say "Prsh" and you get the first vowel sound. Belgrade is Beograd. Sofia in Cyrillic characters looks like Cophea.

No Balkan language except Roumanian is even printed in Roman letters, and sound equivalents are not easy to determine. When the Greeks, for instance, are driven to spelling "beefsteak" "mpiphteki" what can one expect?

In Macedonia Turkish names are used by officials. Scutari is Skodra. Uskub is Skoplje. Monastir is Bitolia, pronounced Vitolia. Adrianople is Andrinople to the Latins and Edirne to the Turks. But from Kirk Kilise to Constantinople the names are all Turkish, like the people, except an occasional seaport like Rodoso (Tekir Dagh).

The Turks use a joggly character similar to Arabic. The Greeks use the alphabet Homer did. Bulgarians, Servians and Montenegrins use an alphabet similar to Russian, but not identical. The Albanians have scarcely decided on an alphabet yet, but will probably use Roman letters.—New York World.

A Christmas Game.

Christmas candles is a good game to play at this season of the year, but must only be done with mother's permission and then only when there is a grownup person to superintend the play. A tiny Christmas tree with lighted candles is set on a table at a convenient height. Each child in turn is blindfolded and stationed with his back to the tree and about a foot from it. He is then told to take three steps forward, turn around three times, then walk four steps and blow as hard as he can. The one who blows out the most candles receives a prize.

Card Games at Christmas.

Many still play cards at Christmas who seldom think of doing so at other times, quite unconscious that they are maintaining an ancient custom. A prohibitory statute of Henry VII. forbade card playing save during the Yuletide holidays, and long after the law itself had become obsolete the practice it had promoted was continued. At the beginning of the eighteenth century that model squire, Sir Roger de Coverley, was accustomed to send "a string of hog's puddings and a pack of cards" to every poor family in the parish.

"If love was a woman's whole existence, how idle many of us would be."

WHAT SHE WANTED.

An Old Lady With an Appetite and the Bell Cord.

An old lady was taking her first railroad trip. She noticed the bell cord overhead and, turning to a little boy who was sitting across the aisle, said, "Sonny, what's that for?"

"That, ma'am," he said, with a mischievous twinkle in his eye, "is to ring when you want something to eat."

Shortly afterward the old lady reached her umbrella up and gave the cord a vigorous yank. The train was in the middle of a trestle, the whistle sounded, the train began to slacken speed, windows were thrown open, questions were asked, and confusion reigned among the passengers. The old lady sat calmly through it all.

Presently the conductor came running through the car. "Who pulled that bell?" he roared.

"I did," replied the old lady meekly.

"What do you want?" asked the conductor impatiently.

"Well," she replied meditatingly, "you may bring me a ham sandwich and a cup of tea."—Ladies' Home Journal.

DR. MORRISON CHAIRMEN FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

Mr. Vincent Eastwood claimed He Should Have Been Chosen For the Chair.

An unfortunate discussion was occasioned in the election of Dr. Morrison as chairman, at the inaugural meeting of the Board of Education last night, over the difference in opinion as to Mr. Eastwood's claim seniority in membership to hold the chair, as has been the custom.

On the taking of the vote for chairman it was found that one vote was missing. Mr. Eastwood declared it his and that he did not wish to vote. At the close of the meeting, Mr. Eastwood rose and said that he felt called upon to explain his reason in refusing to vote. It had been the custom for the senior members of the Board to be elected each year and as he thought himself to be the senior member, it would be only fair to have chosen him. Had he been elected he would have shown no hesitation in accepting and he was disappointed to discover the feeling of the Board as it was. He wished to let the matter drop.

Several members undertook to explain to Mr. Eastwood that there had been an interim in the run of his office and the senior member was only recognised in the straight run. Mr. Eastwood, however, did not think it right, but wished to drop the matter. The affair was brought to an end by the closing of the meeting.

THE NEW CHAIRMAN

The announcement of Dr. Morrison's being elected as chairman caused much pleasure and enthusiasm. On taking the chair, Dr. Morrison thanked the members for their choice in the honor they had done him. The Board had a very busy year before it with the two new schools to be opened and many other matters. He spoke of the great responsibility of the care of all the children in the schools on the Board and the hard work they had to better the condition.

COMMITTEES

The standard committee chosen to appoint the committees, consisted of Messrs. Dr. Burnham, Hill, Crane, Miller and Hayes.

The committees and their chairmen chosen were—

Finance Committee— L. M. Hayes, K.C., (chairman); V. Eastwood, Dr. J. A. Middleton and Dr. Burnham.

Property Committee— B. F. Ackerman, (chairman); Col. Miller, V. Eastwood, and J. J. Turner, Jr.

Supervision Committee— J. Crane, (chairman); W.W. H. Hill, Dr. Burnham and L. M. Hayes, K.C.

Committee of Appointments— Entire Board. W.W. H. Hill, (chairman)

Special building committee for east and west wards— B. F. Ackerman, (chairman west ward); Col. Miller, J. J. Turner, Jr., Dr. J. A. Middleton, (chairman east ward.)

WEDDING BELLS

CHAMBERLAIN—STINSON.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. Samuel Stinson, Fowler's Corners, Ont., on Wednesday, January 8, 1914, when his eldest daughter, Clara Maud, became the bride of Mr. David H Chamberlain, of Bryant, Sask., son of Wm. E Chamberlain, of Douro, the Rev. D H, Currie, B.A., officiating. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a becoming gown of white Duchess satin, trimmed with silk fringe, and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations, and wore a dainty gold locket and chain, the gift of the groom. The bridesmaid, Miss Myrtle Bick, of Bobcaygeon, wore cream marquisette trimmed with silk embroidery, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom was assisted by Mr. Fred M. Dixon, of Otonabee. The parlor was beautifully decorated with palms and holly, and Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played by Miss Alma Darling, who wore a pretty gown of pale blue satin draped in ninon, ornamented with sequins. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold brooch with pearl settings; to the groomsman a gold watch fob, and to Miss Darling a beautiful pin set with pearls.

After numerous congratulations the wedding dinner was served in the dining room, the tables being decorated with white satin ribbon and carnations, following which the toast, "Long life, health and prosperity" to the bride was proposed by Rev. H. Currie, and responded to by the the groom, who in turn proposed the health of the bridesmaid, which was replied to by Mr. Dixon. The guests, numbering about ninety, included friends from Peterborough, Lakefield, Bobcaygeon and Otonabee.

The gifts were numerous and costly, and included a cabinet of pearl handled silvery cutlery from Lakefield Presbyterian church, of which the bride was for several years the popular organist. The bride's travelling dress was of tan serge with picture hat to match.

The happy couple will leave for their home in Saskatchewan about the 15th inst, spending some time in Toronto, Winnipeg and Brandon en route, and will be accompanied with the best wishes of a host of friends.

ORILLIA BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET

Mr. J. H. Burnham, one of the Speakers To-night

Orillia, Jan. 10.—The Board of Trade banquet to-night promises to be one of the most interesting functions of the kind held in Orillia for a long time. In addition to the Hon. MR. G. A. GILLESPIE ELECTED PRESIDENT BY DAIRYMEN

Evil of Tuberculosis in Milk Must be Stamped Out in Dairies Says One Speaker.

KINGSTON, Jan. 11.—Tuberculosis is among cattle and is on the increase, according to the statistics from the Veterinary Director-General of Live Stock, Ottawa, who gave the principal address at the closing session of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association yesterday. Dairy cattle were much more exposed to infection than other cattle, owing to the fact that they were more closely housed.

"We are giving money to tuberculosis hospitals," said Dr. Torrance, "and yet we are permitting the sale of milk which is carrying disease. We are allowing it to spread, and at the same time trying to stop it. Would it not be more logical to try to prevent it altogether?" The increase had amounted to two per cent. in four years.

Tuberculosis among cattle, he said, had a serious effect on hog production, because hogs were fed on byeproducts of milk.

Slaughter house statistics showed a high percentage of tuberculosis. Some counties went as high as 20 per cent. Frontenac County was one of the lowest, with a percentage of 5.19. Pasteurization of skim milk would prevent infection of hogs from disease.

The time had arrived when no person should be allowed to sell milk until cattle had been examined to see if they were infected with the dread disease.

As predicted, the association favored an official referee for weighing cheese at Montreal, asked for legislation prohibiting shipment of cheese until ten days old, and recommended an annual Government inspection of factory scales. The association strongly opposed any change in the mode of payment for cheese, declaring that the proposed bonding of buyers would lead to serious trouble.

G. A. Gillespie, Peterboro, was elected president for 1913.

Other officers are: First vice-president, J. A. Sanderson, Oxford Centre; second vice-president, Nelson Stone, Norham; third vice-president, R. G. Leggett, Newboro; secretary, T. A. Thompson, Almonte; treasurer, J. R. Anderson, Mountain View.

STATEMENT USELESS.

So Says Counsel For B. C. Discussing C.P.R.'s Rate Evidence.

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—That the whole C.P.R. exhibit of rate reductions might as well have never been submitted by it, as far as its usefulness went, was the statement made by Mr. W. A. MacDonald, K.C., representing British Columbia, at yesterday afternoon's session of the western freight rate enquiry before the Railway Commission.

The examination of D. B. Hanna, vice-president of the Canadian Northern Railway, was temporarily concluded and that of W. R. McInnes, chief traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, recommenced. Mr. McInnes among other things denied that the Canadian Pacific has given specially favorable rates to a smelter owned by it at Trail, B.C., or that the Canadian Pacific Railway owned the smelter.

The case will continue to-day with Mr. McInnes still on the stand.

WOKE WITH COTTAGE ON FIRE.

Winnipeg Family Have Close Call —Woman May Die.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 11.—Harry Labawich, 57 Derby street, was awakened at four o'clock yesterday morning to find his cottage in flames and himself and family in danger of suffocation. He aroused his wife and with their child they fought they way through the flames.

Labawich ran barefooted two blocks to a fire alarm box with the thermometer fifteen below zero.

All three are in the hospital, and it is feared the woman will die, while the baby will probably be scarred for life through burns on the face.

SENDING RELIEF SHIP.

Norwegian Government To Despatch Succor to Missing Polar Explorer.

CHRISTIANIA, Jan. 11.—The Norwegian Government has guaranteed the expenses of a relief expedition to Spitzbergen for the German explorers under Lieut. Schroder Stranz, who started out last year in the steamer Herzog Ernest, and are reported to be in dire straits. Manager Mansfield of an American coal company at Green Harbor, tried to organize a relief party, but found the conditions rendered sending succor to the explorers from his station impossible.

The last advice from the expedition came recently from Capt. Ritzchel, who reached Advent Bay in a deplorable condition, and seeking aid. He said the condition of the expedition was most serious. Lieut. Schroder Stranz and two companions had not been heard of since August 15, when they left the remainder of the party for a sledge journey.

Cargo Caugh Fire.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 11.—A narrow escape from destruction from fire and severe experiences by passengers and crew were reported by the Allan line steamer Carthagenian, which arrived here last night from Liverpool. The steamer left Liverpool Dec. 28 for St. John's, Halifax, and Philadelphia. Captain McKillop said that when she was three days out her cargo caught fire in some unexplained manner.

The flames spread so rapidly that it was necessary to pump an enormous amount of water into the vessel to drown them out. Repairs will cost $10,000.

VISCOUNT HALDANE.

He announces that the system of Education in England will be altered.

LEPERS SHOT; BODIES BURNED

SHANGHAI, Jan. 11.—Thirty-nine lepers recently were put to death in an atrocious manner by order of the provincial authorities at Nanning, Province of Kwangsi. The sufferers from the dread disease first were shot and then their bodies were burned in a huge trench.

These advices were received here yesterday in letters from the Catholic mission at Nanning. The letters were dated Dec. 14.

Jack Johnson's Auto Seized.

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—Jack Johnson's automobile and the fixtures of the saloon of which he was until recently the proprietor were seized yesterday by the sheriff to satisfy a judgment of $5,621 obtained against the negro pugilist by a brewing company. The seizure was made at the residence here which Johnson gave his mother and where he makes his home.

ASQUITH GOVERNMENT'S EDUCATIONAL MEASURE

Viscount Haldane at Meeting in Manchester Announced That as Soon as Home Rule, Disestablishment and Franchise Reform Are Out of the Way, the Minister Will Initiate New System.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The Government has decided that the next great work in its program of social reform, to be undertaken as soon as the home rule, the Welsh disestablishment and the franchise reform bills are disposed of, will be a colossal scheme for improvement in elementary, secondary and higher education.

This important announcement was made last night on the authority of Premier Asquith and Chancellor of the Exchequer David Lloyd-George, by Viscount Haldane, the Lord High Chancellor, at a political meeting in Manchester. Viscount Haldane said the existing system of education was chaotic and must be altered. It would be an expensive problem to handle and the expense must not be borne by the taxpayers. It would be a productive expenditure and was absolute-is to be maintained in comparison with that of our rivals," he added.

The announcement which apparently points to a scheme for national education at the expense of the state, particularly will be interpreted by the Unionists as a defeat of the Lloyd-Georgite section of the Cabinet, which has been endeavoring to make the land question the Government's next task. The explanation given by the Ministerialists is that the land question cannot be dealt with until the land valuation scheme undertaken in David Lloyd-George's famous budget is completed and that this will require at least another couple of years.

The view of the Government's opponents is that the land scheme projected by Mr. Lloyd-George is so vast and complex that he is unable to carry the Cabinet with him in its ac-

COTTON PLUNGERS WHO MUST BE TRIED ON $10,000,000 CORNER.

FRANK B. HAYNE.

W. P. BROWN.

JAMES A. PATTEN

By upholding certain disputed counts against James A. Patten and others charged with violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law in running a cotton corner, the Supreme Court at Washington, D. C. has sent the case against the men to trial in the lower courts.

Patten, Eugene G. Scales, Frank B Hayne and William P. Brown were indicted in New York on charges of conspiracy on January 1, 1910, to "corner" cotton by extensive buying on the New York Cotton Exchange, as a result of which the price would be enhanced and ultimately bring arbitrary and excessive prices.

The conspiracy was described as calculated to yield $10,000,000 in profits.

HON. MACKENZIE KING FINDS NO EMERGENCY

And Former Minister of Labor is Applauded by Liberal Audience.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—Hon. W. L. Mackenzie-King, ex-Minister of Labor and president of the Ontario Reform Association, to an overflow audience in Association Hall last night, in a vigorous address on the naval question.

The Speaker's chief worry was why the Premier should decide in favor of an emergency when no emergency really existed. He said that the explanation for the Premier's present stand was to be found in "the unfortunate and unpatriotic alliance which Mr. Borden made, with the Nationalists of Quebec." Whereupon the Liberal audience liberally applauded.

"If the Borden Government wishes to change a policy which was unanimously favored in the House in 1909," he declared, "it should show conclusively the reason for the change. In the face of the unanimous vote of both parties in Parliament four years ago for the establishment of Canadian fleet units, and the change of the attitude of the Conservatives in favor of a contribution, the question should be submitted to the people."

"Let us try to deal with this question in a non-partisan way," continued Mr. King. "It is the greatest issue with which Canada will have to deal for many years to come. If Mr. Borden's course is best, by all means let us have it, but if it is not in accord with the people of the country, then Mr. Borden should rise to the level of the opinion of the Canadian people."

Hon. Mr. King read quotations from speeches by Hon. Winston Churchill, Premier Asquith and Lord Crewe and resolutions passed by the British Admiralty.

He declared that Great Britain was adequately supplied with armaments. "But in spite of this Mr. Borden returns from his trip last year and discovers an emergency," said the speaker. "As you look into this matter you will become more indignant at the course the present Government is pursuing. That there is no need for immediate construction of warships is Winston Churchill's answer to Premier Borden. Mr. Borden is proposing to give three ships when Great Britain says they are not necessary. Mr. Churchill said in the House of Commons during Mr. Borden's visit to England: 'We have the situation well in hand; there is no need for panic or alarm'."

H. M. Mowat, K.C., was the only other speaker of the evening, except J. M. Clark, K.C., and J. F. Eby, who moved and seconded a resolution in favor of a Canadian navy, which the audience adopted unanimously. Speaking of reciprocity, Mr. Mowat said the fight for better and larger markets was only common sense, and therefore could not be abandoned by the Liberal party. F. S. Mearns acted as chairman.

NEGRESS GUILTY GETS FIVE YEARS

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Mrs. Annie Gross, an American negress, was yesterday found guilty of the manslaughter of Miss Jessie McIntyre, a young English actress and sentenced at the Old Bailey sessions to a term of five years' penal servitude.

The prisoner yesterday pleaded that she had fired at her husband who was punching her in the neck. She declared she did not see Miss McIntyre. She confessed she went to the house in Bloomsbury intending first to shoot her husband and then kill herself.

Fell Through Ice; Drowned.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—Robert Hannan, 14 years of age, of St. Cunegonde, lost his life by falling through the ice in the Lachine Canal while skating. His brother Francis, two years older, who was his companion, and who tried to save him, had a narrow escape from meeting a similar fate.

FEAR OF FOREIGNER.

U. S. Manufacturers Want Hands Kept Off Tariff.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Fear that foreign producers would invade and injure the American market were expressed yesterday in the testimony on the metal schedule of the tariff before the House committee on ways and means. The committee heard argument from representatives of manufacturing and producing interests, printing press manufacturers, the zinc industry of the Rocky Mountains and the Joplin fields, the wooden screw manufacturers, of which the American Screw Co. controlled 40 or 45 per cent. and the $40,000,000 output of machine tools and numerous other products, presenting a virtually solid front against revision of the present traiff rates.

"Keep off the tariff as it stands, or it will work a hardship to American industry," was the consensus of sentiment of witnesses, all under oath prescribed by the chairman.

Chairman Underwood pointed out that the committee was legislating for revenue for the present and not figuring on what might happen in the future.

"This committee," said Mr. Underwood, "cannot legislate on your fears and on the conditions that you say you expect. The committee ought to legislate to meet conditions when they arise."

LABOR LEADER MAKES STRONG STT EMENT

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, Jan. 11.—Addressing the striking hotel employes on Friday night Joseph Ettor, the Labor leader, recently acquitted at Lawrence, said "if you have to go back to work under unsatisfactory conditions go back with your minds made up that it is the unsafest thing in the world for the capitalist to eat food prepared by members of your union."

Asked later to explain his words he said he meant just what he said.

TO BREAK A RECORD.

'Frisco Youths Reach Galt In Trip Round the World.

GALT, Jan. 11.—Ernest Clark and Gerald Rae, San Francisco globe trotters, were in town yesterday, reported to and received a formal certificate from Mayor Scott. Only Canadian chief magistrates, the contract stipulates they call on. They want to break a record by reaching 'Frisco again within 18 months from Nov. 20, the date of the start. They have to make a circuit of the world without begging. From New York City they will sail to Liverpool and await instructions. They are husky, well-educated, and earning their way, and if they win, will receive each $5,000.

LINDSAY MAN SUICIDES IN DELIBERATE MANNER

Lindsay, Jan 11— By placing the muzzle of a shot gun to his head and operating the trigger by means of a poker, John Brooks a well-known resident of this place, killed himself yesterday afternoon. He had worked till noon, when he appeared to be in good spirits. He was found by his wife.

INSPECTOR TAKES SAMPLES OF BUTTER AND FINDS THAT FULL WEIGHT IS GIVEN

An investigation of the butter sold on the market was commenced this morning by Sanitary Inspector Spence, to ascertain whether there existed any shortage in weight. Several samples were selected promiscuously and weighed, and in every case the butter was found to be the full sixteen ounces in weight.

SOME IN EXCESS

In some instances it exceeded the requirements of the law. When the inspector requested permission to weigh the butter, one of the ladies became alarmed and did not wish to comply. When the butter was tested, however, it was discovered to be more than the sixteen ounces in weight, and her vague alarm was unnecessary.

The powers of the Inspector in the matter of examining market produce are very wide. He has perfect liberty under the by-law to look for diseased meat or meat of cattle under age, and if such is being offered for sale, to have it seized and the vendors prosecuted.

Five Hundred Moors Killed.

MOGADOR, Morocco, Jan. 11.—A French column, commanded by Col. Amedee Gueydon De Dives, yesterday fought a severe battle with a large body of Moors whom they routed with a loss of 500 killed. Twelve French soldiers were killed and 60 wounded.

The Moors attacked the French troops twenty miles to the east of Mogador, where they were guarding the lines of communication in Southern Morocco.

Recalls Old Tragedy.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Dr. Peter Donnelly of Toledo, who drove his auto into the river there a few days ago, is one of the Donnelly family who figured in the famous Biddulph Township tragedy over a quarter of a century ago.

Old residents are pointing out that this is another tragic death added to the many which have already followed the original affair. Nearly everybody who was concerned in the affair has since met a tragic death.

CANNOT WITHDRAW THE BILINGUAL REGULATIONS

ANXIETY LESSENED.

Condition of Duchess of Connaught Is Much Improved.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—Only two bulletins were issued yesterday regarding the condition of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught, and the tenor of both indicated that a change for the better had set in. The late bulletin on Thursday night indicated that the distinguished patient was suffering less pain, and was at midnight sleeping. This rest was beneficial in its effect.

The intimation of improvement suggested by the official bulletin in the morning was borne out and strengthened during the day and a marked change set in which from the last bulletin issued shortly before 7 o'clock last night, indicated that for the present the danger point is passed, and serious apprehension has been lessened. The condition of her royal highness was so favorable that it was decided that it was unnecessary to issue more than the evening bulletin, omitting the one which was issued shortly before midnight each night since her arrival at the Royal Victoria Hospital.

The last bulletin of the day, issued at 6.45 p.m., was as follows:

"During the day the condition of her royal highness has improved somewhat. Temperature has come down, pulse has improved in quality and she is suffering less pain and distress from the abdominal symptoms."

(Signed) E. S. Worthington, A. E. Garrow, W. W. Chipman.

Twice yesterday His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, accompanied by the Princess Patricia, visited the hospital, and any change in the condition of her royal highness is immediately communicated to Ravenscraig, where the royal party is staying.

SEVENTEEN ARE DEAD

PORTUGAL IS WAKING UP

LISBON, Jan. 11.—A Ministerial declaration which was read in Parliament yesterday outlined an imposing program of reform, including the creation of a Minister of Education, improved sanitary laws, perfection of national defences and the development of internal communication.

The Government, it is declared, will hasten the passage of an electoral reform bill and endeavor to reduce the cost of living.

Woman's Dress Allowance.

PARIS, Jan. 11.—A new standard which has been laid down in Paris law courts, that a married woman's dress allowance must not be more annually than the rental of her home, does not meet with general approval. Mme. Mirpolski, one of the best known women barristers in Paris, does not think the judgment can be taken seriously nor as applying to all cases.

Sir James Whitney Gives Answer to the Recent Deputation.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—Samuel Genest and Dr. A. Freeland of Ottawa, who presented the French-Canadian deputation to Sir James Whitney recently, are now in receipt of the latter's formal reply. His statement reads, in part:

"Dear Sirs,—With reference to the petition or memorial presented to the Government on the 27th of December, 1912, by you and others on behalf of certain of the English-French schools of Ontario, my colleagues and I feel convinced that much of whatever friction has occurred was caused by a misapprehension in some quarters of both the intention and effect of the new regulations.

"While, the Government cannot withdraw any of the regulations now in force, nor assent to the other propositions and requests set out in the petition, I desire to make it clear that before entering upon his duties, each inspector was notified that at the close of the present school year the Minister would consult with the six inspectors of the English-French schools as to the effectiveness of the instructions issued last June, and would consider any recommendations they might desire to make for the improvement of the schools under their charge.

"In view of what I have stated, my colleagues and I hope that there will be no further opposition to the regulations."

ARE AGAINST BOTH PLANS

Grain Growers are Opposed to Naval Expenditure

BRANDON, Man., Jan. 11.—Amid cheering and enthusiasm yesterday the grain growers in convention here declared themselves as entirely opposed to any expenditure on naval armament, and demanded a referendum vote before the Government proceeds with its policy.

The amendment of the naval resolution, of which copies were ordered to be sent to each member of the Cabinet, ex-Cabinet members and the members of Parliament for the three western provinces, reads as follows:

"Whereas among the Christian nations of the earth there is an ever-increasing desire upon the part of the common people that war and preparations for war, which entail such a fearful harvest of human lives and place such a crushing financial burden upon the taxpayers, should be brought to an end, and that this vast energy now devoted to purposes of destruction and death be utilized in cultivation of the arts of peace, and that instead of promoting distrust and hatred between nations, a spirit of commerce and brotherhood should be encouraged; and whereas both the Conservative and Liberal parties in Parliament have each proposed that $35,000,000 or more of the public revenue should be devoted to the construction of a naval armament without a mandate from the people;

"Therefore, be it resolved that this convention of delegates, representing 10,000 farmers of Manitoba, places itself on record as firmly opposed to any expenditure whatever of the public moneys for the construction of naval armaments, but decidedly in favor of Canada encouraging to the utmost the movement toward international peace and disarmament, and the settlement of international difficulties by arbitration; and further, this convention is strongly of the opinion that Parliament is not justified in the making of any further move on the naval question until the same has been admitted to an actual referendum of the people."

Famous Explorer Lost.

CHRISTIANIA, Jan. 11.—It is feared here that the famous Arctic explorer, Otto Sverdrup, and a party of sixteen persons who accompanied him on a walrus hunt in Greenland waters have been lost. Sverdrup and his party left Christiania in March, 1912, in a motor ship, and since then nothing has been heard from the expedition. Mail sent to a station in South Greenland, where the walrus hunters were to have stopped, has been returned here, marked "uncalled for."

Paris Man Gets Job.

MEDICINE HAT, Jan. 11.—W. J. O'Neill of Paris, Ont., has been appointed city solicitor for Medicine Hat.

BRITISH ACTRESSES TO BUTTONHOLE THE M.P.'S

LONDON, Jan. 11.—When the franchise reform bill comes up in Parliament shortly the members of the House of Commons will find all the approaches to the chamber picketed by actresses and other supporters of the movement in favor of votes for women.

Throughout the entire debate day and night the women intend to be present in strength and to buttonhole members of the House as they pass in and out;

Should these members who favor women suffrage succeed in having the word "male" eliminated from the bill, three alternative proposals will be made to include women.

The only amendment which will receive serious consideration is that which proposes to introduce the Norwegian system into England. This system gives the votes to women householders and the wives of electors.

"But you don't get the point, Wesley. She would have grown into a fine woman with us; just seems as if Elnora was born to be fine, but as we would have raised her, would her heart ever have known the world as it does now? Where's the anguish, Wesley, that child can't comprehend? Seeing what she's seen of her mother hasn't hardened her. I guess we'd better keep out. Maybe Kate Comstock knows what she's doing. Sure as you live, Elnora has grown bigger on knocks than she would on love."

"I don't s'pose there ever was a very fine point to anything but I missed it," said Wesley, "because I am blunt, rough and have no book learning to speak of. Since you put it into words I see what you mean, but it's dinged hard on Elnora, just the same. And I don't keep out. I keep watching closer than ever. I got my slap in the face, but if I don't miss my guess, Kate Comstock learned her lesson, same as I did. She learned that I was in earnest, that I would haul her to court if she didn't loosen up a bit, and she'll loosen. You see if she don't."

Up in the attic Elnora lighted two candles, set them on her little table, stacked the books and put away the precious clothes lovingly. Then she slipped into her little white nightdress, shook down her hair that it might become thoroughly dry, set a chair before the table and reverently opened one of the books. A stiff draft swept the attic, for it stretched the length of the cabin and had a window in each end. Elnora arose and, going to the east window, closed it. She stood for a minute looking at the stars, the sky and the dark outline of the straggling trees of the rapidly-dismantling Limberlost. In the region of her case a tiny point of light flashed and disappeared. Elnora straightened and wondered. Was it wise to leave her precious money there? The light flashed once more, wavered a few seconds and died out. The girl waited. She did not see it again, and so she went back to her books.

In the Limberlost the hulking figure of a man slouched down the trail.

"The Bird Woman was at Freckles' room this evening," he muttered. "Wonder what for?"

He left the trail, entered the inclosure still distinctly outlined and approached the case. The first point of light flashed from the tiny electric lamp on his vest. He took a duplicate key from his pocket, felt for the padlock and opened it. The door swung wide. The light flashed the second time. Swiftly his glance swept the interior.

"'Bout a fourth of her moths gone. Elnora must have been with the Bird Woman and given them to her." Then he stood tense. His keen eyes discovered the roll of bills hastily thrust back in the bottom of the case. He snatched them up, shut off the light, relocked the case by touch and swiftly went down the trail. Every few seconds he paused and listened intently. Just as he reached the road the low hoot of a screech owl waveringly prolonged fell on his ears, and he stopped. An instant later a second figure approached him.

"Is it you, Pete?" came the whispered question.

"Yes," said the first man.

"I was coming down to take a peep when I saw your flash," he said. "I heard the Bird Woman had been at the case today. Anything doing?"

"Not a thing," said Pete. "She just took away about a fourth of the moths. Probably had the Comstock girl getting them for her. Heard they were together. Likely she'll get the rest tomorrow. Ain't picking getting bare these days?"

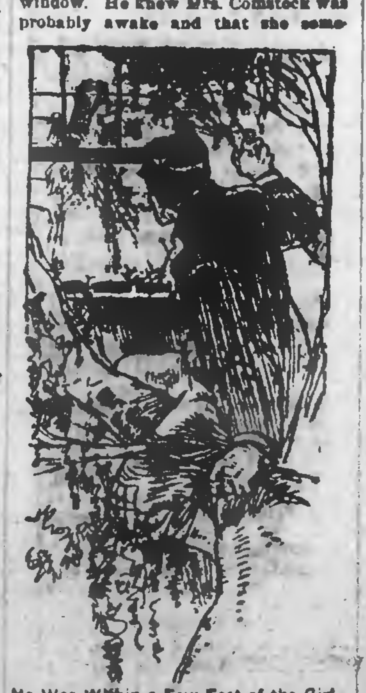
"Well, I should say so," said the second man, turning back in disgust. "Coming home now?"

"No; I am going down this way," answered Pete, for his eyes caught the gleam from the window of the Comstock cabin, and he had a desire to learn why Elnora's attic was lighted at that hour.

He slouched down the road, occasionally feeling the size of the roll he had not taken time to count. He chuckled frequently.

"Feels fat enough to pay," he whispered. "Bill, I beat you just about seven minutes."

The attic was too long, the light too near the other end, and the cabin stood much too far back from the road. He could see nothing, although he climbed the fence and walked back opposite the window. He knew Mrs. Comstock was probably awake and that she sometimes went to the swamp behind her home at night. At times a cry went up from that locality that paralyzed any one near or sent them fleeing as if for life. He did not care to cross behind the cabin. He returned to the road, passed and again climbed the fence. Opposite the west window he could see Elnora. She sat before a small table reading from a book between two candles. Her hair fell in a bright sheen around her, and with one hand she lightly shook and tossed it as she studied. The man stood out in the night and watched.



He Was Within a Few Feet of the Girl.

For a long time a leaf turned occasionally and the hair drying went on. The man drew nearer. The picture grew more beautiful as he approached. He could not see as well as he desired, for the screen was of white mosquito netting, and it angered him. He cautiously crept closer. The elevation shut off his view. Then he remembered the great willow tree shading the wall and branching across the window at the west end of the cabin. From childhood Elnora had stepped from the sill to a limb and slid down the slanting trunk of the tree. He reached it and noiselessly swung himself up. Three steps out on the big limb the man shuddered. He was within a few feet of the girl.

Elnora closed the book and laid it aside. She picked up a towel and, turning the gathered ends of her hair, rubbed them across it and, dropping the towel on her lap, tossed the hair again. Then she sat in deep thought. By and by words began to come softly. Near as he was the man could not hear at first. He bent closer and listened intently.

—"ever could be so happy," murmured the soft voice. "The dress is so pretty, such shoes, the coat and everything. I won't have to be ashamed again, not ever again, for the Limberlost is full of precious moths, and I can always collect them. The Bird Woman will buy more tomorrow, and the next day, and the next. When they are all gone I can spend every minute gathering cocoons and hunting other things I can sell. Oh, thank God for my precious, precious money! Why, I didn't pray in vain after all! I thought when I asked the Lord to hide me, there in that big hall, that he wasn't doing it because I wasn't covered from sight that instant. But I'm hidden now; I feel that." Elnora lifted her eyes to the beams above her. "I don't know much about praying properly," she muttered, "but I do thank you, Lord, for hiding me in your own time and way."

Her face was so bright that it shone with a white radiance. Two big tears welled from her eyes and rolled down her smiling cheeks. "Oh, I do feel that you have hidden me," she breathed. Then she blew out the lights, and the little wooden bed creaked under her weight.

Pete Corson dropped from the limb and found his way to the road. He stood still a long time, then started back to the Limberlost. A tiny point of light flashed in the region of the case. He stopped with an oath.

"Another hound trying to steal from a girl," he exclaimed. "But it's likely he thinks if he gets anything it will be from a woman who can afford it, as I did."

He went on, but beside the fences and very cautiously.

"Swamp seems to be alive tonight," he muttered. "That's three of us out."

He entered a deep place at the northwest corner, sat on the ground, and, taking a pencil from his pocket, he tore a leaf from a little notebook and laboriously wrote a few lines by the light he carried. Then he went back to the region of the case and waited. Before his eyes swept the vision of the slender white creature with tossing hair. He smiled and worshiped it until a distant rooster faintly announced dawn.

Then he unlocked the case again and replaced the money, laid the note upon it and went back to concealment, where he remained until Elnora came down the trail in the morning, looking very lovely in her new dress and hat.

She had had a great struggle with her hair. It crinkled, billowed and shone, and she could not avoid seeing the becoming frame it made around her face. But in deference to her mother's feelings the girl set her teeth and bound her hair close to her head with a shoestring. "Not to be changed at the case," she told herself.

That her mother was watching she was unaware. Just as she picked up the beautiful brown ribbon Mrs. Comstock spoke.

"You had better let me tie that. You can't reach behind yourself and do it right."

Elnora gave a little gasp. Her mother never before had proposed to do anything for the girl that by any possibility she could do herself. Her heart quaked at the thought of how her mother would arrange that bow, but Elnora dared not refuse. The offer was too precious. It might never be made again.

"Oh, thank you!" said the girl, and, sitting down, she held out the ribbon.

Her mother stood back and looked at her critically.

"You haven't got that like Mag Sinton had it last night," she announced. "You little idiot! You've tried to plaster it down to suit me, and you missed it. I liked it away better as Mag fixed it after I saw it. You didn't look so peeled."

SILVER PLATING.

An Accident Pointed the Way to the Original Process.

In 1742 Thomas Bolsover, a mechanic of Sheffield, England, discovered the art of silver plating. He was repairing the handle of a knife in which both copper and silver were used. Accidentally the two metals were fused together. Based upon this observation, he developed the new process.

Upon a thick ingot of copper he bound by iron wire a thinner ingot of silver. The whole was then heated in a reverberatory furnace until the edges of the silver ingot were observed to begin to melt. The two ingots were then removed from the furnace, slowly cooled and pickled, cleaned and rolled to the desired thickness. The result was a plate of copper more or less thinly covered with silver on one side.

This was the first Sheffield plate. For [illegible] years following the copper was plated on one side only and the cut edges showed the copper. Later the process was so perfected that no copper was left exposed. All the silverplate of the world was made by this process until electroplating was discovered and made commercial.—Popular Mechanics.

How to Keep Young.

How often we hear men and women bewailing the fact that they are no longer young! They speak of youth wistfully as some elusive thing which has vanished like a summer cloud or with incredulity, as if it were a state totally foreign and irreconcilable to their present one, like being an inhabitant of Mars or a three headed man. They do not seem to realize that what makes people young and keeps them so is irrespective of actual years—it is the capacity for retaining youthful ideals.

The man who regards his son's aspirations with cynicism has stopped growing and is becoming old. The woman who sternly and coldly condemns the follies of impetuous girlhood is losing that very thing which should keep her fresh—her sympathies and her optimism.

The elderly men who remain vital and alive are those who keep their hopes and desires and ambitions before them and not behind and who will always keep them so if they live to be 100. The women who keep the charm of youth are those who have a buoyant spirit, an interest in the world about them and a high idealism. There is no such thing as dropping back and behind the procession if one's mentality is continually pushing forward and onward. What we call the spirit of youth is in reality a sanguine and courageous attitude toward life, and there is no more reason why this attitude should be confined to those below a certain age than there is that we should have false teeth at forty.

The girl who when she gets married ceases to make any effort whatever, mentally, socially or physically, becomes dull and stupid before she reaches even middle age, and the unmarried woman who settles down into a rigid and narrow groove, measuring all the world by her small rule of thumb, becomes a tiresome prude who might as well be a mummy for all the enjoyment and spontaneity which she puts into existence or gets out of it.

Keep on looking ahead. There is no end to the adventures of life. People are just as marvelous, their actions are just as incomprehensible, just as beautiful, just as terrible, as they were when you were eighteen and were just beginning to realize that the world was a wonderful place.

Keep looking ahead and around you. Use the past only to understand the present and the future and you will never grow old, but will be a perpetual fountain of youth to yourself and to all those who are fortunate enough to count you among their friends.

Beauty Tips.

Enlarged pores can be contracted by applications of alcohol.

Just before retiring massage the hands well with a good cold cream and without wiping away any remaining portion slip on the loose gloves.

Tetter and ringworm are caused by imperfect digestion and should be cured by proper diet. Local applications of iodine will give temporary relief.

An excellent tonic for the hair is made of one ounce of best castor oil or sweet oil, two ounces of bay rum and two of French brandy. Scent with rose geranium.

People suffering from indigestion should eat a very light breakfast. A raw egg separated and beaten light with a little cream or milk added is often sufficient and easily digested.

Scrim is the most sanitary material for face cloths. This cloth is porous and free from lint, allowing a free circulation of air. It also admits of quick and effective washing and drying, so that it can be cleaned after every face bath.

The best kind of exercise is the kind that makes you forget that you are exercising—in other words, play, says a physician. It's a good scheme to have some more or less strenuous game for a hobby, golf or bowling or tennis or archery—anything that appeals to you and affords exercise with interest. But this is not saying that systematic exercise is not a good thing too.

Electric Sleep.

Sleep that by means of electricity can be turned on and off at will is the latest cure for insomnia. It is the invention of a German doctor, who says that he has experimented with it on rabbits and dogs with great success.

An electric current of a new kind is applied to the base of the brain, and the patient, he says, instantly falls asleep and remains so until the current is switched off, when he wakes up in a quite normal condition and much refreshed.

For the Eyebrows.

The eyebrows are apt to grow shaggy or sparse with increasing years, but their bow shape might have been preserved indefinitely had their owner been careful to brush them daily with a soft toothbrush kept for the purpose.

A Good Shampoo.

To make a good shampoo boil castile soap shaved to a powder—about two heaping tablespoonfuls—in a little water, putting in about two saltspoonfuls of washing soda.

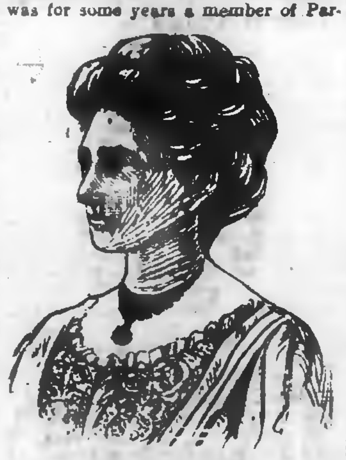
WORKING IN WOMEN'S INTERESTS

MRS. ADAM SHORTT A PIONEER IN THE NEW MOVEMENT.

Wife of Civil Service Commissioner Has Distinguished Herself In the World and at the Same Time Maintained Her Domestic Activities—Studied Medicine at a Time When Women M.D.'s Were Rare.

In one of the delightful college poems the genial Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes said concerning a classmate: "Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith." It is a fine old Saxon name, this monosyllable "Smith," which meant in the olden days a maker. In Canada we have known Smiths who, like the classmate of the author of the "Autocrat," emerged from the shade of their widespreading family tree, and became known for their individual deeds or learning. Canadians know that sturdy old Imperialist, Lord Strathcona, better known as Donald Smith, of the Hudson Bay Co. than as the Canadian High Commissioner in London. Nor will Canada soon forget the Scholar of the Grange, the late Goldwin Smith, who died and was buried in Ontario's capital, far from his beloved Oxford.

In the most delightful orchard spot of this province, the village of Winona, there was, at Mountain Hall, the household of Sylvester Smith, who had married Isabelle McGee. It might be said of that whole district, stretching from Hamilton to Niagara, "the peach is the emblem of beauty." From this homestead came several children whose careers have been of more than local importance. One of the sons, Mr. E. D. Smith of Winona, was for some years a member of Parliament for Wentworth, and is well known in Canadian manufacturing circles. Another son, the late Cecil B. Smith, the Hydro-electric engineer, had won more than casual prominence in his profession. A daughter of the household, Elizabeth, who was born in 1859, has, by exceptional ability and devotion to both domestic and public interests, won for herself a place among Canada's representative women.



MRS. ADAM SHORTT.

Elizabeth Smith was educated at private schools, and afterwards attended Hamilton Collegiate Institute, thence going to the Royal Medical College, in affiliation with Queen's University, where she obtained the degree of M.D. in 1884. In these days every Canadian city has a fair list of women who are devoted to the practice of medicine. Twenty-eight years ago, however, it took no little courage and individual ambition for a young girl to adopt a medical career. Dr. Elizabeth Smith was an earnest student, who was not only determined to win her own degree, but to make the way easier for the women students who were to follow. Therefore, she supported warmly the cause of a separate course for women at the Royal College at Kingston. This movement finally resulted in the creation of a Women's Medical College at Kingston in affiliation with Queen's University. For some time this young physician practiced in the city of Hamilton, but in 1886 Dr. Elizabeth Smith became the wife of Prof. Adam Shortt, then a member of the Faculty of Queen's University.

From 1887 to 1893 Mrs. Shortt lectured on medical jurisprudence and sanitary science in the Women's Medical College, and took a warm interest in all student movements. Prof. Shortt became head of the Department of Political Economy, and in their home many students found a cordial welcome and a social intercourse most helpful to the young and ambitious collegian. Mrs. Shortt was president of the Y. W. C. A. for three years, was also president of the Kingston Musical Club for seven years, and became the first president of the Queen's Alumnae Association.

Last year she became president of the Ottawa Local Council of Women. In the capital, to which Prof. Shortt had removed on being appointed civil service commissioner, Mrs. Shortt has been decidedly active in civic and social work, having been for three years president of the Mothers' Union of Ottawa, and holding the office of president of the Women's Canadian Club.

Mrs. Shortt is a believer in woman suffrage, and considers there would be no "risk" in extending the franchise to Canadian women. She is also keenly interested in spreading an interest in municipal affairs, considering that the best argument women can advance for the extension of the franchise is to make use of what they have to the fullest extent.—Jean Graham in Toronto Globe.

Climbed the Ladder.

Social statistics of the Lancashire spinning industry show that 13 per cent. of the managing directors of the mills, 42 per cent. of the superintendents and 67 per cent. of the assistant superintendents are of working class origin.

Chest Inflammation

Suffered From a Heavy Cold, Pleuritic Pains in Side—Constant Coughing.

"Anyone that goes through all that I suffered last winter will appreciate the value of a remedy that cures like Nerviline cured me." These are the opening words of the solemn declaration of E. P. Von Hayden, the well-known violinist of Middleton. "My work kept me out late at night, and playing in cold drafty places brought on a severe cold that settled on my chest. I had a harsh racking cough and severe pains darted through my sides and settled in my shoulders. I used different liniments, but none broke up my cold till I used Nerviline. I rubbed it on my neck, chest and shoulders, morning and night, and all the pain disappeared. Realizing that such a heavy cold had run down my system, I took Ferrozone at meals, and was completely built up and strengthened. Since using Nerviline I have no more colds or pleurisy, and enjoy perfect health."

Nerviline CURES CHEST COLDS

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her Kidneys

Miss MAGGIE JANNACK

MOUNTAIN, ONT., DEC. 14th, 1910

"I desire to let the world know the great debt I owe "Fruit-a-tives" which saved my life when I had given up hope of ever being well again.

For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen. The pain in my side and legs would be so bad that I would faint with the agony.

Five different doctors attended me and all said it was Kidney Disease and gave me no hope of getting well.

A kind neighbor visited me and mentioned the case of Mrs. Fenwick who had been cured of a sickness like mine. I took "Fruit-a-tives" and in a short time, I began to feel better—the swelling went down—the pains were easier—and soon I was well.

I have gained over 30 pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives"—and my friends look upon my recovery as a miracle."

CALISTA'S CHRISTMAS

How a Girl Was Changed From Selfishness to Charity.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

For twelve long years Calista Thorp had fought against that grim fate which had removed her loved ones within the space of a short twelvemonth and left her hopeless and dry eyed in the midst of an empty house, even now echoing with happy voices stilled forever.

She was a frail little woman, with a bruised heart which she hid behind a cold exterior, defiant blue eyes and a bitter tongue. All the softness of her youth had congealed. She was estranged from happiness.

Twelve times since that awful year had Calista hung the stockings before the fireplace in the sitting room—mother's warm woolen hose, father's large sock, Bobby's two stockings (gaping expectantly), little Ann's white ones and, last of all, her own limp black one.

And twelve times with shining eyes and swelling heart had Calista filled them. Then when Christmas morning dawned and she awoke to the bitterness that awaited her in the silent house and in the sight of the row of bulging stockings hanging before the smoldering fire she would fly down to the sitting room and tear them from the shelf and empty each one of its burden.

The bureau drawers in the slant roofed bedrooms were filled with the little treasures Calista had bought for her loved ones.

Again it was Christmas eve, and Calista had come home from shopping. Her arms were full of parcels, and the snowflakes powdered the dark hair that framed her small pale face—paler than usual, for the young minister had met her at the corner and walked home with her.

At the gate he had timidly relieved himself of a burden that troubled him. He had remonstrated with Calista Thorp because of her selfishness.

Her cheeks burned as she remembered how his spectacles had reflected the moonlight until they seemed like luminous supernatural eyes reading her soul.

He had ventured only a few words, and his concluding sentence still rang in her ears:

"Surely there is room in your heart for others outside your loved ones who have gone! God grant you a happy Christmas, Miss Calista!"

He was very young and very poor and very much in earnest, and he had a young wife and family at home awaiting him, yet he had found time to concern himself over Calista Thorp, the most skeptical member of his flock.

For the first time a light broke in on Calista's brain. For the first time she saw herself in her true character. She saw that in giving herself up to those who were gone she was hiding her talent in a napkin.

It was not those loved ones she was benefiting; it was the living she was denying. What right had she to keep all for the dead, who could use nothing she would give them?

Was she not in giving it to them hoarding it for herself? All of a sudden a realization of her true position rushed upon her with resistless force.

And how long had she shut herself in this world of her own selfish making? Twelve years.

A shame came in her heart that she had all this while taken no interest in a single living being at Christmas time.

There were the children among her relatives, the children of her friends, but, above all, the children of the poor.

When she thought of the many little ones whom even a penny toy would delight she was seized with a desire on this Christmas to wipe out the stain.

The parcels rattled to the floor—the pipe which her father would never smoke, the soft wools which her mother's fingers would never knit, the toys with which Bobby might not play, the wax doll which could not afford little Ann any delight!

The next morning, when Christmas broke over the world, Calista Thorp was stirring around her house. Two great baskets were filled with gifts from the overflowing drawers in the closed chambers, and Calista's best cloak and hat lay on the sofa.

The poorhouse was three miles away on the highroad, and a snowplow had leveled a broad track to the very door. So Calista, clad in her best, put on her overshoes and started forth, a basket in either hand.

She was quite pale and tired when she turned into the high white gate and advanced up the path, bordered on either side with gloomy cedar trees.

Dr. Keyes was the overseer of the Clovedale poorhouse, and it was considered the best managed institution of its kind in the state.

Breakfast was being served in the long dining hall when Calista rang the bell, and when the door opened the bluff, brown eyed doctor himself stood before her.

"Merry Christmas, Miss Calista! So you are playing Santa Claus this morning! I am glad of that, because some of my old people are feeling very blue today."

He relieved her of the baskets and led the way into the cheery warmth of his comfortable office, where Calista sat down before the glowing stove and thawed out her frosty fingers. When she spoke her eyes were fastened on the red coals, and the words came hesitatingly.

"I've kept Christmas alone — for twelve years. Somehow I didn't care about seeing anybody. I just wanted to try to bring back things as they used to be—before"—

Dr. Keyes wiped his glasses and replaced them on his fine nose. Had he not stood side by side with little Calista Thorp and fought hopelessly the battle of life and death—and lost? And had not Calista turned on him like a little wild animal and condemned him because he had failed?

She had avoided speaking to him afterward, and this was the first time they had met, and she was talking to him now as if she had forgotten that he had lost the grim battle for her loved ones.

—"before my folks died," went on Calista steadily. "But it can't be done! The minister talked to me about it, and I got to thinking last night maybe the best way to live over happy times is to give them to somebody else that never had any, so I've brought all the presents I've given mother and father and the children ever since—then—and I want the folks here to have them."

Two tears rolled down her cheeks from Calista's overcharged heart, and others followed and fell into the glass of grape juice which Dr. Keyes held at her lips, and perhaps it was that or the large, warm hand which rested on her shoulder that revived the little woman to renewed strength.

"You need never be without a family, Miss Calista," said the doctor at last in a husky voice. "I have a family here—forty people—old and young, and little children. They need help and encouragement and comfort. Some may have another chance in the world if they receive a word of womanly sympathy in season. Will you be my right hand here?"

"I'd like to," sobbed Calista thankfully.

Together they distributed the contents of the two baskets, and Calista found her tongue saying soft pleasantries and her cold face responding warmly to grateful smiles.

She saw her mother's kindly look and her father's approving nod in the faces of many of these indigent old people, and the delight of Bobby and little Ann were repeated tenfold by the orphaned poor children of the doctor's household.

"You have been an angel in disguise to them this Christmas day," said the doctor as he carried Calista home in his sleigh that evening, for Calista had stayed to the dinner of pork tenderloin and apple sauce, with vegetables and many dainties contributed by the good overseer from his own scanty pocket.

Calista Thorp's house was empty no longer. There was always room for some broken soul from the poorhouse—some one who drooped in the atmosphere which could never be inseparable from the institution and who needed comfort and encouragement before taking up the burden of life and attaining independence in the end.

The following Christmas Calista was welcomed as an old friend by the inmates of the poorhouse.

At her bidding each one had hung his or her stocking on a line stretched before the dormitory doors, and that evening Calista and Dr. Keyes had filled them all.

Calista's blue eyes were shining with happiness as the doctor drove her home under the Christmas stars.

"We remembered every one," she said contentedly, leaning back among the soft robes.

"Every one?" he repeated doubtfully.

"Why, who have we forgotten?"

"Me," he said gravely.

Calista's heart thumped painfully at the new note in his deep voice.

"You have forgotten me, Calista. I have given you my heart. That is my gift. You have God's gift, too, the love of my poor people and his love in your heart. I, too, want a gift."

There was a hushed silence then until Calista found courage to ask shyly, "What shall I give—to you—my best friend?"

"Give me a place in your heart, Calista. I must be there also. We will work together. Surely you have room in your heart for me too!"

He leaned over and looked in her eyes, where joy shone serene.

She gave her hand into his with simple faith.

"There is room in my heart for you, Henry—room for the memory of my dear ones, room for the whole world."

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes:

"For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifying the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 16

Wisdom of a Great Painter.

We always like to know what a great man has said about his work and how he feels about other things that are of interest to every one. Fortunately, Meissonier left a record of many of his feelings and opinions, published as his "Conversations." Of all the painters Rembrandt was his favorite.

Among his sayings were the following:

"'Let well enough alone' is the motto of the lazy."

"The man who leaves good work behind adds to the inheritance of the human race."

"The master is an artist whose works never recall those of some other artist."

"I would have drawing made the basis of education in all schools. It is the universal language."

"No artist would paint if he knew he was never to show his work, if he felt no human eye would ever rest upon it."

"I never sign a picture until my whole soul is satisfied with my work."

"'To will is to do' has been my motto. I have always willed. Oh, how I regret the lost time that can never be made up! As I grow older I work harder than ever."—C. L. Barstow, in St. Nicholas.

She Didn't Do It.

The family jar waxed fiercer.

"You talk about my being to blame for our marrying!" shrilly exclaimed Mrs. Vick-Senn. "John Henry, did I hunt you out and then make love to you?"

"No!" he snorted. "But you could have given me the glassy eye and sent me about my business, and you didn't do it, madam—you didn't do it!"—C

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS
BROOKLYN TABERNACLE
INTERNATIONAL BIBLE STUDIES

IN HIS OWN IMAGE.

Genesis 1:26—2:25; Psalm 8—Jan. 12.

HOW different the statement respecting man's creation from that describing the creation of plants and the lower animals which the seas and the earth brought forth! Man's creation was premeditated. God designed man to be king over the earth. He was to be his Creator's image, not in physical form, but in moral and intellectual qualities resembling his Creator, a Spirit Being. As we read, "God created man in His own image." Not a word here can be construed as implying the evolution of man from the lower creatures.

A Fall, Not an Evolution.

Adam created to be King of earth.

So far from teaching Evolution, the Bible teaches the very reverse. St. Paul declares, "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as the result of sin. Thus death passed upon all men, because all are sinners." (Romans 5:12.) The Bible represents man as the masterpiece of mundane creation. God pronounced him "very good." Nor could we esteem it just that any but a perfect being should be placed on trial for life or death everlasting.

Not Two Creation Accounts.

Higher Critics claim that Genesis 2 is another account, written by a different person, giving a different order of creation—man created first, then trees, beasts, etc. To us this is foolishness. Moses, having described creation in its logical order, merely particularizes some of his previous statements. He declares (Genesis 2:4) that he has already described the generations or developments of things heavenly and earthly from "the begining," before there was any plant life. He mentions that at that time there was no rain. He again assures us that man was God's last creation, to be the king of earth; and he proceeds to give an account of man's creation, so different from that of the lower animals and vegetation. Man was not evolved, but God's handiwork. He was not spirit, but flesh, formed of the dust of the ground, with the spirit of life common to all earthly creatures. The Hebrew reads, literally, "In his nostrils the breath of lives"—the breath or spirit of life common to all breathing creatures.

Man Originally Sexless.

Division of Adam into two parts.

The details of human creation imply that Adam lived some time alone and sexless. Some Bible students infer from the chronology that it was two years from Adam's creation until the expulsion from Eden under the death sentence. The cause for the division of Adam into two persons is stated: the earth was to be populated with a race of his species, and amongst all the creatures none was suitable as companion and mother of his offspring. Thus again is shown that Adam was distinctly different from apes and all other creatures under his control. He was in the likeness of his Creator. Other Scriptures show us that it is the Divine purpose that the sex quality in humanity shall be dropped.

The division of Adam into two parts left the headship with the male, but deprived him of some of his sympathetic qualities. His wife had less of the masculine and aggressive traits; but the two were perfectly adapted to each other and fulfilled each other's ideals. The fall from God's favor has affected both sexes, producing extremes of coarseness and effeminacy, and robbing the marriage relationship of its ideal happiness. The Restitution or resurrection to be brought about by Messiah's Kingdom will not mean the restoration of sex perfections, but the gradual perfecting of each individual in the image of God.

By One Man's Disobedience.

Note the consistency of the Bible theory which necessitated the division of one man into male and female. God purposed that the entire race must proceed from the one man. He foresaw sin and provided for man's recovery. If two or more individuals had sinned, it would have required just as many redeemers, according to the Divine Law, "An eye for an eye," a man's life for a man's life. God intended only one glorious Redeemer, therefore the entire race sprang from one man—Adam—that "as by a man came death, by a man should come the resurrection of the dead."—I Corinthians 15:21.

Second Adam and Second Eve.

Adam and Eve in some respects foreshadowed Christ and the Church. Jesus, personally, is the Great Saviour, whose death constitutes the Ransom-price for the entire race. During His Millennial Reign He will give back earthly life to Adam and his posterity. But before regenerating the world God has arranged that first from the wound in Christ's side, figuratively, an Elect Church shall be formed, to be the second Eve, on the spirit plane, as He is the Second Adam. The Church will be the mother of humanity during the Millennium.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25., a low figure.

THE SCARCITY OF BUTTER

The remarks at the Eastern Dairymen's Association about the supply of butter have a deep and direct interest for nearly all the people of Canada. Every family in Canada is a user of butter, the oleomargarine habit not having got a very deep hold here, and when the price goes up, owing to an insufficient supply, the rise makes the cost of living dearer to the worker in a very pronounced manner. The home market in Canada has grown so immensely that we have stopped exporting butter to Britain entirely, and during the fiscal year of 1912-3 will be importing about 7,000,000 lbs. mostly from New Zealand. That is in startling contrast to conditions in 1903, when the Canadian export of butter to Great Britain amounted to about 34,000,000 pounds. We not only have no butter for outsiders, but we haven't enough for ourselves. There are several reasons for this, but the chief one is in the growing scarcity of labor on the farm, to enable the farmers to keep as large herds as they used to; and the fact that milk consumption, ice cream manufacturer, and other influences are increasingly at work substracting from the butter-making part of dairying. Canada now is growing at the rate of 350,000 per per year. The dairy herds of Ontario have been depleted, though this is the growing time. It is frequently more profitable for the farmer to produce less at a higher price than it is to enlarge his production and cut the price. But the consumer is the one who has to pay through the nose. There does not seem to be a prospect of an increase in the butter supply while the scarcity of labor, and rural depopulation of Ontario, continues. The advantages and efficiency of cow-testing have been urged upon the farmers, but a lot of them still fail to watch the output of their milch cows, so as to weed out the unprofitable ones.

THE LIBERAL BLUFF

Hugh Guthrie and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, two leading supporters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the House of Commons, join in saying that the Borden naval policy is so important a departure in Canadian public affairs that Parliament should be dissolved, and an election fought on the issue. That is very easy to say that when a party is in opposition. Did the Liberals do that when they proposed an even more epoch-making departure from the established policy of the country—the making of a reciprocity treaty with the United States—. The reciprocity busisiness was held by President Taft and others to be the means of making Canada an adjunct of the United States. Was that not more important to Canada than a proposition that we shall give threee Dreadnoughts to the United Kingdom? One was to take us away from the British connection. The other will draw us closer in that connection.

Of course, the reasons for the attitude of the Liberals are very plainly to be seen. They want an early chance to recover some of the seats won by the Conservatives. They may obstruct the naval bill, but if they do any tampering with the British sentiment of Canada, they will reckon on false gods. As a matter of fact, the Borden Government could very easily go to the country on this issue, but the West wants redistribution, the Borden Government has yet a large part of its program to put through. It has had only one brief session, and that there should be another election upon a matter which, the Prime Minister says does not create any obligation to similar action in future, would not be in the interests of the country. The Laurier majority may block the naval bill if they wish, but they will do so at the cost of the country's tolerance, and they will invite some method of closure that will make obstruction impossible. The Liberals threatened, at the time the reciprocity business was forced before the country, to put a closure into operation, to stop the obstruction of the Conservatives but had no chance. They could not with consistency complain if the boot were put on the other foot. But Lemieux and Guthrie are talking, and only talking. The Opposition dare not vote directly against giving aid to the Mother Country.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A California despatch tells of the damage done to the orange crop by frost, but no mention is made about prunes. The boarding house keepers need not worry.

The New York Herald says that a new humorist is wanted in America. What's the matter with the writer of the Man-in-Overalls column of the Hamilton Times?

A beauty doctor declares tight corsets make the nose red. Won't some fakir please discover a new excuse for the men?

Carrie Chapman Catt advises women to wear no hats at all, and this movement will revive the cordial support of most married men, especially at Easter.

Of course the same old argument is being advanced against parcel post which was worn to death before the reduction of the postal rates from three to two cents. It was then argued that the contemplated step meant a huge deficit, and Sir William Mulock hesitated for some time before he took the plunge. The result of that step was a greatly increased revenue. There is every reason to believe that the same result would follow the introduction of a parcel post. whe business is here to be done; facilities only are lacking.—Montreal Herald.

GLASS IS PECULIAR.

It Has a Number of Curious and Contradictory Qualities.

Glass is one of the most interesting as well as one of the most peculiar things in the world. It has curious and contradictory qualities, and many astonishing phenomena are connected with it. Brittle and breakable as it is yet it exceeds almost all other bodies in elasticity.

If two glass balls are made to strike each other at a given force the recoil by virtue of their elasticity, will be nearly equal to their original impetus Connected with its brittleness are some very singular facts.

Take a hollow sphere with a hole and stop the hole with the finger, so as to prevent the external and internal air from communicating, and the sphere will fly to pieces by the mere heat of the hand. Vessels made of glass that have been suddenly cooled possess the curious property of being able to resist hard blows given to them from without, but will be instantly shivered by a small particle of flint dropped into their cavities. This property seems to depend upon the comparative thickness of the bottom; the thicker the bottom is the more certainty of breakage by this experiment. Some of these vessels it is stated, have resisted the stroke of a mallet given with sufficient force to drive a nail into wood, and heavy bodies, such as iron, bits of wood, jasper stone, etc., have been cast into them from a height of two or three feet without any effect, yet a fragment of flint not larger than a pea dropped from a height of three inches has made them fly.

Chartrand Told Them He Had Been a Christian Brother.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—It has been discovered that Cyrille Chartrand, the man who thrust little Katie Marks into a furnace in the basement of the convent of Our Lady of Good Counsel, had obtained his job as furnace man by imposing on the nuns, making them believe that for six years he had worn the robes of a Christian Brother.

Chartrand for six years had worn a uniform all right, but it was that furnished the inmates of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, where he served for having robbed the poor boxes in churches. The little girl is still suffering acute pain from her burns, but it is hoped that her life will be saved. In addition to the burns, the girl was beaten about the head and her body is covered with bruises.

GREAT ENGLISH ACTOR COMING HERE NEXT WEEK

Lewis Waller and His Strong Company Should Play to Capacity.

The art of Mr. Lewis Waller, the English actor, who appears at the Grand next Wednesday, Jan. 15, is perhaps too well known to need any preliminary comment, and it is quite as unnecessary to say more about the play in which he will appear, "A Marriage of Convenience," other than that it has been conceded in England to be one of his most brilliant successes.

The piece was originally written for the French stage by Alexander Dumas, sr., and in 1903 Mr. Sydney Grundy adapted it to English, which no doubt means that the comedy has been greatly improved since Mr. Grundy's reputation for epigramatic lines and classic truisms is well known. The plot is essentially of continental flavor, embellished perhaps with a little wicked humor and mocking laughter, the weapon with which Mr. Bernard Shaw makes play against the foibles and follies of another generation.

The Comte and cometesse de Cardale have been married through an arrangement made by a rich but old fashioned and arbitrary uncle. Being a school girl, she has had a school girl's fancy for another lover, and the comte being a man of the world, essentially has other affairs, de coeur, aside from that of his wife, but the flame of love, fanned by jealously through a mischievous lady's maid, brings about a new attachment for the comte on the part of the school girl, and the comte is good enough fellow and sensible enough to see that instead of having married a silly school girl he has really won the woman of his heart.

Mr. Waller's first Canadian appearance was made at Montreal where he opened some three weeks since, and the attraction was immediately acclaimed as one of the most distinguished and delightful of the entire year. Facts show, that, for his opening in Toronto, he had the largest and most fashionable house of the season, and the largest seat sale in the history of the theatre, with one exception, and in fact played at the Royal Alexander theatre for the week, to absolute capacity. The critics voted Mr. Waller the greatest romantic actor of the generation.

Unlike many American producers and managers, Mr. Waller has apparently not trusted entirely to himself for the success of the piece here, since he brings with him practically all the members of his English company, which includes one of London's most notable leading women, Miss Madge Titheadge, Mr. Maxwell Ryder, Mr. Reginald Dane, Mr. Chas. Dodsworth, and others whose names are well known to the followers of the play.

Judging from the interest displayed in Mr. Waller's appearance here and the inquiries already made for seats it is safe to say that there will be "some house" next Wednesday evening. 34

APPROVES OF SPEEDY COMPLETION OF CANAL

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Ald. Buller attended the banquet of the Orillia Board of Trade last night.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, in the course of his speech, approved the speedy completion of the Trent Valley Canal.

Mr. Burnham emphasized the importance of the canal as a means of promoting flour mills and other industries.

Ald Buller conveyed the congratulations of the city of Peterborough.

The banquet was held to mark the advent of the Canadian Pacific Railway into Orillia.

THE LATE WM. FAINT LEFT ESTATE OF OVER $22,000

An estate of $22,453.60, the greater portion of which is realty, was left by William Faint, of Toronto, who died on November 5, in Winnipeg. His will went through the Surrogate Court at Toronto yesterday.

in No. 28 Dorval road, Toronto, $1,800, comprised property on Hunter street, worth $15,000, a half interest in No. 28 Dorval road, Toronto, $1m506, one-third interest in No. 108 Alcine avenue, $294. He had book debts of $300, money received by mortgage $1,084.50, life insurance $2,500, and a bank balance of $1,769.10.

"To my children I desire to say: "I believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as my personal Saviour. I believe there is a place prepared for all that love and serve Him. It is your mother's wish and mine that all our children should live in such a way that we will all meet in Heaven, where there is no parting, then our living will not be in vain. God grant it," is the closing paragraph of his will.

His widow living in Winnipeg receives the insurance in monthly payments, and Wm .H. Faint, son, Winnipeg, receives Peterborough property subject to payment of $10 monthly to his mother. Three daughters and a grandson share the residue, and a legacy of $1,200 is left to Jesse H. Doxsee, brother-in-law, Toronto.

Silver Wedding

The Fire Chief and Mrs. Howard will celebrate their silver wedding at their home, 471 Bolivar street, next Wednesday.

A YEAR OF PROMISE FOR PETERBORO

Many Important Issues For City Fathers to Decide.

Aldermen and City Officials to Be Banqueted

During the year just entered upon there may safely be predicted for Peterborough a year of unusual activity and accomplishment in municipal circles. It is slightly premature to prophesy what the Council procedure will be, but the year will undoubtedly witness the successful commencement and completion of many things that will place Peterborough higher up among the list of progressive municipalities. The principal one will be the adoption of hydro electric power for manufacturing and lighting purposes the desirability of which was so strongly emphasized by the recent by-law vote. The cutting of the present cost of power in two was a promise that evidently proved irresistable to the ratepayers. Then a successful and satisfactory solution of the garbage disposal question is expected, by the purchase and erection of an incinerating plant. Wherever such a plant is in operation it has given all round satisfaction and efficient service, and an adequate service is assured the city, when the contemplated plant is in use.

But it may be safely promised that the City Council with a progressive minded Mayor at its head will not relax after the above mentioned factors are at work. They have not forgotten their promises to the East city ratepayers to span the Otonabee river with a proper bridge. They are also mindful of the agreement with the townships to provide a filteration plant for the purification of the city sewage before it empties in the Otonabee. All these things are uppermost in the thoughts of the Mayor and the efficient and wide awake men who will surround him in the Council this year.

There is little forecasting going on relative to the municipal slate for 1913. At the inaugural meeting Monday the standing committees will likely be struck to the satisfaction of all, and with the best interest of the city in mind.

ANNUAL BANQUET

The annual banquet given by the Mayor will be held as usual this year in either Hooper's or Coleman's, probably one week from next Monday.

PERSONAL

Mr George Campbell is confined to the house through illness.

Mrs. N. C. Cameron will receive for the first time since her marriage, on Monday next, afternoon and evening, at 337 McDonnel street.

Mr. Wilbert Nicholls, who has been connected with the local branch of the Matthews-Laing Company for several years left this afternoon on the 4.26 for Winnipeg, Man., to accept a lucrative position with the company's branch of that city.

ST. PAUL'S JUNIOR CHOIR PRESENTED WILL O' THE WISP

Seating capacity in the Collegiate Assembly Hall was overtaxed last evening at the presentation of the catchy little operetta "Will o' the Wisp," by members of the St. Paul's Church Junior choir. The proceeds were wholly donated to the St. Paul's Korean Mission, a very handsome sum being netted. The cast was composed entirely of children who acquitted themselves creditably, considering their inexperience and natural childish timidity.

The program consisted of three parts. The first was comprised of six musical selections in the form of duets and choruses. The choral work of the senior girls was especially commendable, their voices betokening careful cultivation and attention to time and harmony.

The second part was a stage representation of McDonald's famous waxwork show. Plenty of amusement was derived by the audience from the laughable performances of the various supposed wax figures. The grouping of famous characters of ancient and modern days was extremely clever and unusually effective. Douglas McDonald in the role of proprietor and showman, and Lionel McIntosh as "Duster-in-Chief" and "Winder Up" contributed to heaps of wholesome comedy, keeping the gathering laughing throughout.

When the curtains rolled back for the presentation of the musical sketch "Will o' the Whisp," a very pretty scene was revealed. It was arranged to represent a castle court yard into which two little children had wandered and become lost while pursuing an elusive will o' the wisp. The children were discovered by the King's attendants and threatened with death first, but later, through their charming innocence, they were taken under the protection of the King and Queen.

Master Gordon McBride, in the character of the King, performed well, although his acting would have been much improved by a little more spirit and confidence. Stanley Anderson and Grace Thompson as the two stray-aways, were both very pleasing and sang and talked quite freely. Jamie Pogue, as "Gold Stick" interpreted his part with perfect confidence, and his manly bearing was always in evidence. The other children all performed with more or less credit and on the whole, the charming title play was cleverly presented.

Mr. John Allan, organist of St. Paul's undertook the training of the children, and their creditable showing was largely due to his careful efforts.

The program was as follows—

"It's a cold and Frosty Morning"—Wilma Nelson and Choir.

Duet, "Santa Clause"—Doris Cowan, Tom Pogue.

Chorus, "When we Were all Girls You Know."—Senior Girls.

Song and Chorus, "I'm a Merry Little Jap,"—Agnes Logan and Junior girls.

PORCUPINE USED HIS ARTILLERY TO ADVANTAGE

Mr. S Manning had an exciting experience at Turtle Lake a few days ago. A party of gentlemen were having an outing at the lake, and one evening Sid decided to catch a porcupine alive and take it home. Accompanied by two of the party he started out to secure one of the animals, and discovered where one had put up for the winter in an old shanty. After considerable trouble the animal was routed out of its hiding place, and a big effort was made to capture it alive. A rope was placed around its neck and preparations were made to lead it to camp. The animal, however, refused to budge, and when Sid attempted to help it along with his foot, it sprang on to his leg, with the result that from his knee down his leg was a mass of porcupine quills. Yelling with pain he hastily disrobed, and his two companions endeavored to extract the sharp weapons of the porcupine, but with but poor success. With blood streaming down his leg Sid started for camp, and on his arrival there a pair of plyers were secured and the balance of the quills extracted. Soothing remedies were applied to the wounds and Sid was able to start for home the next day.- Lakefield News.

WILL BE KNOWN AS LADIES' AID OF HEALTH ASS'N

Report in Sale of Christmas Stamps not Yet Ready

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Health Association a couple of weeks ago, plans were formulated for the doing away of the Women's Auxiliary in connection with the Association. After a thorough discussion on the advisability of such action, the ladies decided yesterday afternoon to merge the auxiliary into a body which will henceforth be known as the Ladies' Aid of the association. The two bodies are amalgamated now and will be known only by the one name.

Any body in the city is cordially welcomed into the new body. The meeting yesterday was entirely occupied with the discussion on the change and the organization will take place at a later date.

A report on the amount of money received from the sale of Health stamps was not entirely ready, as the figures from the Collegiate Institute pupils have yet to be obtained.

THREE YEARS OF MISERY

Mrs. Burnside Escaped an Operation by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mahoningtown, Pa. — "For three years I suffered untold misery every month, and had to stay in bed the first two or three days. I also had a displacement and other ailments peculiar to women. I became so weak and run down I could scarcely walk across the floor.

"The doctor told me I would never be well unless I would undergo an operation, but I was advised by my mother to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after I had taken four bottles I am strong and well. I have got others to take your medicine with the same good results and they cannot say enough for it." — Mrs. J. A. BURNSIDE, Mahoningtown, Pa.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, of Maggie May Manley, wife of Mr. Thomas Hendry, 268 Munro avenue, East City.

The late Mrs. Hendry had been ailing for some time with kidney trouble, and so serious was the attack that death did not come unexpectedly. She was a daughter of Joseph Manley of Otonabee, and was married three years ago. A Methodist in religion, the late Mrs. Hendry had attended Mark street church.

A bereaved husband and young daughter are left to mourn her loss. One sister, Miss Minnie Manley, resides in Saskatoon, and will be home for the funeral. The brothers are Messrs. Ernest, Thomas and Wilfrid, of Madill, Sask.; John, Harry and Norman, at home, and James, of Drummond Station.

The funeral will take place from the late residence on Monday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

FRITZ KUHN ON "STORE SERVICE"

Store service in Peterborough is capable of being greatly improved and to the distinct advantage of the merchants. Sales can be greatly increased and better given can be made by having the clerks and sales people fully awake to the possibilities of increasing their sales through better service and through giving better satisfaction to those to whom they sell. With a view to promoting a better service, the Peterborough Ad Club has arranged with Mr Fritz Kuhn, of Ottawa, a specialist on selling, to speak here on Monday night on "Store Service." The address will be given at a club banquet, the tickets for which are only 50 cents.

It is anticipated that the meeting on Monday evening will far eclipse everything yet pulled off by their advantage to have their sales force out to hear Mr Kuhn. Tickets are now available from the Secretary, Mr J. McNichol who will be obliged by you 'phoning early your reservations to him, at 1533.

A BIT DIFFERENT

Widely familiar as the Chateau Laurier has become already in its short career, the recent publication issued by the Grand Trunk dealing with its salient features, has served to win for it a host of new friends. One of these is a prominent business man from New England, whose experience of hotel conditions has been both wide and varied, who has written to one of the company's representatives as follows:

"I have just received the Chateau Laurier booklet, which you kindly sent to us as promised, and I am very glad indeed to hand it along to some friends of mine who are thinking of a trip to Canada. My wife and I went to Ottawa for no other reason at all, but to stay a few days at the new hotel, about which we had heard so much, and it may interest you to know that we were delighted with the house, the efficiency of its service and the cordiality of its management. The hotel is indeed beautiful, and I have no doubt will quickly become a Mecca for tourists who are looking for something "a bit different.'"

Real Use of the Bee's Sting.

"The bee's sting is a trowel, not a rapier," said a nature student. "It is an exquisitely delicate little trowel with which the bee finishes off the honey cell, injects a little preservative inside and seals it up. With its trowel-like sting the bee puts the final touches on the dainty and wonderful work. With the sting it pats and shapes the honey cell, as a mason pats and shapes a row of brick. Before sealing up the cell it drops a wee bit of poison into the honey. This is formic acid. Without it honey would spoil. Most of us think the bee's sting, with its poison, is a weapon only. It is a weapon secondarily, but primarily it is a magic trowel, a trowel from whose end, as the honey cells are built up, a wonderful preserving fluid drips.

American Leaf Colors.

It has been observed that the leaves of American trees, such as maples, scarlet oaks and so forth, which at home exhibit splendid colors in the autumn, fall below their reputation in this regard when transplanted to England or on the continent of Europe. An English observer, who has been studying the causes of the autumn tints of trees, thinks the superiority of our woodlands arises from the soft and mild yet glowing climatic conditions prevailing here in the fall. England, it is added, is rarely blessed with an Indian summer. When the climatic conditions permit the leaves to retain considerable vitality in the autumn the colored pigment is normally developed; hence the glorious forests of the United States.—Chicago Record-Herald.

GOOD MEETINGS IN LAKEFIELD

Held By West Peterboro Farmer's Institute

The Mid-Winter session of the Farmers' Institute was closed yesterday with meetings in the afternoon and evening in the Lakefield Town Hall. Two speakers in the afternoon and evening were unavoidably absent but two worthy substitutes, Messrs. Holesworth of Port Hope, and McDermid, of Allandale, gave instructive speeches. In the afternoon Mr. Holesworth gave an interesting talk on "The raising of calves," and Mr. McDermid spoke on poultry.

Mr. Ellis, editor of the Farm and Dairy, was present at the evening meeting and contributed an address on "Rural Depopulation." Mr. Holesworth in following Mr. Ellis, took up the same subject. Mr. McDermid also contributed an interesting talk on the growth and future of our country and the possibilities for the farmer.

The newly elected reeve of Lakefield, Mr. Fitzgerald, was in the chair. An excellent program was given.

Coughs, Colds Bronchitis

If there is an ailment in the throat or chest, it is surely essential that the remedy be conveyed direct to the affected part. It's because the healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed into the sore, irritated throat and bronchial tubes, because its balsamic fumes kill the germs and destroy the cause of the trouble. These are the reasons why Catarrhozone never yet failed to cure a genuine case of Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, or Throat Trouble.

The wonderfully soothing vapor of Catarrhozone instantly reaches the furthest recesses of the lungs, produces a healing, curative effect that is impossible with a tablet or liquid, which goes merely to the stomach, and fails entirely to help the throat or lungs.

To permanently cure your winter ills, your coughs, sneezing and Catarrh, by all means use a tried and proven remedy like Catarrhozone. But beware of the substitutor and imitator. Look for Catarrhozone only. 50c and $1, at all dealers. 10

LOCAL JUNIORS WON HANDILY FROM WHITBY BY SCORE OF 10-0

Effective Combination Work of the Petes Too Much for the Visitors.

The Whitby juniors were somewhat of a light lunch for Captain Kenneally's crew, at Brock street rink last night, as they did not loom up to anything like the form displayed by the Cobourg sextette last Monday night.

The score at the call for refreshments was 3—0. At the end of the contest the flag behind Flowers remained unfurled, while at the other nets the bell rang no less than seven times, making a total of ten for the homesters.

Good, bad and indifferent hockey was witnessed by the 500 or more fans. Neither team could do much in the first thirty minutes, because the players all wanted a trial with the rubber and neglected to hold their rightful positions. The Peterborough seven appeared to be superior to the visitors but could not get going in an effective manner. Orme Cavanah alone furnished some good plays by his trips to the Whitby goal tender. Very little combination was attempted, and with everybody trying to play the puck it wasn't much of an exhibition.

After the rest a change was noticeable. The local line succeeded in working up a combination that was too much for their opponents. Much credit must be given Rose at centre for his efforts in this direction. He invariably shot the rubber to the right and to the left in a most unselfish manner and, as was expected, tallies were registered. The crowd began to sing then, and finally the cast iron vocalists let loose with;

Good-bye dear Whitby, good-bye to you, etc.

FLOWERS WAS GOOD IN GOAL.

Try as they would, the visitors could not penetrate the Peterborough defence. When shots did come from the outside, Flowers was always in the road. With a continuance of his good work of last night he should have no trouble in landing a steady job. He was cool and cleared nicely at all times. The erratic work of the visitors was too much for Morrow and he was unable to work the puck. The forwards in the second half combined at times in championship style.

F. Rice at rover for Whitby was a hard worker, but not effective. He and his team mates were deficient in stick handling. The strongest part of their performance was their checking. Jubb, in goal, stopped many shots. His stop of a shot from Cavanah, who was right in on him, was one of the bright spots of the game.

THE SCORING.

The game went nine minutes before the first goal was scored. Halpin did the trick on a side shot. It was soon after this that Cavanah made his lone rush, only to have his shot turned aside by the Whitby netman. After fifteen minutes of hard playing Kenneally and Rose combined, the latter scoring. Long took the next with a pretty shot into the top corner of the nets. The half was called with the Petes on the defensive.

On play being resumed, Rose, Halpin and Long worked together as far as the nets, where the shot was blocked, but after eight minutes Long scored, making the count read 4—0. Number five came on a combination by Kenneally and Halpin, the former tallying. Rose took another, and Halpin made it 7—0. The next two came by two men plays, while the tenth was secured by Rose.

Regulating Price of Books.

The price of books was once a matter for legislation in England. An act of 1534, which seems never to have been repealed, provides that any complaint regarding the price of books should be considered by "the lord chamberlain, the lord treasurer and the justices or any two of these," and that those dignitaries should have "power and authority to reform and redress the enhancing of the prices of printed books and to limit the prices of the books and the offenders should lose and forfeit for every book by them sold whereof the price be enhanced the sum of 3s. 6d."—London Mail.

GORGEOUS CHORISTERS.

Boy Singers of the Private Chapel In St. James' Palace.

There are ten boys in London who every Sunday and on state occasions wear suits of clothes that in each instance cost something like $200. The lads thus expensively and brilliantly attired are the choristers belonging to the king's private chapel in St. James' palace. When arrayed in their state suits they are truly a gorgeous sight.

Scarlet cloth is the foundation of this costume. Bands of royal purple between rows of heavy gold lace are the adornments. Old lace ruffles are worn at the neck and wrists. These ruffles are so valuable and so difficult to replace that they are worn only on the most special occasions. At other times white lawn bands take their place. The boys must take great care of their suits, which must endure three years. The "undress" suits are replaced every eight months.

This choir is one of the historical institutions of Great Britain, and many of its old time customs, including the dress of the boys, are retained to this day. The choir has numbered among its singers such distinguished musicians as Sir Arthur Sullivan, Edward Lloyd, Sir John Goss and Dr. E. J. Hopkins.

It is the right of the head boy to demand a guinea as "spur money" from any officer entering the chapel wearing spurs. It is said that when Arthur Sullivan was head boy the Duke of Wellington would always come spurred to the chapel, in order that he might have the pleasure of paying the forfeit to his favorite chorister.—Harper's Weekly.

Destroying Money.

Paper money is nothing but a promise to pay so much coin. If you destroy a five dollar note, for instance, you simply release the government or the bank which issued the note from the payment of the $5 in gold which the note called for. Of course, therefore, you are not punishable in any manner for destroying the note if it is your own. There is no penalty for mutilating gold or silver coin if you keep it in your own possession, but as you have thereby destroyed a considerable part of its value you must not try to pass it at par after the mutilation.

Flame and Wire Gauze.

To Sir Humphry Davy belongs the credit of discovering that the flame of burning gas will not pass through wire gauze having 784 meshes to the square inch. This contention may be tested by bringing a flame in contact with similar gauze, when it will be found that the flame will not go through the meshes. This is owing to the cooling action of the wire, which tends to reduce the temperature of the flame below the ignition point, the unburned gas passing harmlessly through. Of course if the gauze becomes overheated the flame is able to get through.

Almost a Threat.

THE EARTH CRUST

Its Density, Its Thickness and the Pressure It Exerts.

A BAR TO WORLD EXPLOSION.

The Reasons Why This Old Planet of Ours, With All Its Pentup Fiery, Volcanic or Gaseous Forces at Work, Could Never Be Blown to Fragments.

Some writers have accounted for the asteroids on the theory that they are the fragments of a world that from some unknown cause has been exploded in its orbit. Similarly, many have thought that perhaps at some distant time, when the seas shall have been drunk up into the cracked and thickened crust of the age shrunken earth and the volcanoes—those vents of the fiery interior—shall have become choked and extinct, the pentup gases generated from the descending moisture by the still great internal heat may actually explode the old earth like a veritable bombshell.

But that can never happen.

In 1883 Krakatoa, a sleepy old volcano on a small island in the strait of Sunda, between Java and Sumatra, began to show marked signs of uneasiness. Round the volcano the quaking earth opened enormous fissures in the bottom of the sea, down which rushed Niagaras of water. Then the fissures closed and confined the engulfed flood in the hot subterranean depths. The water was quickly converted into steam, the steam into dissociated gases, without room for expansion. It exerted a pressure equal to that of the strongest dynamite.

The great chimney of Krakatoa, sealed since the memory of man, barred the normal path of escape. Higher and higher mounted the pressure under the huge mass of the volcano; then, of a sudden, came a blast that actually shook the earth. Never before in historic time had there been such a shock. The whole top of the old mountain was blown into the sky. The recoil was distinctly felt clear through the terrestrial ball.

This great cataclysm has been cited as an indication of the power of the pentup forces that may some day disrupt the earth itself. Let us examine the underlying principles that must guide us in passing judgment on the correctness of this theory.

An explosive compound is a combustible combined mechanically or chemically either with oxygen or with an oxidizing substance that will burn without the help of atmospheric oxygen.

Among the most powerful high explosives are nitrogelatin and picric acid, each of which has a density more than one and a half times that of water. The products of their combustion are nearly all gaseous, whereas the products of the combustion of ordinary black gunpowder are less than half gaseous. The larger part is the solid matter that makes the smoke.

The energy that a high explosive can exert depends on the volume of the gases liberated and the temperature to which the heat of the explosion can raise them.

The exact temperature of the gases liberated by a high explosive at the instant of detonation is not absolutely known, but may be approximately learned through chemical experiment. Nor is the amount of pressure known with absolute certainty. It is probable, however, that nitroglycerin, nitrogelatin and picric acid, when detonated in a confined space, exert a pressure somewhere between 300,000 and 500,000 pounds to the square inch.

If we assume that the earth crust has a density five times that of water and that its average thickness is fifty miles, then it follows that it exerts a pressure of more than 500,000 pounds to the square inch; if the crust is a hundred miles thick, then the pressure is more than a million pounds to the square inch—a pressure certainly greater than the expansive force exerted by the most powerful high explosive. Plainly, no quantity of high explosive detonated under the crust of the earth would be able to lift it, and consequently we know that no world of the size of the earth can ever explode from its own pentup internal forces.

If, then, no high explosive force is sufficient to blow up a world the size of the earth, how can worlds explode? There is only one way in which the heavenly bodies can become possessed of sufficient energy actually to blow up, and that is by collision.

The stars are flying about in space with velocities that range all the way from five miles a second to 500 miles a second.

If two celestial orbs, traveling each at a velocity of 200 miles a second, met in a head-on collision they would be fused and gasified by the impact, and the heat generated would be sufficient to break up the matter of both into its ultimate elements and to expand it into nebulous haze. This is the way in which science says that new suns, new nebulae and new stars are born.—Hudson Maxim in Youth's Companion.

NO CASTE AT OXFORD.

Duke's Son and Cook's Son Share Alike In Sports and Studies.

Actually there is no university or college in America at which distinctions of birth or wealth count for less than they do at Oxford. There was once a time when there existed a class of "gentlemen commoners"—John Ruskin, I believe, was one of them—who enjoyed special privileges and exemptions.

But that peculiarity has long since been swept away. Not only are the requirements for graduation identical for all comers, but the social life within each college of the university is open on equal terms to every one on the roll. "Duke's son" and "cook's son" share alike in sports and studies, and it is personal qualities alone that determine the position an undergraduate holds among his contemporaries.

The late F. W. Walker, for many years so successful as high master of St. Paul's school, was once interviewed by the rather snobbish mother of an intended pupil. "Of course," she said, "you are very particular about the parents of the boys you admit to your school." "Not at all, madam," was his reply. "As long as your son behaves decently and attends to his work we shall not ask any questions about his parents."

The head of any college at Oxford or Cambridge might have given a similar answer.—London Cor. New York Post.

LAUDANUM TO INDUCE SLEEP

The Explanation of Lakefield Man at Police Court

Some two weeks ago a man from Lakefield threatened to take a dose of laudanum at the Montgomery Hotel if he was arrested. He was prevented however, and locked up on a charge of being drunk. This morning he came up after a remand and gave his name as James Cox. The laudanum he explained was used for the purpose of inducing sleep.

Magistrate Dumble gave him two weeks to pay a $2 fine.

Music and Drama

A few weeks ago Mme. Sarah Bernhardt started her American tour, and with the possible intention of tickling the vanity of the people of the people of this continent, Mme. Bernhardt is reported to have made the following statement:

"The drama in England has lost its grip on the intellectual public. In America it is gaining in grip every day. The English theatre stands for nothing expresses nothing. It is full of shams and insincerities. The American drama, crude and faulty though it may be, is at any rate sincere. It endeavors to express the sentiment of the American people, and for that reason is infinitely more alive and more interesting than the average English stage to-day".

One wonders if any actress was ever guilty of a generality that contains less truth. When one looks at the best plays written recently in England and compare them with the best efforts of America, the assertion of the divine Sarah seems absolutely foolish.

These reflections are not intended to be a condemnation of American playwrights. At the present time the drama on this continent is in a healthy condition, and the future looks very bright. Very able pictures are constantly being given of American conditions. The dramatists are at least skilful in their photography, but even along these lines they do not possess the finish of such genre pictures as "Bunty Pulls the Strings" and "The Mind-the-Paint Girl." The one outstanding quality of the best English dramas which they lack is the absence of ideas. When the playwrights of America begin to have more to say it will be time to resurrect Mme. Bernhardt's remark and take it more seriously.

A good story is told regarding the presentation of "Kismet" in London. Some one connected with the production had the happy thought of placing a transparency over the door on which would appear the title of the play in Arabic characters. Mr Knoblauch made a pilgrimage to the little Arab colony in the slums of London to get the word written, and made a bargain with an Arab who asked a sovereign as his price. Eventually Mr. Knoblauch got him to take half the fee, and the word was displayed in red in front of the theatre. The author was particularly pleased because he had not been forced to confess his ignorance of the Arab characters. One night a bronzed British traveller and Orientalist visited the theatre. He asked the management why they exhibited this strange sign, and they told him it meant "Kismet." "Does it, indeed!" retorted the traveller. "I'll tell you what it means. It is an insult to every passer-by." He whispered words to the manager that made him open his eyes with horror. The stolid and very respectable gentleman hastened to have the sign removed, while Mr. Knoblauch learned that it was better to give an Oriental his price.

An Irish-American Company has been organized by Mr. Henry W. Savage and will give a series of plays which will make a special appeal to the people whose ancestors came from the Emerald Isle. The first comedy is entitled "Top o' the Mornin'," by Miss Anne Caldwell and some of those who will take part in it are Tim Murphy, Robert Cain, Charles Erin Verner and Miss Gertrude Quinlan.

"Hindle Wakes" has been seen in New York, but the play which created such a sensation in England failed to stir the critics on this side of the water very profoundly. The story tells about a "wronged" girl who refuses to be righted by marriage to the cad with whom she had taken a week-end-outing, described by her as a "lark." This drama made Stanley Houghton famous and established him among the foremost dramatists of the day. It has two features that lift it above the ordinary run of plays. There is a genuine, if mistaken, idea behind it — and it could readily be argued that Mr. Houghton has tried to prove a whole case by citing an unusual instance. The New York critics liked the character sketches, and pronounced them exceedingly good, while not caring about the piece as a drama.

Bernard Shaw, the noted British critic and playwright, deprecates the display of emotions by theatre audiences. He might as well expect folks to laugh at funerals as to refrain when a palatable dish of wit and humor is presented to them.

Harry Lauder announces his retirement when his Scotch comicalities net him $600,000. But probably when that time arrives he will wish to aim at a round million. Heaping up riches is a very fascinating pursuit with many.

Maud Hobson, the first Gaiety girl, is dead in London, Eng. Her real name was Jeannie Manson. She was an Australian and the niece of John Hollingshead. She created the title role of the "Gaiety Girl," with which production she toured America. Miss Hobson married Captain Haley of the British army, with whom she went to Honolulu, where her husband became the Premier of the Hawaiian King Kalakaua.

An evening that will be productive of much enjoyment has been arranged for Tuesday, January 14th at Knox church, when the Maude C. Bradley concert party, including the widely known entertainer, Mrs. Shafer, will be heard.

New plays are coming thick and fast these days in the New York theatres, but very few of them seem to be worthy of much attention. Since the success of "Within the Law," crime and detectives have been very much in evidence, and of course there is a great deal of musical comedy. One of the most important plays of the holiday season has been "Years of Discretion," which was described on this page after the piece registered its great success in Chicago.

The thrillers which have lately seen the light are: "The Argyle Case," and "Alibi Bill." Harvey O'Higgins, a Torontonian, was part author of the former, and William J. Burns helped to arrange some of the details of the detective work. "The Argyle Case" deals with a wonderfully astute detective who is called upon to solve the mystery of the murder of a rich merchant. He exonerates the son of the dead man and a young woman who benefits by the will upon whom suspicion has fallen, and lays the guilt at the door of a band of skilful counterfeiters, with whom the victim had become involved.

There are also two new farces. In "Stop Thief" there are two real crooks and a simple-minded person who thinks himself a kleptomaniac. The action takes place during a wedding, and the bridegroom thinks he is stealing his own presents. As a fun-maker it is said to be the successor to Officer 666." In "Cheer Up," Mary Roberts Rinehart has tried to repeat her success of "Seven Days."

"Miss Princess" seen here earlier in the season, has found its way to New York, but even the cleverness of Lina Abarbanell does not seem likely to make it go very far. Sam Bernard is said to have a very well-dressed piece in "All for the Ladies," a French farce with a little music. The latest Lehar opera, "Eva," is also before the New York public, and its success doubtless depends upon whether or not people are growing tired of Viennese music and plots.

MR. LEWIS WALLER
The Famous English Actor who will appear here shortly.

LEWIS WALLER IS COMING

"A Marriage o' Convenience," by Alexander Dumas, adapted by Mr. Sydney Grundy, is the play selected by Mr Lewis Waller, the distinguished English actor, to present on his special tour of Canadian cities, and in which he will be seen at the Grand next Wednesday, January 15.

The play was made famous by Mr. Waller at his own theatre in London, where it was played by him for a very long time, and was one of five favorite plays of the late King, in which Mr. Waller was commanded to appear at either Sandringham or Windsor Castle. Mr. Waller was commanded to Sandringham with "A Marriage of Convenience" on November 13th, 1903, and later appeared in the same piece, at Windsor, in 1906. Other roles in which he appeared at Windsor were "Monsieur Beaucaire," "Robin Hood," "Still Waters Run Deep," and "The Duke's Motto."

Supporting Mr. Waller in the present vehicle is Miss Madge Titheradge, a strikingly beautiful woman, whose acting was recently commented on as follows, by Mr Acton Davies in the New York Sun: "The leading role was so extremely well acted by Miss Madge Titheradge that it held the audience tense to its finale, and won for her a number of sincere curtain calls, in fact the part was played with intelligence, power, sincerity, and fidelity." Mr. Waller's entire company is made up of English players, who are said to be excellently fitted for their different roles. The appearance of Mr. Waller in such a play, should occasion a very distinguished audience, and a very complimentary business.

THEATRICAL

The large audience at the Grand Opera House last night received probably the strongest dramatic treat of the season in the presentation of "A Butterfly on the Wheel." It was no ordinary company that interpreted the story. Each of the characters was faithfully portrayed. The cross-examination of "Peggy" in the Divorce Court was followed by a fascinated audience, and it is safe to say no stronger act has been seen on the stage of the Grand Opera House.

TURKS FIRM IN INTENTION OF BREAKING NEGOTIATIONS

Rechad Pasha Refuses to Accede to Wishes of Ambassadors.

Declares That the Turks Cannot Cede Adrianople.

Statesmen Think Roumania's Demands are Blackmail.

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Jan. 13— A news agency despatch says a Turkish newspaper in Constantinople announces that the Cabinet has decided to resign, which is believed to indicate the predominance of the war party in Turkey.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Sir Edward Grey, and the ambassadors of the powers, have made representations to Rechad Pasha regarding the projected departure of the Turkish delegates, which is equivalent to a definite rupture of the peace negotiations, for which Turkey is considered responsible.

In reply, Rechad Pasha said that he was not responsible for the suspension of the work of the conference, which was decreed by the allies, not only without asking his opinion, but without even allowing him to express it when he begged to do so. He had waited a whole week, hoping that reflection would bring the allies to a more reasonable and moderate view, but as no move had been made on their part in this direction and no desire had been manifested to hear what further rectification of the frontier Turkey was prepared to indicate—naturally without ceding Adrianople—the Turkish planipotentiaries could not remain in London indefinitely.

In deference to England, which had treated them so hospitably and out of regard for the other powers, whose ambassadors regretted the rupture of the negotiations, Rechad Pasha consented to telegraph to Constantinople asking for definite instructions.

The allies also are tired of waiting. They do not believe that the note which the powers will present at Constantinople to-day will have the desired effect.

The Roumanian demands continue to be the uppermost topic of interest. M. Jonescu, the Roumanian Minister of the Interior, whose wife is English, has learned that public opinion is against Roumania and that Roumania's action is regarded in the nature of blackmail, which, if persisted in, might mean war with Bulgaria in the near future.

The note of the powers to be presented is firm in tone, and while recommending Turkey to leave the question of the Aegean Islands in the hands of the powers, makes it clear that Turkey has no alternative except to cede Adrianople.

All the ambassadors had informal meetings with Rechad Pasha and Osman Nazami Pasha, the Turkish delegates, trying, as one of the ambassadors put it, "to square the circle," and to discover a middle course between Turkey, which insists upon keeping Adrianople, and Bulgaria, which persists that she must have that town.

The Turkish delegates were immovable, and said: "Nothing can induce us to commit suicide. It is impossible to change our minds concerning the possession of Adrianople, for which we have made sacrifices which no other country has made. The sentimental and religious value attached by Mussulmans to Adrianople can be calculated by our having renounced four-fifths of our European territory, only because we wished to keep the Holy City. In all the history of wars there is no example of such generous and important concessions as those which we have made to the allies; so, their greediness causes a natural reaction.

"If the war is resumed the allies may find that they have miscalculated their forces and minimized those of Islam. They have look through biased glasses at their first successes, which were due to the fact that we were attacked by surprise, not expecting that the enemy was prepared for war."

The resumption of hostilities really concerns only the Thracean field of operations, where the activity of the allies seems to be limited to the conquest of Adrianople. The Balkan military experts here think that under present conditions Adrianople can be taken in a few days by the sacrifice of 5,000 men.

May Summon National Assembly.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 13.—The Council of Minister is considering the question of summoning a national assembly to discuss the existing situation in the Balkans. Similar action was taken in 1878 in the Russo-Turkish war.

Turks Learns Discretion.

ATHENS, Jan. 13.—Greek destroyers cruising off the Dardanelles notified the flagship by wireless Saturday morning that the Turkish fleet was leaving the straits. The Greek fleet immediately appeared to attack the enemy, but the Turks re-entered the straits, declining an engagement.

CHINESE ADVISER DEAD.

Dr. Roest's Passing May Disorganize Reform Scheme.

PEKIN, Jan. 13.—Dr. W. Roest of Batavia, Dutch East Indies, who was appointed adviser of the Chinese Government for the reform of currency last November, died at Mukden yesterday. It is feared that his death will disorganize the reform scheme.

Dr. Roest was a noted financier. He was first appointed assistant financial adviser to the Chinese Government.

Dog Flesh as Diet.

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—The use of the flesh of dogs as a food for many is becoming common even in the capital.

From necessity the German workingman has long made horse meat a substantial portion of his daily fare, but, while Saxony consumes thousands of dogs annually, the practice of eating this meat has not until recently invaded Prussia.

Now the overseers of the Berlin cattle yards have given their approval of a proposal to erect a municipal slaughter-house for dogs at the yards, and it is expected that the police president will soon issue the required permit.

HAVE NEW EVIDENCE.

Montreal Police Find Box of Money But Legace Is Missing.

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—Henry Legace, defaulting teller of the Hochelaga Bank, who secured his temporary freedom some days ago through an appeal against his conviction, will be re-arrested if the authorities can find him. The Superior Court has ordered his re-arrest on a writ of capais following the discovery of a box containing $15,000 of the stolen money.

Lieut. Savard, who made the discovery, was at work on the case less than twenty-four hours. The box containing notes and securities was found under a bed in a house in Cherrier street. It had been taken there by a friend of Legace. For about two months the box had been in the safety vault of the Bank of Montreal branch at Ste. Anne de Bellevue.

Savard explains that the box had been placed with a jeweler of Notre Dame street, and later taken to Ste. Anne de Bellevue, through a hotel clerk. It was placed in the local branch of the Montreal Bank. Wednesday, on order of Legace, the box was withdrawn from the bank and sent to Montreal to the room of a friend in Cherrier street.

Found Nest of Big Snakes.

BERLIN, Ont., Jan. 13.—Owing to the open winter, the Breslau Brick Co., at Breslau, have been able to dig clay without much delay. While at work, workmen made an unusual find, when about eighteen inches below the surface, they unearthed a nest of snakes, 39 in all, averaging about two feet in length. They were in a comatose state when found in their winter home.

Pole Gets Away With $500.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 13.—The police are searching for Steve Mills, a Pole, wanted for the theft of $500 in cash from a fellow-countryman at Bridgeburg.

IS STEADILY IMPROVING

Duchess of Connaught's Symptoms Are Less Marked.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Montreal, Jan. 13.—Further proof that the Duchess is now well on the road to recovery is supplied by the following bulletin issued by doctors at half-past twelve: "Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught passed the best night last night since arriving in the hospital. The cough which has been distressing her for the last two days, is much less troublesome this morning. The patient is taking nourishment well and gaining strength".

MONTREAL, Jan 13.—A continued improvement has manifested itself in the condition of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught, and the symptoms which caused such grave apprehension when she was hurried from Ottawa to the Royal Victoria Hospital, are apparently not so marked.

Only one bulletin was issued yesterday, at shortly after noon, and this reports that the distinguished patient is also the victim of bronchial trouble.

"Her royal highness passed a somewhat better night. Her cough is more or less troublesome. Otherwise her condition continues to show improvement and her strength is maintained.

"E. S. Worthington,
"A. E. Garrow, M.D.,
"W. W. Chipman, M.D."

At no time, apparently, has the health of her royal highness been so encouraging since her removal to the hospital. The reports on Saturday indicated that she was sleeping better at night and that she was comparatively free from pain and discomfort. The official bulletin was the most favorable issued thus far, and far from suggesting that the condition of her royal highness might necessitate the performance of an operation, indicated that a stage of convalescence had been entered upon, with the added hope that though it would be necessarily slow, that it would be uninterrupted.

Prayers For Recovery.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—Prayers for the speedy recovery from her illness of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught, were said in all the Roman Catholic churches of the city yesterday morning. A circular letter from Archbishop Gauthier setting forth the duty of the faithful to pray for those in high station and making particular reference to her highness, whom illness had brought to the level of humanity, was read, and prayers were then said.

Successor To Chief Rabbi.

LONDON, Jan 13.—The rabbinate committee met yesterday at Leopold de Rothschild's residence in London to choose a successor to the late Dr. Hermann Adler as chief rabbi of the British Empire. It is understood that the candidacy of Dr. Bernard Drachman of New York, has been definitely dropped.

TEACHER GETS $20,000 FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

Ranch Owner Failed to Keep Promise to Wed Her—He Will Appeal.

CALGARY, Alta., Jan. 13.—The largest verdict ever given in a breach of promise case in Alberta, and one of the largest in the Dominion of Canada, $20,000, was awarded by a jury Saturday afternoon to Miss Louise Collard, 27 years old, a school teacher at Nanton, who was suing Martin J. Armstrong, owner of the Nanton Valley ranch, for failure to keep his promise to marry her. The trial, which consumed five days, was fiercely fought, and the verdict caused great surprise here because of its magnitude. It is understood that Armstrong will appeal on the ground that the court, in summing up the evidence, misdirected the jury.

Heavy Snow on Frontier.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 13.—After a series of rain and sleet storms that tied-up traffic and did thousands of dollars' worth of damage, a severe snowstorm struck the Niagara frontier yesterday, on the American side, the Bell Telephone Co.'s service was put out of commission, but the Home Telephone Co. gave service all night. Trains and trolleys were delayed. An ice mountain is forming below the Falls.

Who's Seen This Bell Boy?

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—Isaac Laufer, a German, aged 18, short, with dark hair, a former bell boy at the American Hotel, is wanted here by the police on the charge of theft of a trunkful of clothes. It is known he left here on the nine o'clock train yesterday morning and bought a ticket for a town in Michigan.

SET TRAP FOR THUGS.

Aged Messenger Used as "Bait" In New York Nearly Killed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—A squad of detectives baited a trap for highwaymen Saturday with a sixty-year-old bank messenger and a satchel containing $3,300. The highwaymen took the bait. One detective was shot and may die; the messenger was beaten senseless and probably has a fractured skull, and a pitched battle, with bullets peppering houses like hail, was fought on the east side. One of the highwaymen escaped; the other was captured.

The messenger, Peter E. Plunkett, left the Union Exchange National Bank, where he had been employed for ten years, with his satchel in his hand and the detectives trailing him. Within the satchel were currency and silver for the weekly payrolls of two factories. The detectives were disguised as laborers to avert suspicion.

As Plunkett stepped into the darkened hallway of one of the factories, two men confronted him. One of them crumpled him up, senseless on the flagging, before he could cry out. The assailant used a blackjack. The other highwayman grabbed the satchel and both darted away.

The factory had not been apprised of the plan and detained one of the detectives, who had gone ahead of the messenger. While he was explaining, the highwaymen were making off. The detective started in pursuit, caught one of the assailants and rolled to the cobblestones with him.

Finally the man was captured, but the other got away leaving the money and a bullet-riddled coat.

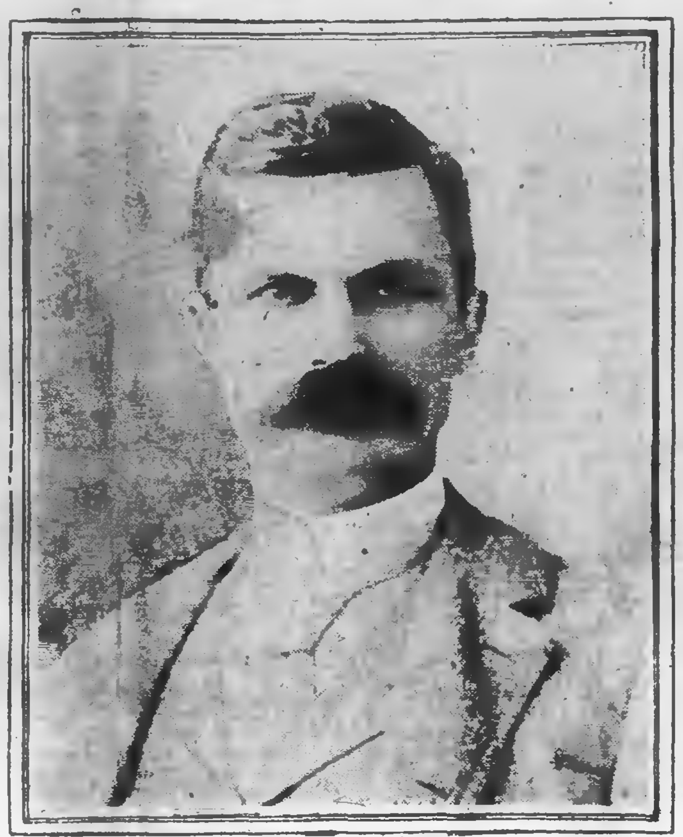
England and America to Discuss Rules to Safeguard Life at Sea



CHARLES NAGEL

Preparations are under way for the United States to participate in an international congress which, it is understood at Washington, Great Britain will [illegible] to meet in London for the consideration of rules to safeguard life at sea.

Mr. George Baker, of the British Board of Trade, is in Washington for a conference with Charles Nagel, Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and E. T. Chamberlain, Commissioner of Navigation, members of the Commerce Committee of the Senate, who have been conducting hearings on the Seamen's bill, and Representative Alexander, of Missouri, chairman of the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, and the author of a resolution for a maritime conference.

CHIGAGO WILL NOT BE ALLOWED TO DRAIN LAKES

U.S. Secretary of War Refuses the Windy City an Increase of Water From Lake Michigan on Grounds That it Would Spoil Many Harbors in U.S. and Canada.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Henry L. Stimson, U. S. Secretary of War, has denied the application of the sanitary district of Chicago to increase the amount of water drawn from Lake Michigan from 5,167 cubic feet per second, the amount now authorized, to 10,000 cubic feet. He thus states his conclusions:

"First. That the diversion of 10,000 cubic feet per second from Lake Michigan, as applied for in this petition, would substantially interfere with the navigable capacity of the navigable waters in the Great Lakes and their connecting rivers.

Second. That that being so, it would not be appropriate for me, without express Congressional sanction, to permit such a diversion, however clearly demanded by the local interests of the sanitation of Chicago.

"Third. That on the facts here presented no such case of local permanent necessity is made evident.

"Fourth. That the provisions of the Canadian treaty for a settlement by joint commission of "questions or matters of difference" between the United States and Canada offer a further reason why no administrative officer should authorize a further diversion of water, manifestly so injurious to Canada, against Canadian protest."

Dealing at length with the reasons that have influenced his decision the Secretary says:

"The United States has improved about 106 harbors and rivers on the Great Lakes affected by this diversion and has spent on such improvements over ninety millions of dollars. The Canadian Government has improved over 50 harbors on Georgian Bay and Lakes Huron, St. Clair, Erie and Ontario. By treaty, American vessels are accorded equal rights of navigation with Canadian vessels in all these waters, including the St. Lawrence River. The reduction of the water in these harbors and channels would diminish to just that extent the amount of these improvements, and would nulify to just that extent the effects of the moneys which have been appropriated for that purpose by the respective Governments. Connecting various portions of these waterways are the two canals at the Sault Ste. Marie, the Welland Canal, and a number of canals on the St. Lawrence River. The available depth of water over one or all sills of each of these canals would be affected, and in some cases reconstruction might even be made necessary.

"The International Waterways Commission reported that it would be a conservative estimate which would make the loss to the navigation interests resulting from a reduction of six inches in the depth of water as $1,500,000 per annum, or a sum which, capitalized at 4 per cent., would amount to a loss of $37,500,000. The lowest careful estimate of injury to American vessels alone is reported by the chief of engineers as $1,000,000 per year."

The decision against Chicago's contention will come as a relief to Canadian navigation interests. Some months ago strong representations were made on behalf of the Dominion Government and various municipalities. The general argument they advanced was that the proposed withdrawal of water would seriously lower the level of the great lakes and thus menace navigation in Canadian waters.

RATE CASE IS ADJOURNED

Further Evidence Will Be of Constructive Nature

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—Saturday's session of the western rate enquiry, was adjourned sine die to allow of the preparation of further material. It will resume again probably within six weeks, when the Government will further present its side of the case.

The evidence so far, as Chairman Drayton remarked, has been mainly of a destructive nature, but at the next session testimony of a more constructive kind, which will help to establish what would be fair rates for the western provinces, will probably be begun. Saturday's sessions were taken up with the examination of W. R. McInnes and W. B. Lanigan of the C.P.R.

Isaac Pitblado, representing the Winnipeg Board of Trade, questioned Mr. Lanigan closely in regard to the C.P.R.'s statement that the larger population and greater diversity of traffic in the east was an excuse for lower freight rates there.

Mr. Pitblado at the first of the session, examined Mr. McInnes in regard to the rates on agricultural implements. The carload rate in 1892 out of Brandon was lower than the present one—$34 as compared with $36, said Mr. Pitblado.

Mr. McInnes replied that cars were smaller then.

Speaking of some of the rates shown in the C.P.R. "series A" of rate reductions, Mr. Pitblado said that a lot of the rates shown were paper ones. The public was not concerned with paper rates, but rather those it really had to pay.

HASTINGS MAN DIES SUDDENLY

Hastings, Jan. 13.—The death occurred here yesterday of John Butler, aged 75. The deceased had attended church in the morning, and after church visited some friends of his. He had been in the house for only a short time, when he became ill, and expired in a few moments.

MISCARRIAGE OF JUDGMENT SAYS JUDGE OF VERDICT

Jury in Star Theatre Case Gives Verdict of Not Guilty.

TORONTO, Jan. 13.—Much to the surprise of Mr. Justice Middleton the jury in the Star Theatre case returned a verdict of "not guilty" against the defendants, Messrs. F. W. Stair and Daniel Pierce Saturday night. The judge severely scored the jury for what he called a miscarriage of the administration of justice. He declared that another jury of their type would not be found for a long time. Justice, in his opinion, had been brought into ill-repute by their finding, which follows:

"It is with exceeding great difficulty that we bring in a verdict of not guilty, but the jurors wish the citizens to know that they feel that the proprietors and those in charge of show houses cannot be too strongly censured for allowing such plays as this, suggesting anything that is immoral, indecent or obscene."

900 PASSENGERS TAKEN FROM STRANDED STEAMER

Mackenzie and Mann Liner Goes on a Reef Near Chebucto Head and Several Boats go to Rescue and Take Off Immigrant Passengers.

CAUSE OF ACCIDENT A MYSTERY

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 13.—From the stranded steamship Uranium, 880 passengers were taken off at Chebucto Head, at the entrance to Halifax Harbor, and reached here in safety. No lives were lost, but Captain Eustace and his crew are still aboard the ship, which hangs by her bows on a reef, the captain hoping to get off at low water. The escape of a ship from such a predicament is generally at high water, but the captain evidently thinks that the afterpart of the ship in deep water will drag the forward part off at low.

The Uranium struck at 11 o'clock yesterday morning in thick weather. She crashed on the ledge a quarter of a mile north of Chebucto Headlight and Fog Station. How the captain got out of his course in this way is a mystery. He was manoeuvring for a pilot at the time.

Word was at once sent to Halifax for assistance, but there was some delay, and it was two o'clock before the Government steamer Lady Laurier, the Bridgewater and other craft went down to the wreck.

The stranded ship struck bow on whenthe tide was half high, and in the middle of the afternoon her bow was six feet out of water, with seven fathoms amidships and seventeen fathoms at the stern. It is nine miles below Halifax where the ship went ashore, and the only communication was from the telephone in the light-keeper's house at Chebucto Head.

The work of transferring the Uranium's passengers to the Lady Laurier was begun at once. Three boats from the life-saving stations in the vicinity were on hand, each with a capacity of 50 persons. There were also the lifeboats on the Uranium. The number of passengers on board was 880, of whom 640 were for New York and 240 for Halifax, of these 100 being cabin and the remainder steerage.

The Lady Laurier took the women and children first and the men were transferred to the Bridgewater. The wind was heavy from the southwest and the Uranium was therefore protected by Chebucto Head. Had the wind been in the opposite direction the ship would have been fully exposed to the sweep of the Atlantic and must have broken up almost at once. She will be in peril should the wind change.

The wrecking steamers are still standing by. The nationality of the people on board was Russian, German and Austrian. The Uranium has 500 tons of cargo for New York and 200 tons for Halifax. She is the property of Mackenzie and Mann.

PACKING HOUSE BURNED IN CALGARY'S WORST FIRE

Dynamiter on Bail.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 13.—Sufficient bonds to release on bail Charles N. Beum, now in the federal prison at Leavenworth in connection with the dynamite conspiracy, were furnished by Minneapolis freeholders here Saturday in the federal court before Assistant U. S. District Attorney Dickey and Judge Willard who will certify the bond to the U. S. Court of Appeals. A number of business men joined the bond.

CONVICTED IN ERROR ?

Man in Kingston Says He Can Free Fellow Prisoner

KINGSTON, Jan. 13.—A man name Fairbairn, who is in the penitentiary serving a term for safe-blowing just outside London, Ont., declares that he is innocent. Another man named Murray was arrested on the same charge and who is also in the penitentiary. At the time the case was heard in London, Fairbairn strongly denied the charge and steps were taken by his counsel to get him a new trial. This has been granted and Fairbairn has now every hope of securing his freedom. It was stated here Saturday that Murray, who admits blowing up the safe, declares that Fairbairn had nothing whatever to do with the matter, and that, if given a chance, he will go into the witness box and swear that Fairbairn is innocent, but that he himself did the job.

TWO KILLED

Other Passengers Injured in Railway Wreck

Canadian Press Despatch.

Birmingham, Eng., Jan. 13— Two passengers were killed and forty were injured, many seriously, in a collision on the Midland Railway to-day, by express and accommodation trains at Bromeford Bridge, near here.

Loss May go Over $2,000,000—Fires in Saskatoon and Edmonton.

CALGARY, Alta., Jan 13.—The most disastrous fire in the history of Western Canada occurred yesterday when the large packing plant of P. Burns & Co. was totally destroyed. The loss, including carcases in cold storage, will probably be in excess of $2,000,000. On account of the low water pressure, the fire department was unable to do effective work and to-day the fire was still burning.

The loss is serious in that the local plant was the largest institution of its kind in the west, from which all of the western cities, including Vancouver and Victoria and the coast cities, draw largely for their meat supply and butchering in the open may have to be resorted to in order to prevent a meat famine. The storage plant contained from 15,000 to 20,000 carcases.

The fire was discovered about 12.30 o'clock Sunday morning. The whole of the basement was in flames, and the packing plant department, augmented by all of the city fire departments, were unable to make any headway against the flames. This was due in a measure to the low water pressure and also to the ammonia fumes in the basement, which were so strong that the men could not endure them. Repeatedly the firemen entered the basement, only to be driven back by the overpowering ammonia fumes. In a short time the fire had gotten into the grease soaked floors of the upper storeys and when this occurred the water had no effect whatever.

Several firemen had narrow escapes from exploding ammonia tanks, but no one was seriously injured. The fire raged furiously all day and to-day little remains of the magnificent plant but charred ruins.

The Burns' plant was a local institution with a history. It had its start when P. Burns, then a very young man, came to Calgary, about twenty years ago. It is related that his sole capital was one lone beef steer. The growth of his plant has kept pace with the development of this section, and has made its owner one of the richest men in the west, his wealth being reputed to be in the neighborhood of $15,000,000.

The property destroyed was fully insured, the insurance of the stock in storage being in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

Fire at Saskatoon.

SASKATOON, Jan. 13.—Fire yesterday morning completely gutted the building of the Western Foundry & Machine Co. here. Many valuable patterns were destroyed, and the total loss on plant and buildings will total about $25,000, which is partially covered by insurance.

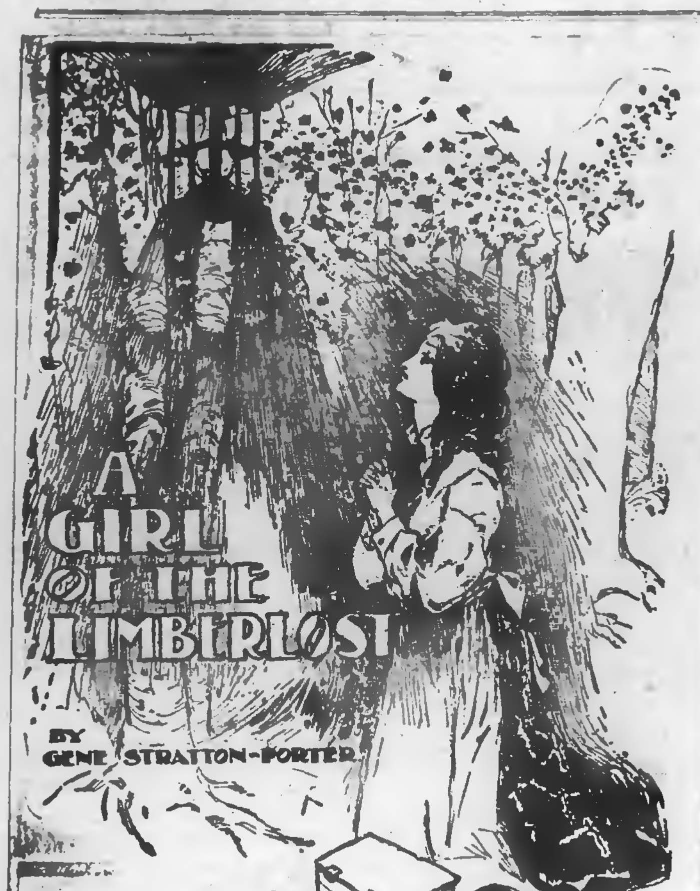
Edmonton Also Visited.

EDMONTON, Alta., Jan. 13.—With the thermometer far below zero fire broke out Saturday afternoon, in Reed's Bazaar, a two-storey wooden structure. Owing to a breakdown in the power plant the city was without water for nearly an hour, and it looked for a time as if all the buildings in the vicinity were doomed.

HOTEL STABLES ARE BURNED

Special Correspondence,

Belleville, Jan. 13— Late Sunday night the stables in connection with the Anglo-American Hotel were burned. The horses were rescued but vehicles, harness, feed etc., were destroyed. The loss of five thousand dollars is practically covered by insurance.



Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Company.

When Elnora looked in the glass the bow was perfectly tied, and how the gold tone of the brown did match the luster of the shining hair! Just then Wesley Sinton came to the door.

"Good morning," he cried heartily. "Elnora, you look a picture. My, but you're sweet. If any of them city boys get sassy you tell your Uncle Wesley and he'll horsewhip them. Here's your Christmas present from me." He handed Elnora the leather lunch box, with her name carved across the strap in artistic lettering.

"Oh, Uncle Wesley!" and that was all Elnora could say.

"Your Aunt Maggie filled it for me for a starter," he said. "Now, if you are ready I'm going to drive past your way and you can ride almost to Onabasha with me and save the new shoes that much."

Elnora slipped the strap and turned back the lid. This disclosed the knife, fork, napkins and spoon, the milk flask and the interior packed with dainty sandwiches wrapped in tissue paper, and the little compartments for meat, salad and the custard cup.

"Oh, mother!" cried Elnora. "Oh, mother, isn't it fine? What made you think of it, Uncle Wesley? How will I ever thank you? No one will have a finer lunch box than I. Oh, I do thank you. That's the nicest gift I ever had. How I love Christmas in September."

"It's a mighty handy thing," assented Mrs. Comstock, taking in every detail with sharp eyes. "I guess you are glad now you went and helped Mag and Wesley when you could, Elnora?"

"Deedy, yes," laughed Elnora, "and I'm going again first time they have a big day if I stay out of school to do it."

"You'll do no such thing," said the delighted Sinton. "Come now, if you're going!"

"If I ride can you spare me time to run into the swamp to my box just a minute?" asked Elnora.

The light she had seen the previous night troubled her.

"Sure," said Wesley largely. He was having such a good time nothing could hurry him. So they drove away and left a white faced woman watching them from the door, her heart just a little sorer than usual.

"I'd give a pretty to hear what he'll say to her," she said bitterly. "Always sticking in, always doing things I can't ever afford. Where on earth did he get that thing and what did it cost?"

CHAPTER VII.

Wherein Elnora Receives a Warning and Billy Appears on the Scene.

THEN Mrs. Comstock entered the cabin and began the day's work, but mingled with the brooding bitterness of her soul was the vision of a sweet young face, glad with a gladness never before seen on it, and over and over she repeated, "I wonder what he'll say to her?"

What he said was that she looked as fresh and sweet as a posy and to be careful not to step in the mud or scratch her shoe when she went to the case.

Elnora found her key and opened the door. Not where she had placed it, but conspicuously in front lay her little heap of bills and a crude scrawl of writing beside it. Elnora picked up the note in astonishment.

dere Elnory, the lord amighty is hiding you all right done you ever dout it this money of yourn was took for some time las nite but it is returned with intres for god sake done ever come to the swamp at nite or late evnin or mornin or far in any time sompin worse an you know could git you A FREND.

Elnora began to tremble. She hastily glanced about. The damp earth before the case had been trodden by large, roughly shod feet. She caught up the money and the note, thrust them into her guimpe, locked the case and ran for the road.

She was so breathless and her face so white Sinton noticed it.

"What in the world's the matter, Elnora?" he asked as he helped her into the carriage.

"I am half afraid," she panted.

"Tut, tut, child!" said Wesley Sinton. "Nothing in the world to be afraid of. What happened?"

"Uncle Wesley," said Elnora, "I had more money than I brought home last night, and I put it in my case. Some one has been there. The ground is all trampled, and they left this note."

"And took your money, I'll wager," said Sinton angrily.

"No," answered Elnora. "Read the note and, oh, Uncle Wesley, tell me what it means!"

Sinton's face was a study. "I don't know what it means," he said. "Only one thing is clear. It means some beast who doesn't really want to harm you has got his eye on you and he is telling you plain as he can not to give him a chance. You got to keep along the roads, in the open, and not let the biggest moth that ever flew toll you out of hearing of us or your mother. It means that, plain and distinct."

"Just when I can sell them; just when everything is so lovely on account of them, I can't—I can't stay away from the swamp. The Limberlost is going to buy the books, the clothes, pay the tuition and even start a college fund. I just can't."

"You've got to," said Sinton. "This is plain enough. You go far in the swamp at your own risk, even in daytime."

"Uncle Wesley," said the girl in a whisper, "last night before I went to bed I was so happy I tried to pray, and I thanked God for hiding me 'under the shadow of his wing.' But how in the world could any one know it?"

Wesley Sinton's heart gave one great leap in his breast. His face was whiter than the girl's now.

"Was you praying out loud, honey?" he almost whispered.

"I might have said words," answered Elnora. "I know I do sometimes. I've never had any one to talk to, and I've played with and talked to myself all my life. You've caught me at it often, but it always makes mother angry when she does. She says it's silly. I forget and do it when I'm alone. But, Uncle Wesley, if I said anything last night you know it was the merest whisper, because I'd have been so afraid of waking mother. Don't you see? I sat up late and did two lessons."

Sinton was steadying himself. "I'll stop and examine the case as I come back," he said. "Maybe I can find some clew. That other—that was just accidental. It's a common expression. All the preachers use it. If I was going to pray that would be the very first thing I'd say."

The color came back to Elnora's face.

"Did you tell your mother about this money, Elnora?" he asked.

"No, I didn't," said Elnora. "It's dreadful not to, but I was afraid. You see, they are clearing the swamp so fast. Every year it grows harder to find things, and Indian stuff gets scarcer. I want to graduate, and that's four years unless I can double on the course. That means $20 tuition each year and new books and clothes. There won't ever be so much at one time again—that I know. I just got to hang to my money. I was afraid to tell her for fear she would want it for taxes, and she really must sell a tree or some cattle for that, mustn't she, Uncle Wesley?"

"On your life, she must!" said Wesley. "You put your little wad in the bank all safe and never mention it to a living soul. It don't seem right, but your case is peculiar. Every word you say is a true word. Each year you will get less from the swamp, and things everywhere will be scarcer. If you ever get a few dollars ahead, that can start your college fund. You know you are going to college, Elnora!"

"Of course I am," said Elnora.

She jumped from the carriage and soon found that with her books, her lunch box and the box of arrow points she had a heavy load. She was almost to the bridge crossing the culvert when she heard the distressed screams of a child. Across an orchard of the suburbs came a small boy, after him a big dog, urged by a man in the background. Elnora's heart was with the small flying figure in any event whatever. She dropped her load on the bridge and with practiced hand caught up a stone and flung it at the dog. The beast curled double with a howl. The boy reached the fence, and Elnora was there to help him over. As he touched the top she swung him to the ground, but he clung to her, clasping her tightly, sobbing and shivering with fear. Elnora carried him to the bridge and sat with him in her arms. For a time his replies to her questions were indistinct, but at last he became quieter and she could understand.

He was a mite of a boy, nothing but skin covered bones, his burned, freckled face in a mortar of tears and dust, his clothing unspeakably dirty, one great toe in a festering mass from a broken nail and sores all over the visible portions of the small body.

"You wouldn't set a dog on a boy for just taking a few old apples when you fed 'em to pigs with a shovel every day, would you?" he said.

"No, I would not," said Elnora hotly.

"You'd give a boy all the apples he wanted if he hadn't any breakfast and was so hungry he was all twisty inside, wouldn't you?"

"Yes, I would," said Elnora.

"If you had anything to eat you would give me something right now, wouldn't you?"

"Yes," said Elnora. "There's nothing but just stones in the package. But my dinner is in that case. I'll gladly divide."

She opened the box. The famished child gave a little cry and reached both hands. Elnora caught them back.

"Did you have any supper?"

"No."

"Any dinner yesterday?"

"An apple and some grapes I stole."

"Whose boy are you?"

"Old Tom Billings'."

"Why don't your father get you something to eat?"

"He does most days, but he's drunk now."

"Hush! You must not!" said Elnora. "He's your father."

"He's spent all the money to get drunk, too," said the boy, "and Jimmy and Belle are both crying for breakfast. I'd 'a' got out all right with an apple for myself, but I tried to get some for them, and the dog got too close. Say, you can just throw, can't you?"

"Yes," admitted Elnora. She poured half the milk into the cup. "Drink this," she said, holding it to him.

The boy gulped the milk and swore joyously, gripping the cup with shaking fingers.

"Hush!" cried Elnora. "That's dreadful!"

"What's dreadful?"

"To say such awful words."

"Huh, pa says worser 'an that every breath he draws."

Elnora stared into the quaint little face and saw that the child was older than she had thought. He might have been forty by his hard, unchildish expression.

"Do you want to be like your father?"

"No; I want to be like you. Couldn't a angel be prettier 'an you! Can I have more milk?"

Elnora emptied the flask. The boy drained the cup. He drew a breath of satisfaction as he gazed into her face.

"You wouldn't go off and leave your little boy, would you?" he asked.

"Did some one go away and leave you?" questioned Elnora in return.

"Yes; my mother went off and left me and left Jimmy and Belle, too," said the boy. "You wouldn't leave your little boy, would you?"

"No."

The boy looked eagerly at the box. Elnora lifted a sandwich and uncovered the fried chicken. The boy gasped with delight.

"Say, I could eat the stuff in the glass and the other box and carry the bread and the chicken to Jimmy and Belle," he offered.

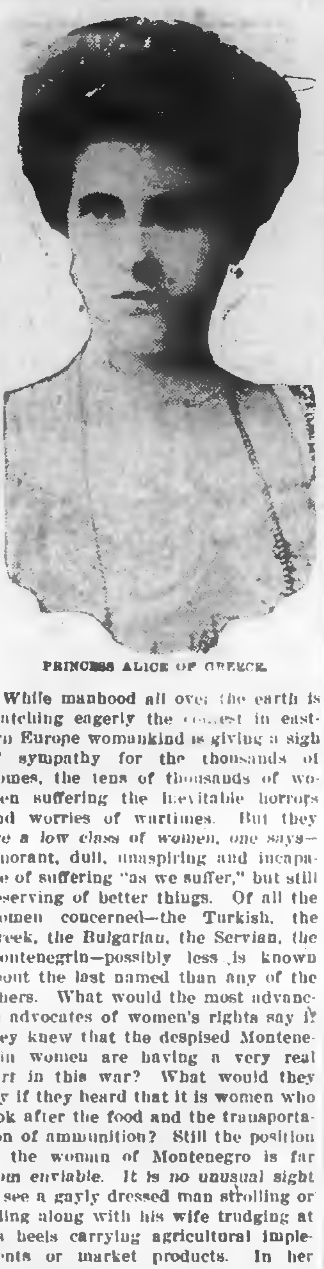
NERVILINE CURES ALL PAIN

Woman's World

Women of the Balkan Countries Now at War.



PRINCESS ALICE OF GREECE.

While manhood all over the earth is watching eagerly the contest in eastern Europe womankind is giving a sigh of sympathy for the thousands of homes, the tens of thousands of women suffering the inevitable horrors and worries of wartimes. But they are a low class of women, one says—ignorant, dull, unaspiring and incapable of suffering "as we suffer," but still deserving of better things. Of all the women concerned—the Turkish, the Greek, the Bulgarian, the Servian, the Montenegrin—possibly less is known about the last named than any of the others. What would the most advanced advocates of women's rights say if they knew that the despised Montenegrin women are having a very real part in this war? What would they say if they heard that it is women who look after the food and the transportation of ammunition? Still the position of the woman of Montenegro is far from enviable. It is no unusual sight to see a gayly dressed man strolling or riding along with his wife trudging at his heels carrying agricultural implements or market products. In her home she is not allowed to sit at table with her lord and she may not remain seated if any man, even a stranger, passes by. Thanks to King Nicholas, the first champion of womanhood in authority in Montenegro, much of this abuse is being abolished.

In Bulgaria a different atmosphere is felt. The general run of women are better educated and keep in touch with the advancement of their sex in other countries. They are even interested in the suffrage question and came very near to winning the vote a few years ago. The Bulgarian women make faithful wives and are busy in the home and in the fields and have a love of elaborate ceremonials, the wedding ceremony holding an important place in their festivals. In the country districts the women still cling to the old beliefs in witches and other evil powers.

Servia is primarily an agricultural country, and the typical Servian is a peasant proprietor. The country has often been referred to "as the poor man's paradise," and certainly there is no real poverty within its borders in times of peace, but for all that the lives of the women are hard ones. They work side by side with the men in the fields and are held inferior to the lords of creation. Even among the better class there are few luxuries.

By far the most intelligent peoples of that section of Europe are the Greeks, yet in many parts of Greece the lot of the women is as bad as that of the lowest elsewhere, and in no other of these countries is the contrast of advanced civilization and tradition between education and ignorance so sharply drawn. The Athenian women follow Paris modes in their dress, live broad lives, pursue philanthropic ideals and take part in political problems. But the peasant woman in some of the provinces lives the life of a thousand years ago—keep animals in the house and are barred from the talk of men. Greek life is said to be neither oriental nor European: it smacks of both.

Volumes have been written about the woman of Turkey. Her strange life in the harem is better known and at the same time less known than that of any of her Christianized neighbors. The legal position of the Turkish woman is more favorable than that of any other European country and far better than that of the women in some of our states. The Turkish woman may plead her own cause in any court of law. If she earns money her husband has no right to touch it. Her husband may not even inquire as to how she spends her household money, and a certain sum he is bound to supply. The very strength of her legal position does more to limit the ordinary Turk to one wife than all the preaching in the world against plural marriage.

Two Greek princesses, Princess Alice, wife of Prince Andrew, fourth son of the king, and Princess Helena, the daughter of the crown prince, are at the front in the Balkan war, patiently caring for the wounded soldiers and enduring much suffering themselves as a result. Each has a hospital staff.

THE GILA MONSTER.

Repulsive In Looks, It Is Really a Harmless Creature.

Probably there is no other living creature more feared by the ignorant than the Gila monster, about which all manner of weird tales have been told. It has even been held that the mere breath of this animal is sufficient to cause death to the one upon whom it fell. Scientific inquiry, however, fails to disclose a single instance wherein the breath or even the bite of this creature has resulted fatally. The fact that dissection and microscopic examination do not reveal any trace of glands for the secretion of venom is sufficient evidence to indicate that this curious member of the lizard family has been slandered.

Some years ago a civil engineer in the southwest undertook to settle once for all the question whether "the monster" was deadly or not. A fine specimen was captured and confined in a wire inclosure. A chicken was obtained, and its feathers were removed in order that the lizard might have every opportunity to strike at the breast. The chicken was then held quite close to the Gila monster, which soon snapped viciously and secured a firm hold on the fowl's breast, retaining this grip for more than ten minutes. When the victim was released it was found that the chicken's breastbone had been broken. Nevertheless the fowl quickly recovered, the bone knitting and the wound healing with no symptoms of poisoning.

It is very probable that the reputation for evil borne by the Gila monster is due simply and solely to its most repulsive appearance.—Harper's Weekly.

THE UBIQUITOUS SEA LION.

He Strayed a Long Way From Home Before He Was Killed.

The following story is taken from the American Magazine:

"Sunday is a dull day, and the city editors had a habit of detailing men to go to the zoological gardens and get animal stories for Monday morning. The reporters got together one Sunday morning and persuaded the head animal keeper to let them publish a fake story. It was rather commonplace, concerning the alleged escape of a nonexistent sea lion from the pool to open water.

"'Fake,' said the managing editor as he read the story. 'Let's make it a good one.'

"Thereupon he sent telegrams to every country correspondent on that water or its tributaries, merely inquiring if anything had been seen of the escaped sea lion. The response was appalling. The correspondents needed only the hint. That day the sea lion was seen by at least twenty correspondents, and Berghand printed all the reports one after another. Thus spurred, the correspondents went to it in earnest. The following day the sea lion was reported at every point within 200 miles. The story spread like ripples on water. In five days the lion was sighted over half the world, and an enthusiast at Southampton cabled that he was heading toward the north sea. Then a cruel correspondent up on Lake Superior killed him and wired that he was sending the skin as proof. I always suspected that the managing editor did it himself."

A Fine Sense of Feeling.

One of two darkies who run a bootblack "parlor" in partnership was bragging of his well developed sense of touch, particularly in the matter of money. He boasted that he could tell the denomination of any United States coin merely by feeling it. His partner wearied of these boasts and came back with this:

"Your sense o' feelin' ain't nothin' to my friend Marcus. Him and me used to work on the Pullman down through Kansas. Marcus had been on this route for about ten years. One night when we was both a-sleepin', 'long around midnight, I wakes up and I shakes Marcus and I says, 'Marcus, where are we?' And Marcus jest rolls over and sticks his hand out the window and he says, 'We're goin' through Oswego.'"—Everybody's.

Writing on a Pillow.

Every one who has had occasion to write while riding in a railway train will be interested in the fact that the disagreeable effects of the jarring of the carriage are greatly mitigated by writing on a pillow. The pillow may be either held on the lap or placed on a table. The pad of paper and the arm which guides the pen or pencil should both rest on the pillow.

In this manner it will be found possible to write legibly and with comfort in a train flying at full speed.—London Answers.

The Music Teacher

He Could Not See Through a Millstone.

By HELEN CHAMBLISS

When my notary, Maitre Du Four, informed me zat ze court have decide zat my property, my chateau, my horses, my carriages, everyt'ing zat have come down to me from my ancestors, ze Counts de Souvenue, must go to pay my debts, I say: Ver' well, I go to Amerique, where I feel not noblesse oblige, for ze Americans have no nobles in zair country. I take with me my violin I love so well, and I play in ze concert or maybe in ze orchestra, and if necessaire my daughter, Elise, she teach ze dance.

I feel ver' much disappoint on account of Elise, for I had arranged a marriage for her with ze son of my friend, ze Marquis of Bradalaine. But now I must say zat I have no settlement to make for her, of course ze marquis decline ze match for his son. Elise, who no like ze young man, prefer to go to Amerique even if she have to teach ze dance instead to be fine lady, which she have always been.

So we come to Amerique and we live in appartements, and I have a sign in ze window, 'M. Souvenne, instructeur for ze violin.' My daughter she encourage her old fader and she mak' fren' who get pupils for me, and I mak' enough to pay ze rent and for to eat, but nothing for clothes. But Elise, she have some fine clothes, which belong to ze famille for hundreds of years, which she mak' over in ze new modes. She would teach ze dance, but we have no money to pay for ze room for ze school.

One day zere come a ring at ze bell of my appartement and I open ze door. A very fine young gentleman stan' zere an' he say to me:

"Monsieur, can you direct me to ze appartement of"—

He stop short. He look past me and see Elise sitting by ze window dressed in ze costume of one of her grandmeres, while she change ze costume of anudder grandmere to ze mode a present.

"I LOOK UP AT HIM FOR APPLAUSE."

"What appartement for which you look, monsieur," I ask—"for ze appartement of M. Souvenne?"

He act like he awake from ze dream. He turn his eyes from Elise to me and say nothing.

"If you look for M. Souvenne, instructeur of musique, I am at your service."

"Ah, monsieur, you give lessons in musique? On what instrument?"

"Ze violin."

"I wish for to tak' some lessons. Will you be my instructeur, monsieur?"

"Entre, monsieur, if you please." I said, and ze gentleman arranged with me for to give him ze lessons on ze violin. All ze time he talk he keep his eyes on my daughter and forgot to ask ze price of ze lessons. I tell him I like to get $2 a lesson, but I t'ink he not hear me. I ask him when he like to begin, and he hear zat, and say, "Oh, yes, monsieur, I like to begin now."

"But you have no violin here," I say.

"Can you not lend me a violin for ze lesson" he ask. "Ze next time I bring one."

I let him tak' my violin and ask him how much he know already. He say he know ze notes, and he play a few pieces. I tell him to play one of ze pieces he know, and he commence to play. I put my hands to my ears and cry out:

"Oh, monsieur, you drive me crazy with your discords! You must begin at ze beginning."

I put before him ze musique for practice, and he play so bad zat I dispair to teach him. Zen he ask me to play some fine musique, and I select some t'ing of Gounod. My pupil, he listen much pleased with my playing, and when I finish he seem moved to tears. I felt ver' fine at zat. He ask me to play more pieces and I do so. When I finish a sonata of Beethoven I look up at him for applause and see him still look at Elise, who sew by ze window. I ask him what I play, and he say:

"Monsieur, I t'ink you play ze waltz."

"Mon Dieu," I exclaimed; "you call ze finest musique in ze worl' ze waltz! Zat is a sonata of le grand Beethoven."

"Pardon," he say; "I know very little about ze grand masters. But I will depart now. I come tomorrow for anudder lesson. I pay you for zis one."

He tak' much monie from his portemonnaie and hand me a ten dollar bill.

"My fee is two dollar, monsieur. I have no change."

"You give me lesson, monsieur, and you play for me exquisite musique. I pay for ze lesson two dollar. Ze rest is for ze pleasure I derive from ze musique."

"Ze musique! When I play from Beethoven you t'ink I play ze waltz."

Ze gentleman turn red in ze face, and he smile with embarrassment, and he go away. When I go to close ze door for him he look over my shoulder at Elise.

"What a pupil!" I exclaim after he had gone. "He is a ver' bad musician, but ver' fine pay."

Ze gentleman—M. Jones was his name—came regular for to take ze lesson, and every day Elise sit by ze window to sew, for M. Jones say, "If I drive you to anudder room when I come I no tak' ze lesson." So Elise sit quiet, while my pupil he mak' frightful discords on ze violin.

At last I have to tell him zat he waste his money on ze lessons; he nevaire learn to play ze violin; he ver' much disappoint.

"Ah, monsieur," he said, "I hoped you teach me to play like my friend, M. Trevor!"

"M. Trevor! I have heard zat M. Trevor is ze finest amateur player on ze violin in Amerique. What a pity he is rich. If he had been poor he would have made a great name for himself as musician."

"You are ver' frank with me," said M. Jones. "I will repay you for your honesty. I know M. Trevor ver' well. He is a good frien' to me. I ask him to give benefit concert for you."

I mak' much protestation, but it avail notting. He go away and the next week I see in ze newspapairs advertisement of a concert to be given by M. Trevor for ze benefit of M. Souvenne, assisted by several professional persons. I was ver' much surprise. I ask Elise what she t'ink ze raison all zis kindness and she say she don' know.

"Maybe," I said, "it is because M. Jones was ver' much pleased with my performance on ze violin. But if this is so why he not ask me to play at my own benefit, I like to know."

"I don't think, papa," she said, "zat it would be en regle for you to do so. I mean I t'ink M. Jones would suppose you to be too modest."

An' I t'ink zat it would not become ze Count de Souvenne to appear in publique at such an occasion. It ver' much shock ze pride.

On ze evening of ze concert M. Jones send ze carriage for me and Elise to tak' us to ze hall. We feel ver' obliged, and we ride to ze hall and go in and tak' seats by ourselves at ze back, for all ze seats in front were filled up. But an usher came to us and led us to seats in ze front zat had been reserved for us.

Ze concert was opened by a lady who sang. After which a ver' fine solo on ze flute was given. I look at ze program and see zat M. Trevor play but one tune. I wonder zat ze people came to hear him play but once. He must be ver' fine performer. At last his turn came and—

Mon Dieu! My pupil, M. Jones, in evening dress, came on to ze platform with his violin under his arm.

"Ma foi!" I exclaimed, "he will spoil it all. What impudence!"

Elise could not hear me for ze applause zat greeted him. He stood while a prelude was played by those who were to accompany him, I waiting in agony to hear him begin his discords abominable. But when he touched the string with his bow, ver' low in tone but crescendo, it seemed as if ze angel were beginning to speak to ze audience. One could have heard somet'ing ver' small drop on ze floor. Ze listeners sat in ze spell. Ze selection was ze "Stabat Mater." Zere were crescendo and deminuendo, ze one following ze other, and when it was finish I wish to shed tears.

"Elise!" I exclaimed. "A miracle! A saint have touched M. Jones and made a wonderful musician of him."

"He isn't M. Jones at all, papa. He is M. Trevor," my daughter say.

"What is zat?" I ask.

"I will tell you all about it, papa, when we get home."

Before Elise and I were allowed to go ze managaire came and handed me ze money in a bag. When I count him I find $753.

But I must tell what Elise told me it was M. Trevor and not M. Jones who come to our appartements to look for some one. When I open ze door he see Elise and zat was ze reason why he tak' ze musique lesson as M. Jones.

I t'ink he not listen to me play because he liked to look better at Elise. And he pretend to not know how to play himself. I t'ink, too, as ze Americaines say, it was all a "put up job." And I t'ink, too, zat before M. Jones tak' many lessons Elise conspire with him to fool her old fadder.

Some time after ze benefit M. Trevor came to me and said:

"Count de Souvenne, I desire zat you do me ze great honor to give me your daughter in marriage."

"Mon Dieu, how you know I am Count de Souvenne?"

"When I saw your beautiful daughter arrayed in the costume of a countess of years ago I suspected you were emigres from abroad in reduced circumstances, but I did not know until I had asked your daughter to be my wife that you were a French noble."

Elise is now Mme. Trevor. Her husband has bought the Chateau de Souvenne, and the young couple permit the old man to live there with them. It has never been possible for the old man to entirely forgive his son-in-law for not inviting him to play at his own benefit.

ELIZA WAS GENEROUS.

Her Munificent Offer For an Original Five Act Tragedy.

People are likely to look back commiseratingly upon the past in these days of modern progress. When we hear what the most prolific of present day novelists receives a word and what the weekly royalties of any well known playwrights are we say that the literary profession has come into its own. Some hark back to the contrasting tale—that Milton received only £5 for the first copyright of "Paradise Lost," an epic in twelve books containing a total of 10,565 lines, but that was over two centuries ago. Poe received $10 for "The Raven." That may be dismissed with the statement that poetry never paid.

The modern way of making money by literature is even more recent than is generally thought. Alexander Hill of Cincinnati, one of the best known bookmen and collectors of the middle west, has a letter in his collection of autographs that proves this point.

Two generations ago Eliza Logan was a leading actress in America. Read her letter, O budding genius on the typewriter, and be glad that when you are paid it is space rates for the local paper:

> Tremont House, Boston, May 17, 1854.
> E. Dusseault, Jr., Charlestown, Mass.
> Sir—I wish an original five act tragedy—the feature to be a heroine, myself the personator of it; the scene not to be laid in this country; the plot to be optional with the author—for which, if I like it, I will pay $5. Respectfully,
> ELIZA LOGAN.

Uncle Joe's Objection.

Uncle Joe Cannon, seated on the piazza of a seaside hotel, condemned a certain improvident type of social reformer.

"They're great borrowers," he said, "these chaps who are going to make the world over again."

With a chuckle he added:

For the Children

Coasting Jolliest of the Sports of Winter.

When old King Boreas of the north, assisted by his chief lieutenant, Jack Frost, gets busy there is much fun in store for the young folks. Borne on the icy breath of the northern monarch come the snows that furnish so much sport for boys and girls. Then mufflers and mittens come into fashion, and from the cellar and garret are brought forth the sleds and skates that for many months have been rusting and neglected since last used. Soon the hillsides will be merry with the joyful throngs that find enjoyment in coursing swiftly as they wind down glassy slopes. What matters it that one must walk up again after every dashing slide? Roses glow in rounded cheeks, and sparkling eyes rival diamonds in their brilliancy. Forgotten are the swimming holes and picnics of summer days. Each season brings special pleasures for the young people, but none is more appreciated than that provided by old King Boreas.

Ants That Cook.

The remarkable habits of the harvester ant have long been known to naturalists. Certain species not only harvest and store in granaries the seeds upon which they feed, but actually plant and cultivate an annual crop of their food seeds.

But now a still more wonderful tale is told of an ant which is common in Dalmatia, Messor barbarus. According to Professor Neger, of the well known forestry school near Dresden, this ant not only cuts leaves and gathers seeds, but actually makes bread or biscuit.

The seeds are first sprouted, then carried into the sun and dried, then taken back to the underground chambers, where they are chewed into a dough. The dough is then finally made into tiny cakes, which are baked in the sun, then carefully stored for future use.

All cooking is done by the sun, whether in the ripening of fruit or in the baking of bread in a stove. The heat obtained from fuel is simply stored up sunlight set free.

The Arab and the native Mexican speak of ripe fruit as fruit which has been cooked in the sun. The ant has somehow learned the art of sun cookery.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Game of Slaps.

Slaps is a round game in which no skill is required.

Only a piece of rope is needed, and this is tied together to form a circle. Every one stands round in a ring holding on to the rope which keeps them together. Mark well, they hold the rope, not each other's hand. One person goes into the center and tries to slap one of those many hands thrust so invitingly forward.

Of course no one of the circle desires this attention, and by withdrawing quickly the chastiser finds the rope has received his slap. When he succeeds in getting one home his object is attained, and the slapper changes places with the slapped. The fun is fast and furious, and the slaps do not really hurt.

Setback For John.

"Teacher," asked John, "why am I like a fact?"

"Because you are a stubborn thing," answered his teacher. And [illegible] like her answer one bit. He thought she'd say, "Because you are true."

Pussy's Wheels.

I wonder what you're thinking of, my darling little cat.
It may be meat, it may be cream, that makes you nice and fat;
It may be all the fun you have in barn
loft warm and dry;
It may be mice you try to catch as by their hole you lie.

Perhaps you think of trees to climb, with birds that sing up there.
They always get away from you, although you creep with care.
Perhaps you think of warm, green grass and basking in the sun
Or of your ball that slides so fast as after it you run.

I hope you think of me sometimes, because I love you well.
I hope you love me back again, although you cannot tell.
And how I know you're thinking (it's a secret that I've found)
Is 'cause I hear close to my ear your thought wheels going round.

STRANGE TRADES.

Unusual Things That Are Manufactured In Birmingham.

For years it has been the proud boast of the Midland city that anything you may want, from a pin to a steam engine, it is capable of supplying. And it is extremely doubtful if there is another city in the world in which so many out-of-the-way trades are followed as in Birmingham. For example, it is not generally known that Birmingham is the principal source of the world's supply of Jews-harps, and for the last sixty years the trade has been carried on in the neighborhood of Ashted Row, a venerable quarter of the city, by the members of a certain family named Troman.

Another survival is the trade of gold-beating, which it is claimed is one of the oldest in the city. The work is done entirely by hand, and the customary sign to the outside public of the existence of the shop is the picture of a gilded arm bearing a hammer poised for a blow.

The leaf is hammered out in small home workshops from twenty-four carat gold, costing $22.50 per ounce. There are not many goldbeaters now left in Birmingham, but a generation ago there were many factories, the largest of which employed 300 hands.

The city has probably a larger share than any other centre in the equipment of policemen. In regard to police whistles it is known that one Birmingham firm just outside the jewelry quarter have equipped more police forces in all parts of the world than any other firm. Great quantities, says The Times, are sent to the United States, as well as to South America, India, Canada, and the colonies.

Handcuffs, manacles, and other instruments of detention have for many years been a speciality of Birmingham manufacture, and are made within a stone's throw of the central police courts.

The manufacture of artificial eyes is distinctly a Birmingham industry, and it has been brought to great perfection. A stock of 5,000 eyes is regularly kept by the most important firm in the industry. One family has been engaged in this art for generations. Eyes are sent to all parts of the world, and British hospitals are especially good customers. Generally a patient can be equipped for about a couple of guineas.

An enormous business, too, is done in human hair, and one firm alone imports annually many thousands of pounds' worth of hair from France, Spain, Germany, Russia, Brittany, and China, a considerable trade being done in the importation of Chinese hair for the manufacture of watch chains and bracelets.

Nurse Took Care of Him.

Conan Doyle and Bernard Shaw were among the speakers at a big meeting of Protestant home rulers in London recently.

Bernard Shaw, in his speech, which was mainly an argument for the cessation of petty religious strife in order that Ireland might proceed with social reform, introduced the following story of his childhood: "My father," he said, "was an Irishman, my mother was an Irishwoman. Both were Protestants, the intensity of whose faith would have been described by a large number of their fellow-countrymen as sanguinary Protestantism. A large part of my mother's duties to me were discharged by an Irish nurse. That nurse was a Roman Catholic, and she never put me to bed without sprinkling me with holy water."

Referring to the laughter which greeted these remarks, Bernard Shaw added: "I cannot imagine anything that is less worthy to be laughed at or more touching than this picture of the Irish Catholic woman sprinkling holy water—and you know what holy water was to her—on the little Protestant child whose parents grossly underpaid her."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Cured

"I think it should be the duty of the schools to teach children how to keep well," writes Miss Nannie E. Naydon, a well-known and highly esteemed resident of Bristol. "Ignorance of the laws of health and the use of improper remedies destroyed my vigor, and led me to the verge of invalidism. I was as a girl ruddy and strong. Nothing seemed to affect me until I was about thirty. Then gas began to form in the stomach. I suffered with bloating and a general failure in strength set in. If I went upstairs my breath hurt. My system was very irregular, and until I grew pretty bad I didn't pay much heed to my condition. Then I got blue, worried all the time, wakened in the night, and couldn't get to sleep again. None of the medicine I took helped me. One day I was reading of a very interesting case like mine cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I took the same treatment. It was just right—didn't physic me to death, but took hold of the weak, sick parts of my system, and set things right. It seems as if Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made me young again, and all my color, spirits, vigor, and health of former days have returned to stay."

Every girl and woman should use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly. They help a woman in many ways. Beware of the dealer who asks you to take an inferior pill on which his profit is larger than on Dr. Hamilton's. Sold in yellow boxes, 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone, Co., Kingston, Ont.

ELECTRIC RADIALS

What Peterborough needs more than anything else now to develop it in a commercial way is radial electric railways. There should be lines to Port Hope, Lindsay and Lakefield at least. These roads need not be built as the crow flies; they can be diverted to take in the villages between the terminal points and a frequent service can be secured—a service that cannot be given by the steam railways. Failing in securing these the Board of Trade should urge the G.T.R. to consider the advisability of electrifying its lines to the points mentioned. As the rails on the Lindsay and Lakefield branches are light it is impossible now to use heavy locomotives same as are used on the main line, and slow time has to prevail. The city will, at no distant date, it is to be hoped, be able to supply electrical power at a low rate, through the Hydro-Electric system.

It is noticeable that electricity is gaining ground on the large railways of the United States, even where the original source of power must be steam. The main line of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railway has been electrified as far out of New York as Stamford, and soon will be to New Haven. But where the original source of power is hydraulic, the advantage becomes vastly greater. It is announced that the Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound railway is about to electrify 450 miles of its main line, getting its power from the Great Falls (Montana) Power Company. The secretary of the interior at Washington has sanctioned the change, on the power company entering into an agreement securing to the general public the use of all the power it needs from the same source and on the same terms.

GALT'S EXPERIENCE

Commenting on the failure of the liquor interest to reopen the bars in Galt, The Reporter frankly observes: "The local optionists come out of the contest saved by the three-fifths clause. With a splendid organization that embraced in its ranks hundreds of women; with clergymen, figuratively speaking, bared to the waist for the conflict at the poles; with the prestige of a great triumph in 1910; with all these factors telling in their favor they were not able to poll a majority of the votes cast."

The Reporter adds: "But why have the local optionists in part lost the grip of 1910? Why has their vote fallen from 1,337 to 1,231? Why has that of the antis increased from 871 to 1,278? These questions must occur to every citizen and particularly to the victors of 1910. Has not tacit repudiation of pledges given in 1909 prior to the first test, with respect to accommodation for man and beast, something to do with the reaction noted?" Former hotels have been dismantled and a "syndicate barn," intended to provide farmers with shelter for their horses, has been diverted to other uses.

Commenting on the three-fifths clause, the Hamilton Spectator says, editorially:

Very tantalizing it must seem to temperance people to find that a local option by-law has received considerably more than a straight majority, and yet is not adopted because by just a few votes it falls short of the requisite three-fifths of the total vote cast. In Peterborough, for instance, the contest of Monday last resulted in a simple majority of 473; but as 134 more votes were needed to reach the three-fifths limit, the by-law was not carried. Three years must elapse before another trial can be made.

Yet the wisdom of the three-fifths requirement is more apparent than ever. Collingwood had an experience several years ago where the margin by which the adoption of the by-law was missed (about ten votes) was even more slender than the other day in Peterborough. But Collingwood kept on, renewing the struggle at every triennial opportunity, till the three-fifths majority was reached. And just because the by-law, when it was passed, was passed by a three-fifths majority, the stability of the measure is such as to resist all attack. On Monday last, Collingwood was among the places where repeal votes were taken, and against repeal a straight majority of 91 is recorded, though less than a straight majority would have sufficed to protect the enactment.

In four places — Galt, Almonte, Dundalk and Finch—local prohibition would have been repealed but for the three-fifths clause. It was only necessary for the temperance people to poll two-fifths of the total vote in the interest of their measure, because it was originally carried under the three-fifths requirement, and the rule works both ways. They were able to poll more votes than 40 per cent, but not quite 50 per cent. If prohibition, therefore, continues in these places, it is by reason of the much berated special requirement.

Now that several years have elapsed since the three-fifths clause was enacted, there are a large number of places in which the liquor men would be as much handicapped in any attempt to repeal, as prohibitionists were in their successful attempt to carry. As time goes on, the entire fairness of the Whitney policy is both demonstrated and illustrated. It prevents the adoption of prohibition before a community is entirely ready for it, but it becomes a bulwark of prohibition when once it is ordained.

IS OBSTRUCTION PLANNED?

The Toronto Globe advises the Liberals at Ottawa to oppose the Borden naval bill. It wants the Laurier party in the House of Commons to do all it can to force the issue to the people, but it thinks that the Senate would be wise—or, more properly speaking, the Liberals in the Senate—not to throw out the bill, and then have the Government set to work to reform the Senate. It thinks that the question of Senate Reform in that case would becloud the real issue upon which the verdict of the people should be sought. It is to be noticed that Mr. Hugh Guthrie, having been reported as saying that the Liberals would obstruct the bill in the House of Commons, that gentleman now declares that he did not say anything to encourage the idea of obstructing. But he thought that the issue was important enough to go to the people, and therefore the Liberals would, he thought, not hesitate to use what influence they could exert to obtain the pronouncement. But that such tactis would go to the extent of active obstruction, he was not prepared to say. But it is notable that Mr. Lemieux, speaking in Quebec, also declared in favor of bitter opposition. The fact is that the Liberals would like beyond anything to obstruct the bill, to enforce another election on the chance of obtaining a snap verdict, but that they are afraid to grasp the nettle boldly.

The Government and its supporters are extremely confident that if there were an appeal to the country they would come back with an even larger majority than they have now. There is no question that the Laurier naval policy is both unpopular and impracticable, and renders no real assistance to the Empire at a time when the Empire stands in need of Canada's frank declaration that it proposes to stand by the Empire. The Laurier navy is a separatist from the beginning. It offers nothing to the cause of British Empire unity or strength. It does not recognize the existence of any emergency, any real need for special action. It merely proposes that Canada shall build up a navy of its own, over the course of many long years, and that not until war breaks out, or the crisis is on the Empire, will it be of any use. The Laurier policy is not a British and Imperial one.

Is there any love strong enough to forgive an old man who is sick and troublesome, and cross? You will say there is, to stand up for your race, but do you really think there is?

PROTOPLASM, THE FIRST MAN MADE

Cells of Animals and Plants Alike and Governed by Same Laws.

Protoplasm, the literal translation of which means "the first man made," was the name given by a German scientist in 1846 to the shiny, granular, semifluid contents of vegetable cells.

It looks like the white of an egg, and it can be analyzed into four chemical elements—carbon, oxygen, nitrogen and hydrogen. It is now recognized as the fundamental basis for all life. The smallest particle of it goes through what is known as the cycle of life—free motion, feeling, feeding and reproduction. When in some unconscious way it grows a membrane for a covering or a little nucleus, a kernel somewhere within it, science calls it a cell.

These cells are the same in plants and animals. Professor Jacques Loeb showed the importance of this fact. Although plants, he explained have no nervous systems, they have "instinctive movements." In analysis of instincts he bound together in the cell common to them the plant and the worm at the root of the plant—as some day, perhaps, the tree of life and the serpent may be bound—and he called their reflex actions "tropisms."

Then he pointed out that tropisms are mechanical acts—that moth and fly and ivy leaf move in spite of themselves in chemical subjection to light, heat and odors, which the scientist calls "emanations."—From "Man as a Mechanism" in Metropolitan.

Disraeli's Fine Digestion.

Disraeli appears to have been endowed with a most accommodating digestion. When he visited Spain in 1830 he wrote his mother glowing accounts of "the most agreeable dish in the world—an olio. I will explain it to you, for my father would delight in it. There are two large dishes, one at each end of the table. The top one contains bouilli beef, boiled pork sausage and black pudding. The other is a medley of vegetables and fruits, generally French beans, caravanseras and whole peas. Help each person to a portion of the meats and then to the medley. Mix them up in your plate together and drown them in tomato sauce. I have eaten this every day. It is truly delightful."—London Standard.

Natural Spectacles.

Many birds are provided with natural spectacles, a transparent membrane called the third eyelid. This third eyelid when not in use lies folded in the inner corner of the eye. Two muscles work it, spreading it over the cornea or folding it up again much more cleverly than a man can put on or take off his spectacles. But for its third eyelid the eagle could not look at the sun. The spectacled bear belongs of Chile. Its Latin name is Ursus ornatus. It is black and around its eyes pale rings are drawn which have exactly the appearance of a pair of goggles.

Their Joint of Beef.

During the Kimberley siege a colonel in charge of the mess one night addressed this little speech to his fellow officers: "Gentlemen, I am sorry to say we were only able to draw half our ration in beef to-day. This joint I am carving is beef; at the other end of the table the joint is horse. If any one would like to try the other, perhaps he will carve it for himself." No one cared to try the horse, however, so it was decided that all would be content with half rations of beef, and the other joint was left severely alone. After dinner was over, one of the orderlies confessed that he had misplaced the joints, and the beef was still intact.—Answers.

A "Billet Doux."

She was a winsome country lass,
So William on a brief vacation,
The time more pleasantly to pass,
Essayed flirtation.
And while they strolled in twilight dim,
As near the time for parting drew,
Asked if she would have from him
A "billet doux."

Now, this simple maid of French knew nought,
But doubting not 'twas something nice,
Shyly she lifted her pretty head,
Her rosy lips together drew and coyly said,
"Yes, Billy do."
And William did.

District Lodge Meeting

The annual meeting of the District Orange Lodge, District No. 1, in West Peterborough, will be held in the Orange Hall, Nassau, on the evening of Jan. 14th, 1913. A full attendance of members is requested. At the close of the District meeting, the Royal Scarlet Chapter will be opened and after the general business has been transacted, election of officers will take place. MAYOR ADDRESSES COUNCIL AT INAUGURAL MEETING

Street Paving Will Follow Underground System of Power Distribution—His Worship Reviews Important Questions Before the Council.

The brisk and businesslike manner in which proceedings at the inaugural meeting of the 1913 City Council were transacted this morning, may be regarded as decidedly promising for a successful year of civic administration. The three new representatives on the council made their debut into veteran company and the infusion of new blood and new ideas should boom matters considerably.

As is customary at the commencement of a new year His Worship Mayor Bradburn delivered some remarks dealing with questions that will confront the council this year. He first extended his congratulations to the councillors who were returned by acclamation and to the new members who were elected by the people in their respective wards.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC.

Continuing he referred to the three by-laws which had been carried by the ratepayers by such significant majorities. He reviewed the purposes of each, dealing specially with the importance to the city of the Hydro-Electric, whereby the ratepayers had authorized the council's expenditure of $120,000 for the acquisition of a municipally owned power plant.

While speaking on this matter he brought forward the suggestion that the Power and Manufacturers' Committees should not be combined as heretofore, but that two distinct bodies be appointed with a chairman for each. The immense amount of business that would devolve upon the Power Committee in the ensuing year would render such a step imperative.

The first thing that would be commenced for the distribution of hydro-power would be the underground system, leading on to permanent paving. He briefly explained the difficulty encountered by last year's council, caused by the pole encumbrances upon the streets, which prevented paving operations being commenced. This year however, he felt that the council knew of a way whereby the pole owners could be forced to remove their property.

NEW INDUSTRIES.

Speaking of manufactories and industries, he announced that the council was negotiating with new ones all the time, and that only through constant watchfulness could the council hope to secure new industries for Peterborough. He promised attention to the proposed bridge across the Otonabee for East City residents and hoped that a by-law could be arranged for submission in the spring. Additional fire protection for Peterborough embracing a substation in the south part of the city would also receive careful attention, as such a step was urgently required by the steady growth of that portion of the city.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL.

The construction of a filtration plant at the outfall sewer in the Otonabee would be taken up in pursuance with the promise made by last year's council to the township residents.

An adequate garbage collection system would be inaugurated just as speedily as possible at the expiration of A. B. Downer's contract. It would aim to cover the whole city, and any extra expenditure that would be involved would more than re-imburse the people's outlay.

Mayor Bradburn's remarks received the hearty endorsement of the council, who then adjourned to go into a committee of the whole and strike the standing committees for the year.

CHINAMEN WERE GOOD ENTERTAINERS

A very pleasing demonstration of the friendliness which exists between the Chinese members of Murray street Baptist church, and their teachers was witnessed Friday evening in the New York Chinese Cafe on George street. The fifteen Chinese who regularly attend the church, tendered an elaborate banquet to the teachers, the gathering in all consisting of about forty

The proprietor of the Cafe is Mr. Yee Yue, an ardent student of Canadian life.

Rev. J. R. Webb presided. Mrs. Fee asked the blessing in the Chinese language. There were several courses provided, all most appetizingly prepared. Rev. Mr. Webb, Mr Wilfrid Shiner, Mr. L. J. Pettit and Dr. Browett each made brief speeches, which were taken down in shorthand by Mrs. Fee and interpreted in Chinese by her for the benefit of the class.

An article in reference to the fifteen hundred Chinese who are coming to Canada to study in Canadian schools and colleges, which appeared in the Review of January 8th, was read in Chinese.

The gathering was one heartily enjoyed by every one present, and the nuique function closed with the singing of "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow."

DEFAMATORY LIBEL CHARGED

By Chas. T. Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle

Hamilton, Jan. 13 — Magistrate Jelfs has issued another summons to Rev. J. J. Ross, pastor of James St. Baptist Church, at the instance of Charles T. Russell, pastor of Brooklyn Tabernacle. In this he is charged with defamatory libel. On Friday at Osgoode Hall, Chief Justice Meredith set aside a committal of the magistrate on a similar charge because the lawyers for the defence were not permitted in the lower court to cross-examine the complainant. It is said that at the next hearing Mr. Russell will not go into the box, and in this way this technicality will be avoided.

NEW C.P.R. BRIDGE AT HIGHLANDS

The new bridge over the river St. Lawrence between the Highlands station and Caughnawaga, erected by the Canadian Pacific Railway is now open and the double tracks are in operation. This will continue until well into the spring when the work of erecting and floating in the two final 408 channel spans will commence and single tracks will be reverted to for a short space of time. The double tracking of the line between Windsor street station and Farnham Junction has already proved of great servicve and trains are operated with greater facility than heretofore, while freight is also more easily manipulated and the holding up of trains is entirely eliminated. The double tracking of the Lachine bridge has not only been a great undertaking but has involved the spending of three millions of dollars. The only piece of double track which remains to be carried out to complete the approach from the United States and its New York connections is the bridge which crosses the canal before reaching the Highlands station. The question is already being considered but nothing has yet been definitely decided as to what kind of a bridge will be used at this point, nor yet when the work will commence.

The bridge which is 3128 feet in length when completed will contain steel spans as follows: six 80 feet long, sixteen 120 feet, four 270 feet, two 122 feet, eight 240 feet, and four 270 feet, and four 408 feet. As stated previously only two 408 feet spans remain to be inserted, to replace the old cantelever spans over the channel which portion has been left undisturbed until the finishing touches are made. The piers on which the girders are resting consist of open casement to pier seven counting from the island side and from 8 to 15 inclusive the pneumatic casing has been used. 42

Intercolonial Calendar

Bringing visions of comfortable and luxurious travel through a territory unrivalled for scenic beauty the calendar of the Intercolonial Railway just received with the compliments of the Traffic Department is warmly appreciated as a happy reminder of past enjoyments and as an inspiration for future travel.

The design of the calendar is greatly enhanced by a surprinting of gold on the background of maple leaves. As a reminder of the intercolonial and its fine train service it is excellent. As something both ornamental and useful for office use it is much to be desired.

THE NAVAL LORDS.

Men Who Make Britannia Mistress of the Seas.

Stick close to your desks and never go to sea,
And you all may be rulers of the Queen's Navee.

The merry lines of the late Sir W. S. Gilbert in "The Yeomen of the Guard" are not without point; for the First Lord of the Admiralty, the man who has practically supreme control of naval affairs, is always a Cabinet Minister, who has achieved his position with pen and speech, and who probably doesn't know the difference between a cruiser and a battleship.

Of course, he is assisted in his work by experts. He may be termed the figure-head of the Board of Admiralty, which consists of what are known as six Lords Commissioners—two Civil or Political Lords and four Naval or Sea Lords. It is the latter, of course, who form practically the advisory board to the First Lord. The First Naval Lord, for instance, who is always an admiral of high rank and general experience, practically fills the position of Commander-in-chief of the navy. He is the chief naval adviser of the First Lord, and is especially responsible for the organization and distribution of the fleet for war. The Second Naval Lord is responsible for matters appertaining to the personnel of the fleet.

The Comptroller of the navy is the Naval Lord charged with the supervision of the whole of the material of the navy, including the construction, repair, armament, general equipment, and upkeep of every ship in the service. He is also responsible for the administration of the dockyards and for the construction of ships and machinery by contractors, and in these matters he has the assistance and advice of the Director of Naval Construction, the Engineer-in-chief of the navy, and the Director of dockyards. The Junior Naval Lord deals with transport, coaling, matters relating to pay, pensions, and medals, naval prisons, and collisions.

The arrangement of the departments of the Navy Board appointed to take up the duties of the Lord High Admiral was somewhat different from that which exists at the present time in connection with the Board of Admiralty, but the system of administration was practically the same. The Board of Admiralty as it works to-day was really established in 1832 by Sir James Graham.

The First Lord of the Admiralty receives a salary of $22,500 a year, together with a house, while the First Sea Lord receives, in addition to naval half-pay, $7,500 a year with a house. Similar salaries are paid to the Second Sea Lord and Junior Sea Lord, while the Comptroller of the navy receives $8,500 a year.

Apart from the First Lord, the First Naval Lord is the most important officer of the Board of Admiralty. It seems to be unquestioned that Sir James Graham was right in describing the Senior Naval Lord as "the first naval adviser." It might be mentioned that, in addition to general direction and supervision in connection with the efficiency of the navy, the First Lord of the Admiralty has special charge of promotions and removals from the service, and all matters relating to honors and rewards, as well as the appointment of further officers, captains, and other officers of the higher ranks.

Under the Naval Lords and other members of the board, the several branches of administration are conducted by permanent officers.

Curious Quit-Rents.

The King's Remembrancer, Sir John Macdonell, received in his room in the Royal Courts of Justice the other day from the city solicitor, Sir Homewood Crawford, and the Secondary, Mr. Hayes, the rent services due to the crown from the Corporation of the City of London, in accordance with ancient custom.

Certain warrants having been filed and recorded, proclamation was made as follows: "Tenants and occupiers of a piece of waste ground called 'The Moors,' in the County of Salop, come forth and do your service." The city solicitor came forward and cut one faggot with a hatchet and another with a bill-hook. The next proclamation was: "Tenants and occupiers of a certain tenement called 'The Forge,' in the parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, come forth and do your service." Sir Homewood Crawford counted six horseshoes and sixty-one nails, the King's Remembrancer saying, "Good number."

Able Seaman.

A Turkish man-of-war was ordered to Malta. When the captain had got his ship clear of the Bosphorus it struck him that it would be as well if he knew where Malta was, for he had not the slightest idea. So he inquired of a passing vessel, whose captain offered to point it out on the chart. But the Turkish captain preferred to follow a vessel which he knew was about to sail for that port.

Unfortunately a fog came on, and when it cleared off the vessel in front was no longer the same, though the captain knew it not. For days he followed the ship, and at last reached port, when, addressing the authorities that came on board, he said:

"Malta, I presume?"

"Oh, no," was the reply. "This is Liverpool."

Bell Boy's Savings.

Freddie Sweatman, 13 years old, employed as a bell boy in the St. Lawrence Hall, Montreal, has, from his own savings from tips, just paid the passage of his father and four smaller children to the homeland.

England's Egg Imports.

England imported from continental countries last year 19,000,000 "great hundreds" (120) of eggs, of which Russia supplied 52 per cent. and the average price of which was 43 1-2 per cent. above that of thirteen years ago.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Diary Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—Today's prices for grain declined moderately, as did provisions. Fluctuations were rather narrow and the volume of business moderate.

A heavy snowfall in Kansas preceding the predicted cold, and the prospects of large shipments from Argentine were bear factors in wheat. The fact that shorts had pretty well eliminated themselves during the previous two days also worked against prices. At the close, May was 1-8c over the bottom, but 1-8 to 1-4c under yesterday.

The Liverpool market closed ¼d to ⅜d higher on wheat and ⅜d higher on corn. Buda Pest closed ½c lower on wheat. Antwerp unchanged and Paris ¼c to ⅜c higher.

Rope-making 2,000 Years B.C.

The name of the first ropemaker and that of the land in which he practiced his art have both been lost to history. Before the beginning of the historical period considerable skill had been acquired in that time. Egyptian sculptures prove that the art was practiced at least 2,000 years before the time of Christ.

Cooking Accounts.

The word cook, used in the sense of "cook up accounts," is generally put in quotation marks, but the phrase has been almost long enough in use to give it indisputable standing. Smollett wrote of "cooking accounts" in 1751, and proofs were "cooked" a century earlier, but somehow cook remains what the dictionaries sniff at as "colloquial" in this sense, while "concoct," which means to cook or boil together, has the status of a fully accepted word. The Romans used "concoquo" and the simple "coquo" alike in the metaphorical sense of pondering and devising but the obvious metaphor of "cooking" accounts never occurred to them.

GALES IN BRITAIN

Terrific Storms Sweeps Isles and Damages Shipping

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The United Kingdom was swept Friday and Saturday by high gales and snowstorms. There have been many wrecks of small craft, and coast shipping has been considerably damaged. Vessels arriving in port yesterday felt the full fury of the storm, and some of them are badly scarred.

In the north of England the storm was of terrific severity, lasting thirty-three hours, and there was a continuous snowfall in the Newcastle district. Telephone and telegraph wires are down in all directions.

Meredith's Friends.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, speaking at the annual dinner in aid of the Newsvendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution, London, recently gave some personal reminiscences of Geo. Meredith. In the years 1894-5 Sir Arthur visited the novelist at his residence at Box Hill, in Surrey. "When I went there I inadvertently offended him in one way. He met me at the door. He told me he had just come from the top o a high hill near the park. I expressed my amazement. He asked me why I was so surprised, and I said I thought he was an invalid. He said that would be the sort of compliment one would pay an octogenarian. Subsequently a maidservant brought in a jelly or a blancmange, and Meredith, looking at the shivering lump, expressed himself in a characteristic phrase—just such a one as he would put in the mouth of one of his characters. He said, 'The jelly seems as treacherous as a Trojan horse.' Meredith was fond of a bottle of wine, but his state of health when I saw him forbade him taking any intoxicant. He had a bottle covered with cobwebs brought up for me, and asked if I could drink some. I said I did not think there would be any difficulty. I finished the bottle, and Meredith expressed his gratification, saying that on one occasion someone only drank one glass of a bottle he had opened, and he had the mortification of seeing the rest of the contents wasted. Although unsectarian, Meredith nevertheless thought prayer was a very necessary thing. He did not believe in addressing Almighty God as one's uncle, but he believed in acknowledging a higher force than oneself."

Life on the Music Halls.

Mr. Robey, the London comedian, has a weakness for practical jokes. On one occasion a swell of his acquaintance asked him: "How many halls do you manage a night, Wobey, old chap?" "Four." "Welly! No!" "No, really!" was Robeys reply. "I say, Wobey, old chap, can't you take me with you?" The jester was quite agreeable. He hired a furniture van, had a barrel of beer placed in one corner and a whelk stall in another, his dresser doing the honors, such as serving whelks and drawing beer. In this simple yet elegant manner they made the round of the halls, the swell thinking it was all part of the business. Somewhere about the midnight hour the lights were extinguished, the beer tap turned on, and the van flooded. The individual who wanted a taste of the halls never had such a lively experience.

A Bishop's Wit.

A good illustration of the wit of Bishop Welldon, the popular dean of Manchester, Eng., is afforded by the following story. Once at a luncheon given by the Lord Mayor of Manchester, the dean sat next to Sir Herbert Tree.

"Well, Mr. Tree, what have you been doing to-day," he asked.

"I went for a motor ride this morning and lost a bet, replied the famous actor.

"Indeed!" said the dean. "And may I ask what the bet was."

"I made a bet that we would pass through four hundred different odors, and we only encountered three hundred and ninety-nine."

"Ah!" replied Bishop Welldon promptly. "You missed the odor of sanctity."

Lobsters.

Lobsters have a great dread of thunder and when peals are very loud will swim to deeper water.

An Effective Instrument.

A story with a grimly dramatic turn is told of John Bright while on a visit to Ireland. The famous statesman went walking one day in the County Tipperary. Seeing a man with his coat off working in the fields, he went up and talked to him.

"Are you the tenant of this farm?" Bright began.

"Yes," replied the man.

"You have a comfortable place?"

"Yes, indeed, comfortable enough."

"You have a good landlord?"

"Yes, I have no complaint to make of him."

"He has made the place comfortable for you?"

"Not at all; all that you see I have done myself. I have built and drained and fenced and done everything with my own hands and my little bit of money."

"Then you hold under a long lease?"

"Not at all; I never saw the like. I hold from year to year."

"But then you must have great confidence in your landlord?"

"Yes, I have confidence enough. I think I am sure enough."

"But assuredly you must hold under some sort of instrument? You cannot be altogether at the mercy of your landlord, without some sort of security?"

"Yes, I do hold under an instrument,"

"Ah, I thought so. Would you let me see it?"

"Certainly."

They then went into the house. The man walked straight to the fireplace and took down a blunderbuss that was hanging over it.

"That," said he, "is the instrument I hold under."

A ZEALOUS PEER.

The New Viscount Peel Will Carry On His Activities In the Lords.

The Hon. William Peel, who has proceeded to the House of Lords owing to the death of his father, Viscount Peel, will no doubt enjoy a more peaceful career than he has experienced in the Commons.

In the Lower House he was known as "Never-Merry Peel." Maybe his melancholy was due to the fact that he represented Taunton, a seat which is likely to be swept away under a scheme of redistribution. However, he has no longer any need to worry about such trifles, and, moreover, he lives in a more rarified atmosphere.

What made the present viscount's career so full of incident in the Commons was that he was alway sniffing round to find jobbery. He was ever zealous for the honor of his political opponents, and was very prone to indulge in personalities. Hence the "scenes" that used to arise during the time he was on his feet. Mr. Peel's arguments and accusations against his opponents that they were taking money from the taxes were weakened by the fact that his own family have done extremely well in this way. His father, the late Viscount Peel, one of the best Speakers who ever presided over the House of Commons, received in salary and pension something like $750,000, and he was not the only one bearing the family name who has been well treated by the state. The present viscount can afford to soar above the hackneyed question of ways and means, for he is married to a daughter of Lord Ashton, the Lancaster millionaire.

In the early days of his political career, before he was so worried about the purity of other people's motives, Viscount Peel represented South Manchester. He does not inherit the views of his famous grandfather on the fiscal question, and in fact has little in common with his ancestor.

The new viscount has traveled widely, and during the Graeco-Turkish war, he acted as correspondent for a London paper. He is a major in the Bedfordshire Imperial Yeomanry, and also a Justice of the Peace for the county. For four years he served on the London County Council, and led the Moderates, whom he served ably and well. His intellectual abilities are such that he has had no difficulty in carving out a career without depending on the family name.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF BALL CLUB NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

At a meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club, Saturday night, it was decided to call a general meeting of all those interested in the baseball game, for Monday night, January 20th, to be held in the Bank of Montreal Chamber.

Shareholders and baseball fans are invited to attend this meeting. The financial end of the proposition of a Canadian League team for Peterborough this season will be discussed. It is hoped that the attendance will be large as much depends on the outcome of this meeting.

RUBE McMANUS MAY LAND 1913 JOB WITH CINCINNATI

"Rube" McManus, the big twirler of the Senators and about the classiest manipulator of the pill in the Canadian League looks good to catch a place with the Cincinnati Reds this summer. This will mean that Ottawa fans will see him no more but they would all be glad to hear that he had made good in big league company.

Grantland Rice, in the Chicago Post has this to say about McManus:—

"Joe Tinker believes a "wonder" may come from the wilds of Canada. Pitcher McManus, who worked for Ottawa last season is the youth."

Cincinnati papers also predict that McManus will "make good."

This will mean that the Senators must hunt for another twirler. Last summer the pitching staff put the Senators at the top of the heap and they will need a good one again this season to climb far in the Canadian League race.

Shrunk Some.

I've been back to the swimming hole
Of which we boys were fond,
But it has dwindled. Bless my soul,
It isn't half a pond!

It used to seem a good mile wide
When we kids used to meet,
But now I really must decide
It's only twenty feet.

I used to think it was as deep
As all the seven seas,
But now—it must have shrunk a heap—
It doesn't reach my knees.
—Kansas City Journal.

She Did.

The young girl sat in her bedroom reading and waiting impatiently. Her older sister was entertaining a young man in the parlor, and she wanted to know how it would terminate. At last there was a sound in the hall, and a crash as of a closing door made it plain to the girl that the young man had gone. Throwing down her book, she ran to the head of the stairs and peered eagerly and intently into the blackness of the hall beneath.

"Well, Maude," she called, "did you land him?"

There was a peculiar silence, and then a masculine voice responded:

"She did."—New York American.

ERRORS IN TELEGRAMS.

Haw a "Cut" of Salmon Was Magnified To a "Cwt."

Although, according to most telegraphists, a telegraphist's life is not a happy one, there are certainly times when the saving grace of humor banishes for a few moments the dreary monotony of "key-pushing."

These little humorous interludes generally arise from errors in telegrams; for, although the British telegraph service is the best and most accurate in the world, even British telegraphists are but human. It must be understood, of course, that many of these errors are detected in transmission, and rectified before the message is delivered.

For instance, a person receiving a wire, "Lizzie got a fire box. Come at once," would no doubt be very mystifying. Fortunately the message was queried in transmission, and the resultant "Lizzie got a fine boy. Come at once," proved to be quite satisfactory to the recipient. Similarly, "cockle and cater works" is a very different message to "cycle and motor works," and also "Send trousers lime seated" a very unsatisfactory substitute for "Send trousers time stated."

Most of these errors are caused through bad spacing of the Morse dots and dashes, and also faulty wires are very conducive to mistakes. The following is a good example of faulty spacing. Just about the time Mr. Balfour retired from the leadership of the Conservative party a telegraphist was receiving some press work, in which occurred the phrase "(Mr. Balfour)." Now, brackets are signalled "kk" before and after the word contained in them. Through bad spacing, however, the words were received, "Ta-ta, Mr. Balfour, Ta-ta," a result obtained by splitting up the "kk" badly. It was a fitting joke.

Another funny mistake was that of a telegraphist who got "bowling paralysis," for "bowling analysis" in a cricket message. Also the error "a godless game resulted," instead of a "goalless game resulted," is somewhat remarkable.

When Florence Nightingale was buried one of the hymns sung was "Onward, Christian Soldiers," but unfortunately a mistake occurred in the transmission of a certain message, and the result was, "Onward, Christian Solicitors."

Then "St. Peter's and Crockies" is not much like "Starters and Jockeys," yet the former was received for the latter. But nearly all these pale before the following. A message was received, "Come at once if you wish to see baby arrive." It should have been, "Come at once if you wish to see baby alive."

Again, a man who wired to his fishmonger, "Send one cut salmon," would not expect to find that the message had reached its destination, "Send one cwt. salmon." But it did. Then "Two stationmasters collided in mid-ocean" is a very mysterious affair, but "two steamers collided in mid-ocean" an all too common disaster.

At the British Museum.

I made another beginning at the British Museum. I got a ticket for the "vault," as we liked to call the reading-room, and there I used to read daily, sometimes from the hour of its opening to that of its closing. Why I didn't die during the progress of this part of my education, I do not know; for I took little exercise, and the ventilation of the "vault" and the heating arrangements thereof were so bad as to be distinctly humorous.

All sorts of scientific bodies and people had a go at that ventilation; and now and again, when I was lost in a book, I would be startled by catching sight, with the corner of my eye, of weird kind of kites which were being flown above our heads, with the object of discovering some means of lightening the thick muggy air which sent the elder readers to sleep and befogged the younger ones.

Often, when leaving the Museum at five o'clock, I have staggered and leant against one of the great pillars of the portico, dazed and dizzy with the peculiar kind of faintness, of the production of which the British Museum reading-room at that time held a proud monopoly.—From "How I Began," by Charles Garvice.

The Youthful Hope of Russia.

The distressing illness of the little Tsarevitch gave rise to the greatest anxiety in Russia. This charming boy is the hope of his country, and were he to die grave complications would undoubtedly arise in Russia.

The Tsarevitch is a great-grandson of Queen Victoria. The greatest rejoicing prevailed in Russia at his birth, for the royal couple were beginning to despair of a son. It is related that when the first baby proved to be a girl the Tsarina. "Oh, I am glad it is a girl. Now it belongs to us. Had it been a boy it would have belonged to Russia." But the next three children proved to be girls, also, so that when a boy was born the joy of the nation knew no bounds. The Tsarevitch is guarded with the greatest care, and the future of this handsome, merry little boy is far from being an enviable one.

No Scruples.

Sir Herbert Tree is fond of playing jokes on people whom he may chance to meet. On one occasion he was in a railway carriage when a young man entered and sitting opposite to him commenced to puff a cigar. Sir Herbert inquired: "Are you aware, sir, that this is not a smoking carriage?" The youth flung his smoke out of the window, apologizing for his conduct. A minute later he observed, incredulously: "But—but you are smoking yourself."

"Quite so," observed Sir Herbert, calmly, "but I thought you might have conscientious scruples. Er—have a cigar?"

THE SALMON HARVEST

IT IS WORTH MORE TO B.C. THAN THE GOLD MINES.

The Gathering of Sea Food Along the Rocky Pacific Coast Has Been Going on for Forty Years and Is Growing to Enormous Proportions —How the Yield Is Prepared for the Consumer.

It is now over two centuries since the early explorers discovered the wealth of salmon in the waters which flow into the Pacific. It is forty years since man started to commercialize these fisheries by establishing the first salmon cannery. It was an experiment, but one which initiated an industry which has grown to be one of the greatest food supplies of the present day. In 1869, the year of the beginning of this industry, the packers shipped 100,000 cases of canned salmon and thought they were doing a pretty good season's business; last season, the greatest in the history of the industry, the pack amounted to the enormous total of 7,000,000 cases, valued at about $35,000,000, and experienced salmon packers say the end is not yet.

These figures prove that the average daily consumption of canned salmon has now reached the enormous total of nearly one million pounds per day, and that the demand is growing rapidly. Not only is the per capita consumption steadily increasing in the countries which already consume large quantities of this appetizing and nourishing food, but the palatable salmon is steadily conquering new lands, more especially in the Far East, and its introduction is followed by a steadily increasing demand. Despite this tremendous consumption, there is not any likelihood of any immediate diminution of the Pacific coast salmon supply. New fishing grounds are constantly being exploited and artificial propagation, already begun on a large scale, is being increased from year to year.

The waters of the Pacific are one immense marine farm. "There are just as good fish in the sea as ever were caught," is an aphorism, and, also, there are just as good salmon sites left as those that already have been located. Every summer, men start out looking for these locations, prospecting for unknown salmon streams in exactly the same manner as men search for gold.

Alike has the history of the seeker of golden metal and the seeker of silver-sided fishes been marked with its failures and grim tragedies. It is claimed by the miner that gold taken out of the ground is the cleanest money extant—that there is no blood upon it, that it has made no man poorer and caused no heart-sickness and poverty. But this is also true of the results of the labors of the fish prospector, for he adds to the world's food supply and helps to alleviate the hunger and poverty of the world.

Consumers of canned salmon, especially those living away from the fisheries, do not generally understand that there is a generic difference between the salmon of the Atlantic and the salmon of the Pacific. The Atlantic fish is of the genus salar, and there is but one species. The flesh is of a uniform color and the mature fish of a uniform size and weight. The Pacific fish is of the genus oncorhyncus, and there are five distinct species. Eliminating the Latin names, which are of interest only to the naturalist. These species are: Sockeye or Red salmon, Spring salmon or Quinnats, Cohoe or Silver salmon, Dog salmon, and the species known as Humpback or Pink salmon.

The Sockeyes, weighing from five to ten pounds, form the most valuable part of the catch. The flesh is of a deep red, very firm, and they are finely proportioned. They run in all the mainland rivers and in most of those on Vancouver Island, but they are most abundant in the Fraser River. The Quinnats form the largest part of the pack, but owing to their lighter color they are not quite so valuable as the former. They are a fine shapely fish, weighing from twenty to thirty pounds, and were for many years the only salmon used for shipment in ice to Europe. Until recently the Dog salmon, so called because of their dog-like heads, were of small value, but they are now finding a large market in Japan. The Humpbacks are the smallest of the Pacific salmon, weighing from three to six pounds, and are usually found every second year. They are of little value except for the Orient trade.

Actual analysis has proved that the difference in nutritive value in the entire list is very slight, the despised Humpback possessing food values equal to the prized Sockeye. Nevertheless, it is this difference in color which controls the market price, the value of the salmon in the market being graded according to their color in the order of red, medium red, pink, and pale.

Another very distinct difference between the Atlantic and the Pacific salmon is that the former, after running up the rivers to spawn, return to the sea, while the Pacific salmon, after making arrangements for the myriad reproduction of its kind, dies. Once it leaves its feeding grounds in the salt water it takes no food; in fact, it is believed to become physically incapable of doing so. Its one object in going up the rivers is to spawn, and, when that object is accomplished, it dies.

Salmon life in the Pacific Ocean is one of the insoluble mysteries. How does the salmon fry find its way to the feeding grounds in the sea? Where does it learn to return to the rivers, and does it return to the parent stream as do the Atlantic salmon? Where are the feeding grounds of the mighty hoards that yearly come from their home in the mighty deep? How far do they travel, going and coming, and what do they live upon? Nobody knows.

SORCERY IN AUSTRALIA.

The Natives of the Commonwealth Are Burdened Down With Superstition.

The annual report of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Territory of Papua, as presented to the Parliament of the Commonwealth of Australia, contains much interesting information on the quaint beliefs and superstitions of the native races.

Sorcery is far more prevalent than is generally believed. Describing the practice The London Morning Post says:

The Resident Magistrate of the Central Division states that in the trial of a native he came across a curious custom that is used to find out if the native had died by sorcery or not. The body, he says, is placed on a platform in the centre of the village and a leaf is placed on the breast. The feet are then pointed in the direction of the village, and the body is asked if any man or woman in the village pointed at caused the death. If the leaf falls off the body the people are sure that the person who caused the death was a native of the village pointed at. If the leaf does not fall off the body at the first attempt the body is pointed to another village, and so on until the leaf falls—or is blown off.

The inland people are eaten up with superstition, and any man who likes can terrorize them into doing what he wishes. In one case that came before me, he says, it appeared that a woman died in a village, and the people put the death down to sorcery on the part of another village. Some time after the death some of the dead woman's relatives were near another village just after dark. A dance was being held in the village, and the relations of the dead woman, looking into the village, said that they saw the ghost of the woman among the dancers, and they promptly went back to their village and told the village constable, who then arrested three men from the other village for the murder of the woman and brought them into the station, where they were tried and discharged.

Blind Vicar's Good-Bye.

Bidding farewell to his parishioners, Rev. J. J. Chambers, who is about to resign the vicarage of St. Barnabas, Southampton, England, says that now the building debt is practically cleared off he feels that it is best to make way for a vicar "who certainly will have eyesight and probably will have youth." Mr. Chambers lost his sight eleven years ago, but, in spite of his affliction, he has preached 1,200 sermons and administered communion to 22,000 people since that time.

Watermen Retain Monopoly.

Contending that it is imperative to maintain the present high standard of efficiency, the London County Council recently refused to acquiesce in a proposal by the Port of London Authority to break up the monopoly of the Thames watermen and lightermen.

ALD. JOHNSTON THINKS CHAIRMEN OF COUNCIL SHOULD BE REMUNERATED

The question of remuneration for the chairmen of council committees, received considerable prominence at the committee of the whole session this morning. Ald. Johnston brought up the matter, following the motion which authorized the grant to the Mayor of $500.

In view of the onerous duties of some of the committee chairmen he instanced the chairman of the Board of Works as an example. The work of the latter office required a vast amount of time and absence from business in order that the multitudinous duties connected with it might be properly performed.

For that reason, Ald. Johnston thought it was an idea that should be taken up by the Council.

ALD. BULLER SUGGESTS CIVIC BOARD OF CONTROL

While the Council were in committee this morning, Alderman Buller introduced a suggestion which he considered would tend to provide for the [illegible] disbursement of the city's [illegible] He was strongly of the opinion that the spending appropriations of the city were assuming such extensive proportions, and involved the outlay of such substantial sums, that a department such as a Board of Control might be adopted to advantage. While speaking along that line he also favored a plan which would make the Mayor an ex-officio member of the Water Commissioners and the Board of Education, to act in the same capacity as he does on the Police Commissioners. The Council viewed his suggestions seriously.

POWER QUESTION.

The question of looking after the power matters in connection with the city from year to year also arose. Alderman Johnston wanted to know what provision was to be made for such work, and if a permanent department was to be empowered to handle questions regarding power matters, from year to year.

Alderman Gordon said he would like to see an independent Commission, composed of the Mayor and two Commissioners, who would be authorized to handle all power matters.

The discussion which ensued was promised further attention.

WERE OVERCOME BY COAL GAS

Investigation By Neighbor Was Fortunate for Mr. and Mrs. Goselin

Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Goselin, of 515 Romaine street, had an unpleasant experience with coal gas, Saturday morning, and while they were made very sick and weak, they have now recovered. A neighbor, with whom Mr. Goslin walks to work in the mornings, made an investigation when his friend did not appear Saturday morning. Evidence of gas was detected when a window was opened.

Mr. and Mrs. Goselin were overcome by the fumes when found, but timely aid by physicians brought them around again.

It's a foolish man who can be moved by a compliment he does not deserve.

CHAIRMEN OF COMMITTEES OF THE CITY COUNCIL

The changes in the chairmanships of the City Council committees for 1913 are very few.

Alderman Duffus will preside at the head of the Manufacturers' Committee, which will henceforth be a separate body.

To Alderman Johnston has been intrusted the responsibility of caring for the power interests of the city, no small task as it includes the handling of the Hydro-Electric negotiations.

All last year's chairmen were reappointed and Alderman Gordon was appointed head of the Legal and Reception Committee.

The chairmanships are as follows:

Board of Works— Ald. Buller.

Fire, Water and Light—Ald. A. G. Gillespie.

Manufactures— Ald. J. J. Duffus

Power Committee — Ald. W. J. Johnston.

Finance Committee— Ald. J. Anderson.

Legal and Reception— Ald. G. N. Gordon.

The usual grant of $500 to the Mayor, was authorized to be paid by the City Treasurer, also the payment of funds for deputations from the Council to various places, when undertaken in the interests of the city, during the ensuing year.

COMMITTEE MEMBERS.

The members of the various committees for 1913 will be as follows:

Board of Works — Ald. Buller, chairman; Ald. Anderson, Gordon, Duffus, McIntyre and Johnston.

Fire, Water and Light—Ald. Gillespie, chairman; Ald. Buller, Green, Anderson, Duffus and Langford.

Manufacturers', (Railways and Franchises)—Ald. Duffus, chairman, Ald. Gillespie, Gordon, McIntyre, Anderson and Duncan.

PRIZE LIST OF POULTRY SHOW

Many Peterborough Birds in the Prize Money

The prize list of the Poultry Show will be published to-morrow. Many local birds are in the winning list.

"The best show I ever judged," was the comment of Mr. Jos. Bennett.

Birds that captured prizes at the Guelph show were relegated to the rear before the higher quality at Peterborough show.

The Association wishes to thank Messrs. J. T. C. Lang, J. J. Hartley, George McClelland and Robert McGregor, who acted as chairmen for the lectures and demonstrations.

Mr. Frank Pratt, station agent of the Canadian Express Co., gave extra care and attention in the handling of the exhibits. He had a special baggage car in use for Friday, when the birds were shipped home.

Much valuable information was secured by poultry breeders as a result sult of the show.

The Association has reason to be proud of its prominent position on the map of poultry shows. The exhibition is gaining ground every year.

POWERS HARD AT WORK TO PREVENT RUPTURE

The Ambassadors of the Great Nations Are Advising Moderation and Warning Both Parties Against Plunging Europe Into Disaster.

Canadian Press Despatch.

London, Jan. 14.—Delegates of the Balkan Allies decided to-day to break up the peace conference when the note of the European Powers is presented to the Turkish Government. With breaking off of conference the armistice signed on December third, will be at an end, and Servia and Bulgaria will resume operations against Turkey.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, and the ambassadors of the powers are making valiant efforts to bring about a settlement between Turkey and the Balkan allies in the direction of peace. They have had additional interviews with Dr. Daneff and Rechad Pasha, the heads of the Bulgarian and Turkish delegations respectively, advising moderation on both sides and warning them that either party, if through obstinacy it should plunge Europe into war again, would incur a heavy weight of disapproval.

The meeting of the ambassadors yesterday was the lengthiest yet held. They discussed the note to be presented to the Porte passage by passage, aiming to meet every possible argument likely to be raised by the Turks.

Much is hoped for here from Kiamil Pasha, the grand vizier, a man of great ability and extraordinary influence. He is perhaps the most powerful among the Ottoman statesmen. He has succeeded in restoring the good relations between Turkey and the triple entente and thus far has been able to prevent the powers from taking an active anti-Turkish attitude.

While progress towards peace is at a standstill here, the Balkan delegations are endeavoring to obtain advantages for themselves in the partition of the conquered territory. The kings of Bulgaria, Greece and Montenegro are working actively among their relatives and friends on the other thrones of Europe, to influence the powers in favor of the claims of their countries. As the moment for a decision approaches their efforts become more strenuous. It is known that they have sent special envoys to some of the capitals to support the work of their regular diplomats.

The Greeks, unhampered by the armistice which binds the other allies, are continuing the fighting in Epirus, where even to-day sharp encounters took place with the Turks. According to several despatches to Premier Venizelos, the Greek forces are doing their utmost to surround Janina. Their efforts are now being directed to the north, where the Turks thus far have kept communications open and have been able to secure supplies. It has been difficult therefore to take the city by starving it out.

Scutari is even more invulnerable to hunger, because it is one of the greatest grain depots in the Balkans and must have six months' provisions on hand.

The Turkish delegates have not yet taken steps to carry out their threat to leave London. Diplomats consider that it would be a great breach of etiquette for any of the delegates to go before another meeting of the conference was held, if only for the purpose of formally ending the negotiations. It might be construed as a slight to England, which is entertaining the conference, and to the British Foreign Secretary, as honorary president.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Calgary, Alta., Jan. 14 — Sunday evening an eastbound Canadian Pacific mail train on the Crow's Nest line, left the rails one mile west of Burmis while running at a good speed. A broken rail put seven cars in the ditch. One Pullman turned completely over. There were no injuries whatever to passengers.

DAYLIGHT ROBBERY.

Lone Bandit Operates In Philadelphia Ticket Office.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 14.—Almost under the shadow of the city hall, and within a stone's throw of the principal hotels and office buildings in this city, a lone bandit held up Albert D. Hunsicker, passenger agent for the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and his clerk, E. A. Follweikler, at the point of a pistol yesterday, and robbed their office, 131 South Broad street, of $130. The room where the hold-up occurred is on the street level and has an entire glass front. A large picture in the window alone prevented an unobstructed view of the interior to the policemen and pedestrians who walked within a few feet of the scene, while the robbery was being perpetrated. After asking for a ticket for Wilkes-Barre he suddenly drew a revolver and demanded that the two occupants of the room open the safe and give him its contents. On receiving $130, which was all the safe contained, he returned $1.75 to them, saying, "You may need this for supper."

U.S. JUDGE CONVICTED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Robt. W. Archbald of Scranton, Pa., for twenty-nine years an occupant of judicial positions upon the Pennsylvania state bench, the federal district bench and the U. S. Commerce Court, was yesterday adjudged guilty by the Senate of "high crimes and misdemeanors," was stripped of his office and forever disqualified from holding positions of public honor or public trust.

In a little committee room off the gallery floor, behind a guarded door, Judge Archbald, his wife and his son, Hugh, sat throughout the afternoon as the Senate voted upon the charges against him.

The first vote of conviction was carried to him by his son from the gallery. After sentence had been imposed upon him Judge Archbald and his family left the capital to go at once to the family home at Scranton.

"I have always known that I have done no wrong, and the vote of no one makes it otherwise," was his only comment upon the Senate's action.

Child Bitten by Dog.

HASTINGS, Jan. 14.—Francis Orishawa, a child ten years of age, was attacked by a vicious dog yesterday afternoon and was severely bitten in the leg. Dr. Wade dressed the wounds, and the dog was shot. The head will be forwarded to Toronto for analysis.

Blows Eye Out.

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 14.—William Swartz, a 14-year-old boy, found a cartridge, struck it with a hammer, and had his eye completely blown out. He is in the hospital in a serious condition, but is expected to live.

TWO ENGLISH AVIATORS DROWN IN THE THAMES

Engine Exploded When the Aeroplane Reached Water

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Two British airmen, L. F. MacDonald and a man named Inglis, were drowned in the River Thames yesterday afternoon.

The aviators were flying at a height well above the river when the machine suddenly swooped downward. Immediately upon coming in contact with the water the engine exploded.

One of the aviators clung for a while to the top of the machine, but he sank before the boats, which were hurriedly put off from shore, could reach him.

The accident occurred at Long Reach between Purfleet and Greenhithe on the Lower Thames, where many of the ships of the British navy undergo their trials over the measured mile.

Will Receive Suffragettes.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The British Government yesterday reversed its ban placed on the reception of deputations of suffragettes and agreed to welcome in the House of Commons a body of working women and the representatives of the Women's Social and Political Union next week.

Premier Asquith has deputed Lloyd-George to receive the women, and the Chancellor probably will be accompanied by the Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Sir Edward Grey.

OHIO FLOOD STOPS.

River Comes To Standstill and Worst Is Thought To Be Over.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 14.—After doing thousands of dollars worth of damage, as well as causing about 3,000 familes to abandon their homes, at least temporarily, the flood of the Ohio river at this point came almost to a standstill here last night. The river is rising at the rate of one-tenth of a foot every four hours, but river men believe it will be at a standstill before to-night. It is believed that the crest of the flood has been reached and that the worst is over. Last night a dozen schoolhouses harbored families that have been driven from their homes, while twenty-five municipal free "soup" or eating houses have been established and are working to their capacity.

Heavy Toll of Trolleys.

ALBANY, N.Y., Jan. 14.—Two hundred and ninety deaths, 86 fractured skulls, 369 broken limbs, 1,398 serious injuries—this was the toll of accidents on surface, elevated and suburban traction lines in New York City for the year 1912, according to the report of the public service commission for the first district, made public yesterday.

Thirty thousand passengers were injured and nearly 7,000 employes.

COUNTESS ABERDEEN AND MISS VIOLET ASQUITH FIND GREAT PLEASURE IN VISITING THE NEW YORK PUBLIC SCHOOLS

LEFT TO RIGHT. MRS. HENRY PHIPPS, MISS BURCHENALL, COUNTESS OF ABERDEEN, MISS VIOLET ASQUITH AND SCHOOL CHILDREN IN P. S. No. 188. PHOTO © BY J. R. JOHNSON-1913

Ever since their arrival in New York Lady Aberdeen and Miss Violet Asquith, the British Premier's daughter, have been kept busy with the many social functions arranged in their honor. Mrs. Henry Phipps, one of New York's prominent society women, has done a great deal to entertain the English visitors.

In the above photograph are pictured Lady Aberdeen, Miss Asquith, Mrs. Phipps and Miss Elizabeth Burchenall, with some of the children from one of the public schools which the party visited as part of a programme arranged by the leaders in educational and health movements. Miss Burchenall is the originator of folk dancing in the public schools.

FREE LUMBER MAY FIGURE IN U.S. TARIFF CHANGES

The Tax on Luxuries Must be Kept Up, However, Declares Chairman Underwood, and He Would Maintain the Barrier on Fine Silk.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Free rough and dressed lumber, hewn and squared timber, shingles, laths and fence posts, retention of approximately the present high tariff on the higher grades of silks and reductions in the cheaper silks used by the common people, and a penalizing, drastic tariff bar to shut out "dynamited" silk, were indicated yesterday as parts of the expected Democratic revision program.

The House committee on ways and means devoted the day to hearings on the wood and silk schedules of the tariff law, and when the testimony and examinations were closed, the sentiment favored the inclusion of these provisions, possibly together with free meats, in the tentative tariff plan the committee will frame to submit to the extra session of Congress.

The burden of the testimony on the wooden schedule was a plea for the preservation of the present tariff rates. Silk, involving immense interests, presented a complexity of technicalities, perhaps greater than in any of the other 13 schedules of the tariff law. "Silks," according to Horace B. Cheney of South Manchester, Conn., as spokesman for the silk manufacturers of the country, "depend upon fashion; if women want anything they will pay the amount they have to get it."

Mr. Underwood outlined his view, in which he represents the Democratic majority of the committee that will frame the new schedule.

"We want to get a large amount of revenue on luxuries," said Mr. Underwood, "so that we can put a less tax on the necessities of life. Where there is a large percentage of imports we do not want to cut the rates. We are desirous, however, of cutting the rates where there is no competition and no revenue."

OIL LAMP EXPLODED

Mother is Dead From Burns But Daughter May Recover

Canadian Press Despatch.

Strathroy, Ont., Jan. 14— Mrs. A. H. Foe is dead as the result of burns sustained in an accident last night. Miss Foe is suffering greatly but has a fighting chance.

The ladies conduct a restaurant and confectionery store on Front street, and after locking up for the night were going upstairs above the store, where they reside. Mrs. Foe was going up first and Miss Foe was following with a coal oil lamp. Mrs. Foe fell backward on Miss Foe pinning her to the stairs, the lamp exploding, setting the building and the clothing of the ladies on fire. Mr. Fred. Gould, who was passing the store at the time, heard the screams and saw Miss Foe, who was frantically attempting to extinguish the flames on her mother. He shouted for help, then kicked the door in and carried Miss Foe out.

Chief Wilson and others arrived, carried Mrs. Foe out and extinguished the burning clothing. The fire department immediately arrived, and soon had the fire in the building out.

Medical aid was promptly on the scene, and everything possible was done to relieve the suffering of the two ladies.

WOULD ABOLISH TITLES IN CANADA

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 14.—Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has a motion on the order paper for to-morrow proposing the abolition of titles in Canada. "Canada is a democratic country," he says, "and titles tend to create class distinction."

He would abolish the title of Honorable as applied to Cabinet Ministers and others and do away with practice of Cabinet recommending certain Canadians for Knighthood. [illegible]

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Jan. 14.—An early morning fire in Colleman's bakery on Euclid avenue caused fifteen thousand dollars' damage. Twenty-eight horses were suffocated.

CALGARY LOSS A MILLION.

Fire Still Burning and Slaughter House May Go.

CALGARY, Alta., Jan. 14.—The losses arising out of the destruction of the stock and buildings of P. Burns packing plant Sunday will total approximately $1,000,000, said Manager Black yesterday. This is fully covered by insurance. The company lost 4,000 carcasses, but are able to take care of their business just the same, as they have a large herd of cattle in close proximity to Calgary.

The fire is still burning, and it is feared the slaughter house may now be consumed with thousands of barrels of lard in addition to much expensive machinery.

GIVE ATTENTION TO THE DOWNIE STREET SEWER

With his mind [illegible] future contingencies, Alderman Johnston urged upon the Council last night the importance of looking into the Downie street creek matter. Every year adjoining property suffers much damage and inconvenience through the creek flooding adjacent land, and he wished the Council to take the matter up and adopt remedial measures.

The matter was promised attention.

FOWL BY WEIGHT.

He also brought up the question of compelling all fowl on the market to be sold by weight. This was left with the Property Committee.

STICKS TO HIS POLICY

Austen Chamberlain Refuses To Part With Food Tax Plank.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Austen Chamberlain announced at Birmingham last night, that he could not accept responsibility for the decision of the Unionists to abandon the proposal to impose taxes on food imported into the British Isles. He could not turn back, he said, on the cause he had championed, and while he would continue loyally to serve his leaders and his party, he feared that the decision the party had taken would prove calamitous.

It was expected that Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, would announce yesterday whether he would accept the memorial addressed to him by the Unionists, advocating the policy of abandoning the food taxes at the next general election, but he has been in further consultation with Lord Lansdowne and other leaders, and has as yet given no indication of his intention.

Nearly Ready for Lords.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The House of Commons concluded last night the report stage of the home rule bill. Two days, Wednesday and Thursday will be given over to debate on the third reading and the bill will be sent to the House of Lords late Thursday night for a formal reading on the succeeding Monday.

When the second reading is proposed, the Duke of Devonshire, will move its rejection, as his uncle, the late duke, did in the case of Mr. Gladstone's bill, twenty years ago.

Students May Ban Dress Suits.

KINGSTON, Jan. 14.—Alma Mater Society of Queen's placed itself on record as being opposed to members attending college dances and other functions in dress suits. They object on the grounds that custom prevents many from attending. It is felt, however, that this will not mean any revolutionary change in the conduct of Queen's dance for such motions cannot upset the world-wide rule of etiquette which calls for dress suit at social functions.

Electors Name Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Electors in 46 states met yesterday and formally elected Woodrow Wilson to the Presidency, and Thomas R. Marshall to the vice-presidency of the Unitel States.

Returns prepared by the electors chosen at the polls last November are now on their way by mail to Washington to the President pro tem of the Senate.

To Establish New Rules.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—The adjournment for two months more of the hearing before the Dominion Railway Commission of the western freight rates, [illegible] has occasioned comment and is interpreted as meaning that the transportation problem is to be shelved this session of Parliament. The case has been pending before the Railway Commission for nearly a year. The recent adjournment was procurred by the counsel for the Government, who will undertake to establish a schedule of rates for the west which will be more reasonable than those now in force. In short the Government is endeavoring to have readjusted the western freight rates.

Swear To Stand Firm.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—At a union meeting of striking garment workers, several thousand of whom were women, raised their hands and took an oath never to appeal to the manufacturers for work, and to continue the strike, until their union is recognized. Five young women striking garment workers were arrested yesterday on complaint of their former employer, who told the police the girls had almost caused a panic in his shop by crying fire as they ran through the outer halls of the building.

SULZER SAYS STATE MUST TAKE OVER LONG SAULT

He Declares That the New York State Legislature Exceeded its Powers in Granting Charter to Corporation and Will Cancel Rights.

ALBANY, N.Y., Jan. 14.—In a special message to the Legislature last night, Governor Sulzer recommended that the charter granted to the Long Sault Development Co. by the Legislature of 1907, be immediately repealed. Attorney-General Carmody reported to the Senate recently that in his opinion the Legislature exceeded its authority in granting the charter, the act being unconstitutional, and in this opinion, the governor concurs. He recommends, however, that the power be developed by the state for general distribution, and fails to consider the claim that such development may affect navigation.

The company was incorporated with a capital of $1,000,000, and its directors for the first year were: Michael H. Flaherty, Frank S. Smith, Henry H. Warren, Walter F. Willson and John C. Crapser. The corporation proposed to develop power from the St. Lawrence River, which, it is estimated, would amount to 1,000,000 horsepower if fully developed. The company has paid $35,000 into the state treasury, which the governor suggests be repaid to the company with interest.

The company has never begun operations because of its failure to get favorable legislation from the federal and Canadian Governments. A bill passed the U. S. Senate, but was defeated in the House of Representatives. Governor Sulzer said yesterday he was one of those who opposed the measure in Washington.

In the course of his message, Governor Sulzer said:

"The State of New York, in my opinion, is now committed to the policy of conserving all of its natural resources, and particularly of developing our vast water powers, so that they may be of benefit to all the people of the state."

"The Attorney-General, the State Conservation Commission, and myself are convinced that this act is void and unconstitutional, and that the appropriate action to be taken by the Legislature at this time is to repeal the said act.

"Not only is said act violative of the provisions of our state constitution, but its provisions are in other respects improvident, unwise and indefensible, both from an industrial and an economical point of view.

"Investigations made by the engineers of the State Conservation Commission demonstrate, among other things, that a full economic development at the Long Sault Rapids will produce one million horse-power, of which, by treaty arrangement with Canada, it is to be expected that New York will receive no less than one-half. It is hard to conceive of the vastness of 500,000 horse-power, transmuted into electrical energy. It is nearly three-quarters of the sum total of all the water powers now developed in New York State, including that at Niagara. It is estimated to be more than sufficient to run one-third of all the industries of our state now operated by steam.

"At present it is reported as practicable to transmit power from the Long Sault Rapids to New York City for steady continuous loads much cheaper than such loads can now be carried by steam power. This will inevitably result in a great saving to the consumer, and be of inestimable value to the state.

"In order that we secure for all our citizens the many and the lasting beneficial results of the proper development of our natural resources, particularly of our now unused water powers, in accordance with our constructive policy in these matters, to which our state now stands committed, I respectfully recommend that chapter 355 of the laws of 1907—the Long Sault Development Co.'s charter—be immediately repealed."

Fire In Binder Twine Co.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 14.—The Brantford Cordage Co., binder twine manufacturers, had a close call from being entirely wiped out by a disastrous fire here last night, the origin of which is unknown. The fire broke out in the heavily-stocked warehouse, which contained 800 tons of twine, all of which is a total loss. The loss is estimated by General Manager O. Messecar at $100,000, for which insurance in part is held.

Italian Is Killed.

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—While crossing a small pond in a field just east of Niagara street, on Queen street, about five o'clock yesterday afternoon, Donata Marroni slipped on the ice and was almost instantly killed when a stone slab which he was carrying on his shoulder, fell against his head, crushing the skull. Dr. L. B. Williams was summoned by the police, but life was extinct when he arrived.

Uranium Still Fast.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 14.—All efforts to pull the Uranium off the shore at Chebucto Head so far have failed. The weather may change today, and if the wind comes around to the southeast, the sea will probably make short work of the Uranium, if she is still hinged to the rocks.

Crown Prince Alexis Again Ill.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—A St. Petersburg despatch to The Daily Mail says that Crown Prince Alexis is again confined to his bed.

Previous reports concerning the conditions of the crown prince indicated that he had practically recovered from his serious illness.

NEW PAPER FOR GALT.

Prohibition Daily Is Projected by the Local Optionists.

GALT, Jan. 14.—Ex-Mayor T. Patterson, chairman of the executive committee of local optionists, proposed establishing a new paper in Galt as an alternative to a new hotel at a public meeting. Rev. R. E. Knowles opposed the proposition, and it was deferred. As a matter of fact, for a considerable time negotiations have been in progress to start a second paper. Matters are not yet in shape for a definite announcement. A rumor is that at least two schemes are under consideration. A syndicate is said to be organised and requires a capital of $25,000, partly subscribed by substantial parties. The movement is non-political and on strictly commercial lines.

BIG GAIN FOR STATE.

Britain Gets Phones For Almost Half What Was Asked.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The British Government is to pay to the National Telephone Co. of the United Kingdom the sum of $62,576,380 in respect of the transfer of the company's system to the state, according to a decision just reached by the Railway and Canal Commission, sitting as a court of arbitration.

The whole of the telephones in the British Isles passed into the hands of the state on Jan. 1, 1912. The National Telephone Co. originally claimed $105,000,000 for its interests, but during the trial just ended, which lasted 73 days, this claim was reduced by many millions by way of agreement.

GUTHRIE MAY INDICATE PLANS OF THE OPPOSITION

TO WATCH COMMONS.

Miss Violet Asquith Is Keenly Interested In Naval Debate.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—Miss Violet Asquith, the talented daughter of Britain's Premier, who is the guest to-day of Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier, has been invited to occupy a seat on the floor of the House of Commons when Parliament reassembles to-day.

Miss Asquith, who is almost as keen a student of the science of politics as her famous father, is particularly anxious to see and hear Canada's legislators at work, and while Lady Aberdeen left for Toronto last night, it is probable that Miss Asquith will remain in Ottawa a day or two longer to listen to the naval debate.

FARMER IS FOUND FROZEN

WALLACEBURG. Jan. 14.—The body of James Murphy, a farmer living near Whitebread, was found lying beside the rails on the Pere Marquette tracks about six o'clock Sunday afternoon.

It is supposed he was walking home from Wallaceburg early Sunday morning and was overcome by the cold. An inquest has been ordered.

Naval Debate Resumed To-day in House of Commons

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—The naval debate will be resumed to-day by Hugh Guthrie, and will probably continue for some time. Whether the Government will attempt to make it the only business of the session until disposed of, or is content with bringing it up on Government days, has not yet been definitely determined. Much interest attaches to Mr. Guthrie's speech, because it is expected that he will foreshadow the nature and extent of the Opposition. A great many other matters of public importance will have to be neglected if anything like the monopoly of the time of the House is given to the navy bill.

The Bank Act, for example, is interesting a great many members, and in this connection it is stated that a battle royal may be expected between Postmaster-General Lemieux and Sir Rodolphe Forget. It is also more than likely that the demand of the shareholders and depositors of the Farmers' Bank, for reimbursement by the Government will be brought before Parliament at any early date.

Very few members are in the city and if the Liberals have agreed upon a definite plan of Opposition to the naval bill, it had not yet been disclosed. The likelihood is that they will caucus upon the subject again within a few days.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST
BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Company.

Elnora silently uncovered the custard with preserved cherries on top and handed it and the spoon to the child. Never did food disappear faster. The salad went next, and a sandwich and half a chicken breast followed.

"I better leave the rest for Jimmy and Belle," he said. "They're 'ist fightin' hungry."

Elnora gave him the remainder of the carefully prepared lunch. The boy clutched it and ran with a sidewise hop like a wild thing.

Elnora covered the dishes and cup, polished the spoon, replaced it and closed the beautiful case. She caught her breath in a tremulous laugh.

"If Aunt Margaret knew that she'd never forgive me," she said. "It seems as if secrecy is literally forced upon me, and I hate it. What will I do for lunch? I'll have to go sell my arrows and keep enough money for a restaurant sandwich."

So she walked hurriedly into town, sold her points at a good price, deposited her funds and went away with a neat little bank book and the note from the Limberlost carefully folded inside. Elnora passed down the great hall that morning, and no one paid the slightest attention to her. The truth was she looked so like every one else that she was perfectly inconspicuous. But in the coat room there were members of her class. Surely no one intended it, but the whisper was too loud.

"Look at the girl from the Limberlost in the clothes that woman gave her!"

Elnora turned on them. "I beg your pardon," she said unsteadily; "I couldn't help hearing that! No one gave me these clothes. I paid for them myself."

Some one muttered, "Pardon me," but incredulous faces greeted her.

Elnora felt driven. "Aunt Margaret selected them, and she meant to give them to me," she explained, "but I wouldn't take them. I paid for them myself." There was a dead silence.

"Drink this," she said, holding it to him.

"Don't you believe me?" panted Elnora.

"Really, it is none of our affair," said another girl. "Come on; let's go."

Elnora stepped before the girl who had spoken. "You have made this your affair," she said, "because you told a thing which was not true. No one gave me what I am wearing. I paid for my clothes myself with money I earned selling moths to the Bird Woman. I just came from the bank where I deposited what I did not use. Here is my credit." Elnora drew out and offered the little red book. "Surely you will believe that," she said.

"Why, of course," said the girl who first had spoken. "We met such a lovely woman in Brownlee's store, and she said she wanted our help to buy some things for a girl, and that's how we came to know."

"Dear Aunt Margaret," said Elnora. "It was like her to ask you. Isn't she splendid?"

"She is indeed," chorused the girls. Elnora set down her lunch box and books and unpinned her hat, hanging it beside the others. While her back was turned into the room came the girl of her encounter on the first day, walked to the rack and, with an exclamation of approval, took down Elnora's hat.

"Just the thing I have been wanting," she said. "I never saw such beautiful quills in all my life. They match my new broadcloth to perfection. I've got to have that kind of quills for my hat. I never saw the like. Whose is it, and where did it come from?"

No one said a word, for Elnora's question, the reply and her answer had gone the rounds of the high school. Every one knew that the Limberlost girl had come out ahead, and Sadie Reed had not felt amiable when the little flourish had been added to Elnora's name in the algebra class. Elnora's swift glance was pathetic, but no one helped her. Sadie Reed glanced from the hat to the faces around her and wondered.

"Why, this is the freshman section. Whose hat is it?" she asked again, this time impatiently.

"That's the tassel of the cornstalk," said Elnora, with a forced laugh.

The response was genuine. Every one shouted. Sadie Reed blushed, but she laughed also.

"Well, it's beautiful," she said, "especially the quills. They are exactly what I want. I know I don't deserve any kindness from you, but I do wish you would tell me at whose store you got those quills."

"Gladly," said Elnora. "You can't get quills like those at a store. They are from a living bird. Phoebe Simms gathers them in her orchard as her peacocks shed them. They are wing quills from the males."

Then there was a perfect silence. How was Elnora to know that not a girl there would have told that?

"I haven't a doubt but I can get you some," she offered. "She gave Aunt Margaret a great bunch, [illegible] part of them. I am quite sure she has more and would spare some."

Citrus Fruits Will Be Dear.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 14.—Instead of the estimated 40,000 cars of citrus fruit, it is probable, according to the fruit and railroad experts, that not more than 10,000 cars of oranges and lemons will be shipped east from this region when the frost bitten crops are gathered. Then days will elapse before the aggregate value of the combined crop will be known.

Mrs. Geo. Boorman, of 906 Selkirk Avenue, Winnipeg, says:—

"Pimples and sores broke out all over my little girl's face and hands. They spread, and set up inflammation. In the end her face was one mass of sores! We tried ointment after ointment, but there was no noticeable improvement.

"A neighbor advised my trying Zam-Buk and leaving off all other remedies. I did as she advised. Frequent applications of Zam-Buk soothed the pains and allayed the inflammation, and before long the sores began to look healthier. Gradually every scab and pimple disappeared and the sores were healed completely, leaving the child's face smooth and white as possible.

"Since then, while using an old pair of scissors, they slipped, cutting my left thumb badly. Inflammation set in and I feared blood poison, but began to apply Zam-Buk. The pain was soothed directly, and within a week the wound was nicely healed."

NEW C.P.R. BRIDGE AT HIGHLANDS

The new bridge over the river St Lawrence between the Highlands station and Caughnawaga, erected by the Canadian Pacific Railway is now open and the double tracks are in operation. This will continue until well into the spring when the work of erecting and floating in the two final 408 channel spans will commence and single tracks will be reverted to for a short space of time. The double tracking of the line between Windsor street station and Farnham Junction has already proved of great servicve and trains are operated with greater facility than heretofore, while freight is also more easily manipulated and the holding up of trains is entirely eliminated. The double tracking of the Lachine bridge has not only been a great undertaking but has involved the spending of three millions of dollars. The only piece of double track which remains to be carried out to complete the approach from the United States and its New York connections is the bridge which crosses the canal before reaching the Highlands station. The question is already being considered but nothing has yet been definitely decided as to what kind of a bridge will be used at this point, nor yet when the work will commence.

The bridge which is 3128 feet in length when completed will contain steel spans as follows; six 80 feet long, sixteen 120 feet, four 270 feet, two 122 feet, eight 240 feet, and four 270 feet, and four 408 feet. As stated previously only two 408 feet spans remain to be inserted, to replace the old cantelever spans over the channel which portion has been left undisturbed until the finishing touches are made. The piers on which the girders are resting consist of open casement to pier seven, counting from the island side and from 8 to 15 inclusive the pneumatic casing has been used. 42

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

Intercolonial Calendar

Bringing visions of comfortable and luxurious travel through a territory unrivalled for scenic beauty the calendar of the Intercolonial Railway just received with the compliments of the Traffic Department is warmly appreciated as a happy reminder of past enjoyments and as an inspiration for future travel.

The design of the calendar is greatly enhanced by a surprinting of gold on the background of maple leaves. As a reminder of the Intercolonial and its fine train service it is excellent. As something both ornamental and useful for office use it is much to be desired.

OFFICERS ELECTED FOR COW TESTING ASSOCIATION

At a meeting held in Keene recently, officers were elected for the Keene Cow Testing Association as follows;

President— Christopher Howson.
Vice-President— J. M. Drummond.
Secretary— W. A. Anderson.
Directors— Morley Smithson, Jos. Taylor, Jr., M. D. Wallace.

A peroposal favoring the joining together of all the associations in centre for the purpose of holding a convention every winter is being considered. The object of holding such a convention would be the drawing together of the associations so that the members could discuss dairy matters of interest to the entire district, and any conclusions which they might draw or any resolutions which they might pass or adopt would have a strong influence as they would be backed up by the entire centre. Some agricultural authority would be secured to address each convention on a dairy topic and here again would be an advantage in union of the different associations as men could be obtained to address a large meeting of this kind where they could not be secured for a smaller meeting.

In case this plan is completed and a convention held this winter, it is likely that Prof. J. H. Grisdale, B.S.A., Superintendent of Experimental Farms, will deliver an address.

Good Form

For the Hostess.

You may have a dinner with the best appointment and cuisine, and if your guests are badly chosen the dinner will be a social failure.

Certain elements will not coalesce, and the woman who tries to force the process is courting an explosion. Choose guests as you would shoes—because they fit.

You may be catholic in your taste and enjoy the butterfly without a brain and the woman who is all brain, but without social grace; the artist or musician, the snob who distrusts all the clever coterie, the man who loves a gay story and the woman who is easily shocked.

But gather those friends around a common board and you may count on their boredom.

If you must have a mixed dinner pray for tact in the seating. "A man cares what he eats; a woman cares whom she sits next."

Never seat your guests according to social position. The practice makes neither the dinner nor the hostess popular. If you put the socially unimportant together your entertaining will never be a success.

Custom has it that those who sit on the right and left of the host and hostess may feel themselves singled out for attention, but choose for reasons. Do not give your guests a chance to gibe at you as a money worshiper or one with an ax to grind.

Do not have dinners so large as to prevent general conversation. Not all who go out to dinner are blessed with manners, and the hostess should have it in her power to go to the rescue of the guest who is neglected by her neighbors.

Introducing the Debutante.

No young girl in society is ever allowed to accept invitations to dinners or dances or anything, in fact, except children's parties or schoolgirl luncheons or very informal festivities given especially for juveniles until she has been formally introduced to the social world. This is done by her mother giving for her some sort of rather formal function, which usually takes the form of a dance or large afternoon or evening reception.

To this affair are invited all the friends of the mother and also those young friends of the daughter who have already made their debut into society.

If an afternoon reception has been chosen as the initial festivity of the debutante daughter the affair is usually held at from 3 to 6 or from 4 to 7 p. m. Promptly at the appointed hour the mother takes her place in the drawing room near the door leading to the entrance hall. The daughter who is to be introduced stands at her left and assists her mother in receiving the guests. If, as is usually the case, the young girl is a stranger to many of her mother's guests the mother after welcoming each visitor says simply, "Mrs Burton, this is my daughter Dorothy." or, "Mr. Carrington, let me present you to my daughter." Each person so presented should talk a moment or two with the young girl and then pass on.

Don'ts For Engaged Girls.

Don't make unreasonable demands on your fiance's time. Remember that his work must come first if he is ever to earn an income sufficient for himself and his wife. So don't be disagreeable to him if he is kept late at the office of an evening when he had promised to take you out. He will be just as annoyed about this as you are, and there is no need to make matters worse by having a scene.

Don't forget to pay every possible attention to his people, particularly his mother and sisters. They may perhaps be a little jealous of you at first, and if you are foolish enough to resent this the situation may become very unpleasant indeed.

Don't "spoon" or quarrel in public, for by doing so you would place yourself in a ridiculous situation and the onlookers in an embarrassing one.

Don't drag your fiance's name into every conversation. It sounds silly.

Don't write affectionate postcards. If you want to be affectionate do it in a letter, which cannot be read by any one except the man to whom it is addressed.

Art of Receiving Compliments.

One of the first things a girl has to learn is the art of receiving compliments, neither appropriating nor disclaiming them.

It is sometimes difficult and to blush is fatal.

Oh, those youthful blushes! How distressing they are to their vexed owners, and yet what a charm they give to ingenuous girlhood.

The skillful complimenter embarrasses no one, not even the shyest girl.

He knows how to convey an expression of his appreciation without exactly saying it.

Such a man can flatter one's self love quite sufficiently in merely saying, "How well you look!"

The tone and manner are eloquent enough to supplement the poverty of the words, and their meagerness allows the recipient of the compliment to accept it without embarrassment.

A florid compliment makes a woman look—or at least feel—a perfect goose.

But they belong to a past age.

Some girls in poor families have mighty little to [illegible]

TIMELY WORDS OF COUNSEL IN THE INTEREST OF PETERBOROUGH BOYS

Written by Mr. Nash, Boy's Work Secretary Y.M.C.A.

"Just the art of being kind is all the great world needs," and yet kindness in many people seems to be a lost art. "I sometimes think," says some one, "that nothing in the world is worth while except kindness. It is my creed." Joseph Parker puts it this way: "Marvellous is the power of kindness. They will do most in life who are most considerate. They may be charged with sentimentalism by those who do not understand the power of human feeling, but they will be credited with philosophy by men who understand the genius of sympathy." O that kindness might cover the earth as the waters cover the sea!

O that we might see the beauty of the kindly act of the woman of old! She did what she could—and she did while He lived. The fragrance of Mary's ointment has been wafted down through the ages. We to-day inhale its sweetness because the alabaster box was broken not upon a lifeless form, but upon a living person.

"If I should die to-night,
My friends would look upon my quiet face
Before they laid it in its resting place,
And deem that death had left it almost fair;
And, laying snow white flowers
against my hair,
Would smooth it down with tearful
tenderness,
And fold my hands with lingering
caress,
Poor hands so empty and so cold tonight.

'Oh friends, I pray to-night,
Keep not your kisses for my dead cold brow—
The way is lonely, let me feel them
now.
Think gently of me; I am travel
worn;
My faltering feet are pierced with many a thorn;
Forgive, O hearts estranged, forgive
I plead;
When dreamless rest is mine I shall not need
The tenderness for which I long to-night."

Turkey's Time Meridians.

Through the center of the mosque of St. Sophia runs the theoretical meridian which gave the Turks true local time—1 hour 56 minutes 53 seconds fast on Greenwich—until two years ago the new government fell in with the standard system of time zones and came into the eastern European zone, exactly two hours ahead of Greenwich time. For religious purposes, however, 12 o'clock always happens at sunset, and noon thus wanders with the seasons all round the clock.—Westminster Gazette.

Bernhardt's Mascots.

Sarah Bernhardt possesses more lucky odds and ends than any round dozen other actresses. These she carries with her on her travels in an enormous brass bound chest. It includes photographs of those who have brought luck to the great star, jewels of considerable value and bits of old iron, some of which she has picked up in the streets, for Bernhardt is reputed never to pass such an object.

FRY'S—purest of cocoas—is one of the few things that children "just love," and want "lots of," that happens to be really good for them. Prepared by exclusive processes developed in nearly 200 years' experience, and of scrupulous purity, FRY'S gets the highest possible food value from the cocoa bean. But no argument speaks so loudly as a cup of the delicious food beverage itself. Its subtle aroma, its enticing flavor, its purity, its entire solubility and economy have made FRY'S the favorite the world over.

Just try it yourself and see. All particular grocers sell FRY'S.

A MATERNITY ALLOWANCE

One of the features of the Insurance Act in England that is now going into effect is the provision assuring a maternity allowance of $7.50 per child, for every child born in the country. There are about 7,500-000 children born each year in the United Kingdom, and of these only 1,000,000 are born into circumstances where the grant is not likely to be applied for. The maternity allowance is one of these acts which everyone must commend as sane and practical Christianity. The provision of a little ready money just at a time when the poor need it most, in providing comforts for the mother and child, will go far toward making happier the lot of millions of women in the old land.

Australia has a maternity allowance of $25, the children of aborigines or Chinese being excluded from the operation of the Act. It is estimated that this encouragement to child-birth will help much in increasing the birth-rate in Australia, of giving to the country a population that is intensely Australian, and it serves a humanitarian end as well.

There are many arrangements for mothers' pensions and payments to make the rearing of families a little easier under certain circumstances, but where there is a large population of people living from hand to mouth, the maternity allowance is one of the kindest and most Christian of legislative enactments.

THE PEOPLE OPPOSED TO IT

A dispatch from Calgary says that at a meeting called in that city to discuss the naval question, Hon. Frank Oliver was hooted off the platform when he began to criticise the Borden proposals. Dr. Michael Clark received the same treatment when he inveighed against the Canadian gift of Dreadnoughts to Britain.

The courage that filled the Liberals during the recess, with their brave talk of obstruction, an election on this question, and the necessity of saving Canada's self-government, is oozing away with the finding out of the people's real sentiment. If the Opposition were so foolish as to force an election on this proposition, they would find themselves handicapped in Quebec, because Sir Wilfrid proposes the spending of even a larger amount of money on building a Canadian navy, manned by Canadians. He would find himself unable to make gains in the British part of Canada, because British Canada wants to help Britain, to give her little portion toward the common defence of the Empire, and not merely the guarding of Canada's shores. Canada can do both, but she ought to help Britain first, as that is the most effective way of proceeding.

The prospects are, now that Parliament is about to resume, that the Opposition will confine itself to prolonging the debate, without trying to block the bill. The Senate also will fall into line. The Liberals have not the courage to put their program to the test before the country

THE TRENT CANAL

The announcement by Hon. Frank Cochrane at Orillia, that the estimates would contain provision for the completion of the Trent Canal to Georgian Bay and Lake Ontario will be received with delight by the people of the Trent Valley. It is not a very costly piece of work, considering the other huge projects Canada has under way in canal building, but it will provide some opportunity for the canal to be of real service. The Borden Government has shown itself keenly responsive to the wishes of the people, and this is after all, the test of a real Government. When the people want a thing, and it is evident that they are strongly united on it, they ought to get it. The Borden Government is earning the good wishes of Peterborough and every other city and town along the Trent Waterways.

COMPULSORY MILITARY SERVICE

The strong appeals by the Minister of Militia, Col. Sam Hughes, for an extension of the cadet system in Canada, strikes right into the heart of the military needs of the people of Canada. There are many Canadians, and their number has grown of late, who believe that it is folly for nations to war over any question, that national honor may not always be a justifiable excuse for the massing of hundreds of thousands or millions of men on gory battle fields, to be slain without compunction. War is legalized murder, but it rises above the general law, and cannot always be held in abeyance. The only thing that can prevent it is the creation of a peace sentiment so strong among the people that their rulers will not dare to run counter to public opinion. But while war in itself is all that Sherman said it was, and while there is a fast growing disinclination to resort to it for any save the most unbreakable of deadlocks, there is yet reason for every country to attend to the training of its youth in the arts that make great military nations!

The population which has in it a large proportion of men with military training is much better fitted for utility in the world than a population of untrained citizens. That is one of the real facts underlying the growth of compulsory military tary service. There is an extreme to which compulsory service may be carried, of course, as some of the European countries carry it. But in the case of Switzerland, for instance, it has been of most immense service. Every Swiss has served in the army, but there is no standing army outside of a permanent staff of about 300 generals and colonels. The men of Switzerland recently voted to extend the period of compulsory service. The army is a strictly democratic organizatioin, every man on it is a real soldier, and his habits of action prompt disciplined mind are splendid factors in producing a high scale of civilian life. The idea that a great standing army is a necessity for the protection of a country is made false by such a system as the Swiss people pursue. The German system is more of a burden on the people. The standing army, and its immediate reserves number nearly 1,500,000 men, and back of that is a trained reserve amounting to about 2,000,000 more. Germany could, if put to the test, put about 10,000,000 men into the field, but such a mobilization would be so gigantic as to be impossible. Yet the men to do it with are there. The success of the Balkan allies, showing the effects of compulsory training of men in their youth, affords more evidence from a war standpoint. But the training has no less a benefit in times of peace. The Australian system involves the training of cadets from 12 years to 18 years, and then from 18 to 26 the young man is a citizen soldier. The cadet system is suited to Anglo-Saxon countries, where there is too much independence, too much love of liberty, for an ordinary compulsory service system.

WOULD HAVE RANK AND FILE IN BOARD OF TRADE

Council Unanimous in the Feeling That More Aggressiveness Should be Displayed.

Steps to promote more aggressive Board of Trade in Peterborough and ways and means whereby such a movement could be started, came in for an interesting discussion yesterdat at the session of the Committee of the whole Council. The unanimous feeling was that something should be done and done quickly to stir up enthusiasm and resurrect new life in the Board. The fact that the organization has not had a regular meeting since last March was considered as a lamentable indication of the lack of activity and progressiveness usually associated with any industrial body.

Alderman Johnston thought that a more enthusiastic and co-operative body would be created by bringing in mechanics and workingmen. While not depreciating the importance of having business and professional men largely represented, he nevertheless felt that more interest would be aroused by the adoption of his suggestion. His remarks were heartily backed up by the Council, who generally regretted the lethargic condition of the Board at the present time.

As usual the Manufacturers' Committee of the City Council will have three members of the Board of Trade with them as in other years.

MR. GIBBS ASKS FOR DAMAGES

For the Loss of a Horse—Road-Way too Narrow He Says

An action for damages may be entered against the city arising out of the accident in which Mr. R. Gibbs lost a horse at the corner of Water and Hilliard streets last week. A letter from his solicitor, Mr. Geroge H. Hatton, was read at the Council meeting advising council to take steps in reference to the matter as the owner of the horse contends that the road was too narrow between the street car track and the side-walk to allow a team to pass with safety. The horse which was one of a team was frightened by a street car sweeper. The communication was referred to the Legal Committee.

The community in which I lived as a boy was so dull that the only remarkable thing there, was a girl named Florida.

FRITZ KUHN ADDRESSES PETERBORO AD. CLUB

G. O. Cameron is the New President—E. E. Logan is Secretary.

It was a great privilege that the business men of Peterborough enjoyed last evening in listening to Mr. Fritz Kuhn, a live-wire business specialist of Ottawa, who spoke at the Ad Club dinner held in Hooper's Palm Parlors. Mr. Kuhn is an "idea" man. Many and invaluable were the helpful, practical suggestions he advanced and which would fit right on to the businesses of local merchants. In the ordinary course of his work Mr. Kuhn charges for his services $50 per day and expenses. The admirable spirit pervading the Ad Club movement all over America is seen to manifest in Mr. Kuhn, when it is known that he gave of his talent and the better part of two days of his time, and put himself to great inconvenience to come to speak at the Ad Club dinner, and then accept only his expenses. His subject was "Store Service." The largest attendance ever at a local Ad Club dinner were out to profit and take advantage of the proceedings.

Before introducing the speaker of the evening, Mr. Chas. C. Nixon, Advertising Manager for Farm and Dairy, President of the Peterborough Ad Club, suggested several lines of work open to the Ad Club in Peterborough. He put the question: "What is the Matter with Peterborough?" He answered that there was nothing wrong with Peterborough, and again asked, "Is all right with our citizens and business men?" Peterborough's possibilities, he said, were unparalleled. He compared real estate values in Peterborough with real estate values in places of similar size elsewhere. He referred to seeming indifference of the local authorities, which would permit a large display sign for a Toronto fur house to stand on city property on a most advantageous point for city advertising, namely the island north of the C. P. R. bridge.

He cited the need of a suitable book and a map and other information about Peterborough, which could be used for purposes of advertising Peterborough and securing new industries, new citizens, and for inducing conventions to convene here. He pointed out also how the Ad Club was in a position to suggest schemes of civic improvement, working in connection with the Horticultural Society, the Board of Trade and the City Council, making "balls" as it were, for others to fire. In this connection he specifically mentioned a scheme of a driveway connecting up the various parks in the city, this driveway to be improved through competitions limited to certain sections and those streets which might be selected to form this driveway.

Amongst other ideas advanced as to work that should be undertaken by the Ad Club was the matter of suggesting suitable advertising books to the Public Library Board or founding an Ad. Club Library which might be available to all who have need of more information on advertising.

NEW OFFICERS FOR 1913.

At this point in the proceedings an election of officers for the coming year took place. The new officers are; Honorary Presidents, His Worship, Mayor Bradburn and Mr. T. H. G. Denne; President, G. O. Cameron, local manager of the Bell Telephone Company; Vice-President, Jas. Hamilton, of the Peter Hamilton Company, R. H. Ross, of Richard Hall & Son, and A. A. Fowler, Optician with the Nugent Drug Company; Secretary, E. E. Logan, Principal of the Peterborough Business College; Treasurer, Mr. Pennefather, Manager of the Union Bank. It was suggested as being well that the various committees be appointed by these officers as elected, and the elections submitted at the next meeting for approval. This suggestion was adopted by the meeting.

MR. KUHN NOTICED IT

In his opening remarks, Mr. Kuhn asserted that we were not alive to our opportunities in Peterborough. He referred to the sign of the Toronto Fur House on our own civic property, as something that should not be tolerated on such a vantage point for Peterborough's own exclusive advertising.

CORRECT IDEA IN WINDOW LIGHTING

He congratulated the Cressman Company for having adopted his suggestion advanced in his previous address at the Peterborough Ad Club [illegible] that a stranger would not mistake whose windows they were. He referred to Peterborough store fronts as being about the worst lighted at night that they could well be. He pointed out that the proper idea had been put into effect at Richard Hall & Sons, where the lights themselves were concealed and so set as to throw great floods of light on the merchandise in the windows.

The lighting in the windows of the Cressman Company he considered very badly directed. He advised the use of more tungstens as giving more light and at a much less cost.

OTHER LOCAL CRITICISMS.

He congratulated the Kingan Hardware Company and the Peterborough Hardware Company for their excellent window trims, but censured them in that they had no prices on their goods. Other windows he passed criticism upon were The Neil Shoe Company, Smiths', and several of the Jewellers, the criticisms being favorable.

"Getting right down to his subject of "Store Service," the speaker said: "Advertising only begins when the ad is put in the paper. Some people think it ends there. Only when the ad. is followed up, and the customer is satisfied and treated rightly and dealt with in the very way advertised in the advertisement, could the advertising be its greatest success. The people must like the goods and like the store, and like the people who sell the goods."

A point in service was illustrated by a reference, which Mr. Kuhn made to the Oriental Hotel, how obliging and solicitous the clerk was for his (Mr. Kuhn's) welfare.

SERVICE VS. CUT PRICE.

"Give service and get the business," said Mr. Kuhn. "It is not necessary to cut prices. Sell 'service' goods. You will have better customers, you will have better satisfaction and there will be no 'come-backs.'"

HOW PEOPLE WILL PAY FOR SERVICE.

"To show you just how people will pay for service, I would cite the fast trains between Chicago and New York City. Although a higher rate is charged for travelling on these trains, they are always crowded. Should the train fail to make its time a refund of so much per minute is made to the travellers. How many stores make refunds when their service is not satisfactory? It would pay them to make refunds in every case of dissatisfaction. Repeaters are the only customers that count at a profit.

"It is most desirable to know what people think of your goods and of your own service, etc. It is worth a lot to any business man to find out what the people, his customers, think of him, and it is worth while going to considerable inconvenience to get this information."

The possibilities of advertising was instanced by reference to Sears, Roebuck Co., of Chicago, who do an annual business of $81,000,000.00 and this without ever seeing a customer! Their mail is opened on a grind-stone and the money pulled out. He warned that parcels post is coming in this country and our merchants had better now begin to set up and think about this innovation, which will be a great factor in helping or in ruining their businesses.

As a mark of appreciation to show the favor in which the merchants of Peterborough have come to view the work of the Ad Club, it is interesting to know that the Cressman Co. yesterday instructed each of its department heads to attend the Ad Club dinner last evening and hear Mr Kuhn at the firm's expense.

Among those present at the dinner were, M. J. Hickey, Geo. F. Schneider, Robt. H. Ross, W. C. Conway, Walter Stocker, H M Cressman, A A Fowler, F C Cressman, S G Taylor, A C Wolff, A L Wright, H W Coon, B Gillespie, Jos. Curious Christian Names.

British Guiana is a land of quaint Christian names. Rev. L. Crookall quotes from the baptismal register of the church in which he ministered to a congregation of all the colors. Nannie Bellona, Queen Elizabeth, Prince Albert, John Pantaloon and Frank Locust. One negro whose child he christened was called Whisky Emmanuel. Another black man brought his child and when the minister asked the name replied, "Seriatim ad Valorem." Another gave a puzzling answer which sounded like "Ax parson" and when requested to explain said: "Well, parson, my mind gie me to go troo de New Testament. I have had four boys. One was called Matthew, another Mark, another Luke and another John, and this is Acts, parson."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

ON BEHALF OF THE PRINTERS' UNION.

Sir,—We wish to enter a protest against the custom which is all too prevalent in this city of people sending out of town to non-union offices for their printing, thus depriving our members of work and the means of earning a decent living. It is estimated that if all the printing which is taken out of town were done here, it would give employment to at least fifty extra printers.

Our merchants object strenuously to us sending to the mail order houses for our groceries or other merchandise, yet how many of them follow the same course when they want printing done! And our merchants are not the only offenders in this respect. Some churches and religious institutions are equally guilty. Imagine a minister handing an envelope printed in a non-union office in another town, to a union printer for his donation! In other words saying, "I want you to support me and the various works of my church, but I will not help you earn your living or better your working condition; instead I will send the money you give me out of town to people who will do the work cheaper, and who are antagonistic to you, where it will be used to prevent you getting fair wages, shorter working hours and sanitary work shops." Some of our churches do this—not all. Is it any wonder that some of the union men refuse to go to church?

Another case that is brought to our notice is a window card advertising "Alice in Wonderland," which is being presented under the auspices of one of our "Christian" organizations. This card was printed out of town and does not bear the Union Label the insigna of fair wages, reasonable hours and sanitary work shops. And yet the union men and their families are asked to buy tickets for this entertainment. Is it not unreasonable, to say the least? The offices in town are well equipped to do this work. Why not take it to them and help build up your own town?

The Printers' Union is striving for living wages and sanitary working conditions. We believe in patronizing home industry, and especially in patronizing those who show their friendliness towards us by demanding this label on all their printing.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, we remain, on behalf of the Union Printers of Peterborough, Respectfully yours.

JAMES P. DILLON,
President.
CHAS. HAMMACOTT,
Secretary.

MONTREAL MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—There continues to be a good demand from European sources for Manitoba wheat, but buyers have not been disposed to follow the advance in prices on this side, consequently bids today in most cases were from 1c to 3c per bushel out of line, and business was much quieter. The foreign demand for Manitoba barley is good, and sales of several loads were made. There was no improvement in the demand from local buyers for course grains. A fair local trade is doing in flour. CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Jan. 11 were 1500 cattle, 1900 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 350 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1300 cattle, 1400 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 200 calves.

Altho the supply of cattle was somewhat larger than a week ago, a firmer feeling prevailed in the market. This was attributed to the increased demand from local butchers, packers and outside buyers, owing to the much colder weather and the fact that they were all short of beef. Consequently a good trade was done and the market was fairly active. Really choice steers were rather scarce, for which the demand was good, and sales of picked lots were made at $7 to $7.25, while a few odd loads changed hands at $6.75 to $6.85, and good cattle at $6.25 to $6.50 per 100 pounds. Choice butchers' cows were also in demand, and sales of full loads were made at $5.50, and picked lots at $5.75 to $6 per 100 pounds.

A feature of the small-meat trade was the strong undertone to the market for lambs, in spite of the fact that supplies were much larger than a week ago, and prices advanced 25c per 100 pounds. The demand was active, and sales were made at $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 pounds. One lot of 600 head was bought at $6.75 for shipment to Toronto. There was no change in sheep, with sales of ewes at $5 to $5.25 per 100 pounds. The trade in calves was fair at steady prices.

Hogs continue strong, and prices have scored a further advance of 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, which is due to the short supplies coming forward and the keen demand from packers. Sales of selected lots were made at $9.25 to $9.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $8.25; do., medium, $5 to $6, do., common, $4.50 to $4.75; canners, $2.75 to $3.25, butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.50 to $6; do., medium, $5 to $5.25, do., bulls, $4.50 to $5.50, milkers, choice, each, $80 to $95, do., common and medium, each, $70 to $80; springers, $55 to $65.

Sheep, ewes, $5 to $5.25; bucks and culls, $4.50 to $4.75. Lambs, $7.25 to $7.50.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.25 to $9.50.

Calves, $3 to $12.

Dramatic Detail.

Sir Henry Irving was accustomed to visit at the home of Miss Friswell, author of "In the Sixties and Seventies," in which volume appears the following anecdote: "My mother often used to point out little details that had been overlooked. I remember one in 'The Bells,' which my mother told Mr. Irving on the first night when he returned to our house to supper. People who have seen the play may remember that the first scene is a small inn and that there is supposed to have been a deep fall of snow. The innkeeper, Matthias (Irving) walked in on that first night in ordinary black boots, with no snow upon them. My mother spoke of it, and afterward Matthias wore high black boots and stood on the mat while the snow was brushed off. Remarks were made in the papers as to Mr. Irving's attention to the minutest details, and this was cited as an instance."

A man may not know at once when he is being laughed at, but if he has any sense, he soons finds it out.

"There!" the women say nearly every day, looking at the weather predictions in the almanac, "the almanac has missed it again."

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are "moving heaven and earth" in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100 and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALE DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who "never before wrote a line for publication."

SENIOR PETES WON FROM FRONTENACS BY 6-4 SCORE

Kingston, Jan. 14. — Peterborough won the senior O.H.A. game here night, defeating Frontenacs by 6 goals to 4. Half-time score was 4 to 2 in favor of Peterborough, who led all the way, playing better all around. Frontenacs lacked team work, and were not as speedy as they should have been. In the second half the score at one time was 4 to 3, but that was as close to Peterborough that the Frontenacs could get. The teams:

Referee—Harvey Sproule, Toronto.

DEBUC MAY QUIT BASEBALL

Detroit Club Would Make Cut in His Salary

Montreal Jan. 14. — Jean Debuc may quit baseball. Johnny is disgusted with the action of the Detroit management and unless they raise their offer to him or give him his release on reasonable terms, he will probably devote himself entirely to a business proposition which has been recently made to him, and which looks much more advantageous than playing baseball at the price at which they want him to play.

"Detroit intends cutting down my salary so much," he said, "that it would pay me almost better even without anything else to stick all the year round to my present business. I offered them fair terms for my release, and they refuse it. And naturally they have me for life. Talk about your slavery.

No I have a new business proposition before me, and if I can close that up to my satisfaction, it is unlikely that you will ever see me on the diamond again."
